MILK PRODUCTION AT RECORD LEVEL

Dairy farmers may be headed for an all-time record in milk-production, according to data realeased by the U. S. Department of Agriculture on output during the first quarter of 1950.

In January and February, combined production was 17.7 billion pounds, an increase of more than ½ billion pounds (4 per cent) over the corresponding two months of 1949.

Production For Year

Production through January and February was at an annual rate of about 123 billion pounds. Although the relative increase observed for January and Febroary may not prevail for the whole year, the substantial increase in the first quarter of the year suggests a strong likelihood that total milk production in 1950 will exceed by a noticeable margin the 119.1 billion pounds of 1949. It may even exceed the previous record output of 121.5 billion pounds established in 1945.

Contributing Factors

Farmers have achieved greater output of milk by increasing slightly the number of milk cows in their herds, by milking by a large proportion of their milk cows, and by maintaining a higher production per cow through concentrate feeding.

An additional factor tending to increase milk output per head is the fact that heavy culling and better breeding of the past several years has left improved producing stock in herds.

Increased Milk Production

By early March, spring pastures were helping to increase the total milk flow in the southern states. In the north, the relatively heavy rate of concentrate feeding was in part required to offset hay-shortages and the effects of cold weather. Output per cow in herds kept by crop reporters on March was higher than a year earlier in all regions of the country. The level on March 1, 1950 also exceeded the 10-year (1939-49) average by a substantial degree in all regions.

TIME, 2,4-D RIGHT IF USED IN SMALL GRAIN

Time to clean weeds out of small grain fields by using 2,4-D is when the grain is 6 to 10 inches high, well stooled out but before any heads appear, according to E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialis at Iowa State College.

Weeds such as smartweed, rag weed, lambsquarter, sunflower and mustard are then in a tender, fastgrowing stage most susceptible to 2,4-D, he points out. When 2,4-D is properly applied at this stage of growth, there is little chance of injuring the grain crop.

Farmers report increases in yield of 10 to 30 bushels of small grain per acre from knocking out the weeds. Grain harvested is better in quality also.

Dosages recommended are ½ pound of salt or amine forms of 2,4-D per acre or ¼ pound of the ester. Use minimum dosages and spray at low pressures so as not to endanger the oat crop.

If red clover has been seeded in the small grain, Sylwester says you can look for some injury. But enough of the clover will survive to make a good stand, if low gallonage applications are made at low pressures so that the material isn't forced down into the shorter crop of clover. If sweetclover or alfalfa is present, more damage to the legume can be expected. But if weeds are about to take over the crop, then the value of spraying is likely to outweigh the risk.

THE JOLLY WORKERS CLUB MET JUNE 14TH

The Jolly Workers Club met at the home of Mrs. Mildred Gruis on Wednesday, June 14. Eighteen members answered roll call by telling what we wish our children would never do.

It was decided that we all take some useful articles to Mrs. Anna Ausborn which she could take to the Lewis Neer family. We all brought some printed and plain print and worked on some quilt blocks which will be used to make a quilt top.

A nice lunch was served by the host, Mrs. Mildred Gruis and co-hostess, Mrs. Nettie Roths. The July meeting will be at the home of Wemkie Cavitt with Mrs. Anna Conners as co-hostess.

ELLINGTON EXPERTS MET AT PRINGNITZ HOME

The Ellington Experts had their regular meeting at the home of Beverly Pringnitz. Present at the meeting were 15 members and the leaders, Miss Evelyn Boman and Mrs. Arlo Johnson. The business meeting consisted of election of team demonstrators for the county achievement show. Senior girls elected were Janice Olson and Beverly Pringnitz, junior girls were Mary Lee Fosse and Yvonne Olson. Following this were several illustrated talks and a demonstration. A talk, "Finding a Color Scheme For Your Room" was given by Miss Evelyn Boman. Marian Nelson gave a talk entitled, "Do You Take Advantage of Your Opportunities." A demonstration "Make a Simple Pillow Top" was given by Janice Swanson. Reports about camp were given by Lorraine Juhl and Janice Swanson. A report on convention was given by Beverly Pringnitz. The next regular meeting will be held on July 8th at the home of Barbara Hughes.

FARM BOYS MORE LIKELY TO STAY IN COMMUNITY

Farm boys with a favorable attitude toward farming are most apt to stay in the home community in Iowa after they grow up, according to a survey by Joe Bohlen, sociologist at Iowa State College.

In 1948 he questioned 156 Hamilton County youths who were graduating from high school. They were asked questions about what they intended to do in the future, and why. Each year since then the sociologist checked on the same young folks to learn if they did what they had planned to do.

The survey shows that a higher precentage of farm boys than non-farm boys stayed in their home communities. In 1950, 30 of the 40 farm boys interviewed 2 years earlier had stayed on the farm and six of those 30 were farming land for themselves.

Farm girls in Hamilton Co. weren't as settled as their brothers, Bohlen's survey shows. The ratio indicates that about two girls left the community for every one that stayed, the percentage of nonfarm girls leaving in 1950 being slightly larger than for farm girls.

Bohlem says other studies indicate that over three-fourths of the youths who went to college never returned to their home communities. Eleven of the 57 who attended school beyoung high school dropped out by the end of the second year.

More girls than boys had married by 1950. Of the 156 interviewed in 1948, 32 girls and 6 boys had married by 1950.

CULL HEN WHEN BEAK AND LEGS TURN YELLOW

A good poultryman recognizes the yellow "stop" sign showing in the beaks and legs of his hens just as a good motorist observes an arterial highway stop sign, says W. R. Whitfield, extension poultryman at Iowa State College.

When yellow coloring appears in the beaks and legs of hens that's ample proof that the hens have quit laying. The pigment that ordinarily goes into egg yolks forms the yellow color in the beak and shanks of the non-producer.

Figuring the cost of feed per hen at around 20 cents each month, Whitfield says 50 non-layers in a 150-bird flock would cost the owner $10.00 a month. As hot weather moves in, more hens will quit laying, and the bill will run higher unless non-layers are culled.

The non-layer also is in better condition when culled and sold early. Later, when in molt, the non-producer will not dress out as attractively as when she has just quit laying. Selling culls early also heads off danger of loss through death of non-layers.

Hens are not bringing high prices now, but the price may drop lower as more low-quality birds go to market, Whitfield says.

Country roods are almost always sixty-six feet wide because that was the width of the original surveyor's chain.

Plan Given to Beat Inroads of Dread Disease—Makes All Doctor's Offices Cancer Finding Labs

By BILLY ROSE

Mr. Alfred S. Black
Hattiesburg, Mississippi

Dear Mr. Black:

A couple of months ago you dropped in to see me, and as the result of our meeting I wrote a column asking for suggestions on how to best spend the $2,000,000 left by your brother to the Black-Stevenson foundation to provide "preventive and remedial treatment for cancer sufferers."

And I was plenty happy when you phoned a week after the piece appeared and told me you had received 4,000 letters, many from outstanding medical men and research organizations.

Well, this is letter No. 4001, and if your patience and eyes can take it I'd like to outline a startlingly unspectacular plan which may save the lives of 50,000 cancer victims a year at a cost of less than $5 per life.

Billy Rose

The idea—and it's a simple one—was passed on to me by Dr. Harold T. Hyman of New York, the well-known physician whose four-volume "Integrated Practice of Medicine" has been called "the practitioner's bible" by Time magazine. But before I ease into Dr. Hyman's notion, let me give you some of the reasons behind it.

IN THIS WEALTHIEST of nations, where we have more doctors per capita than anywhere else, millions of people get periodic medical check-ups—but seldom are they checked for cancer until something begins to hurt. The reason, according to Dr. Hyman, is that these examinations seldom include a "survey" for cancer, even though this involves little more than a few probings and scrapings.

As I get it from Dr. Hyman, a person has a 50 per cent chance of licking cancer if it is spotted in its incipient stages and treated by a competent physician. But once the malignancy is far enough along to cause pain and the associated symptoms, the odds against killing the man-killer drop to 20 per cent.

Which, in my simple arithmetic, means that 30 out of every 100 cancer deaths can be prevented if we find a way to make every doctor's office in the country a cancer detection center.

Here's where Dr. Hyman's notion and your brother's money come in.

Why wouldn't it be a good idea for the Black-Stevenson foundation to compile all the latest knowledge on cancer diagnosis in one hefty volume and then, working through the various local medical societies, see to it that a copy of this volume, free of charge, reaches the desk of every family doctor in the country? And why wouldn't it be a logical extension of this idea to follow up the book with supplements whenever the research labs come up with a worth-while advance in test or technique?

IF THIS PROGRAM were backed up by an educational campaign to alert both doctors and public to the importance of nipping cancer before it buds, it is Dr. Hyman's estimate that each of our 100,000 general practitioners would spot at least one incipient case each year.

And since there's a 50-50 chance of curing cancer in its baby stages, it figures that some 50,000 lives could be saved annually—either by local medicos or by specialists and hospitals equipped to deal with the malady.

I know this is an undramatic notion, promising no miracles and requiring no glass-and-chromium skyscrapers. I also know it isn't new—clinics in New York and a few other cities have worked along these lines for years.

A campaign on a national scale, however, is something new, and it ought to appeal to you because it would give the fellow on RFD 1 the same chance to live out his three-score-and-ten as the chap on Central Park West.

I'm not suggesting, of course, that you tear up the 4,000 letters and put your entire $2,000,000 into this one venture. The plan which Dr. Hyman has outlined could be carried out for a tenth of that sum, leaving the bulk of your endowment for well-administered agencies and projects such as the Damon Runyon fund.

And by putting a couple of hundred thousand on the sure-shot of diagnosis rather than on the long-shot of research, you would be rendering the average Joe and his missus a service hardly anybody else is bothering about.

Sincerely,
Billy Rose

This Is Your Paper

You're Angry? Write a Letter

By William R. Nelson

NEWSPAPER subscribers who become angered at the paper have long used cancellation of their subscription as a means of showing their irritation. Such action is generally looked upon as being the same as stopping patronage of a store to show displeasure. But, is it the same?

The reader who cancels a newspaper subscription does not cancel telephone, gas, water or electric service to show displeasure with those services. Yet, the home town newspaper is, in many ways, comparable to utility services.

Subscription Is a Fraction

There is a notable difference between newspaper and other utility services. It is the individual subscriber's share of the cost. For all services except newspaper, the subscriber pays the full share of cost plus a profit or its equivalent.

The subscription price of the home town newspaper, however, is but a fraction of the actual cost of producing and delivering it to each subscriber.

Unlike other services, where the subscriber can somewhat control the cost through regulation of the amount used, neither the subscriber nor the publisher can regulate the amount of newspaper service to be rendered. Being a continuous recording of local history, the amount of newspaper space required is bound to fluctuate. To meet its obligation, yet keep the cost of its service so low all can afford it, is why the paper sells subscriptions below cost.

Cancelling a subscription to a newspaper, it seems obvious, is not the best way to show displeasure.

Letter Is Better

A better way is to write a letter to the paper. If your point of disagreement is a matter of general concern, and you authorize it, the paper will publish your letter. In that way you publicly chastise the paper and tell another side of the controversial matter.

Publication of matter critical of themselves is another of the unique characteristics of our newspapers. No other public or private institution or service is so willing and eager to publicize its own mistakes.

Subscribing to the home town newspaper should be looked upon as the same as subscribing to the other services available in the community. The price is small and actually below the cost. And, whatever the amount, it is a necessary item for complete enjoyment of life in the community.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Adolescent Girls Need to Conform

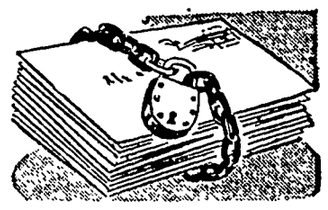
By Lawrence Gould

Should a girl of fourteen have "dates"?

Answer: Unless she has shown unusual signs of immaturity, she should have the same privileges as her schoolmates of her own age. Nothing gives a child a more acute sense of being unfairly treated than to have to live under a stricter discipline than her associates consider normal. A girl of fourteen is old enough to be beginning to be "interested in boys," and restrictions will be more apt to intensify this interest than to crush it. She will gratify it much more safely with her parents' sanction than if she is forced to hide it.

Is health only freedom from disease?

Answer: No, says Dr. G. Brock Chisholm, eminent psychiatrist and Director General of the World Health Organization. Health should mean "a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being." You're not truly healthy if you cannot enjoy life—and other people. And if you enjoy life, you will want to make the world a happier and healthier place for others by helping to wipe out, not only physical disease, but the "social maladies" like racial prejudice and international suspicion, on whose cure humanity's survival depends.



Are letters to this column "confidential"?

Answer: They could not be more so. No one ever sees them except myself and my trusted secretary, and they are destroyed as soon as they have been read and digested, with no record kept of the names or addresses of the writers. I wish I could answer them individually but this would leave no time for the writing of the column, and I will not use "form letters" in answering questions of which no two are exactly alike. Even in referring to a correspondent in the column, I change the details enough so that he cannot be identified.

WILLIAM PINE took his wife to a sneak preview of "The Lawless;" he and William Thomas, after making some sixty successful action pictures, had stuck their necks out and tackled one that was highly controversial. And for the first time Mrs. Pine said to him afterward,

WILLIAM PINE

"I like your picture!" Starring Macdonald Carey and Gail Russell, "The Lawless" deals with the minority problem in a small California city. The Johnston office recommended it to special United Nations consideration. Paramount executives wanted to scrap it at one point. It is honest and realistic, showing what might happen in any American town.

Johnny Bond, western singing star, has been signed to an exclusive, two-year radio contract by the World Broadcasting System. He will transcribe songs for the program service library, used by more than 700 radio stations.

Bob Garred has been heard in six movies in the past two months but hasn't been seen in one, which is how he wants it. Being photographed entails making up, endless rehearsals with others, and overtime work, he pointed out— "And I just don't have the time. My two news broadcasts a day make it impossible for me to do any acting." So he will remain a voice rolling from a loudspeaker.

Warner Bros' forthcoming "Fifty Years Before Our Eyes" features some of the rarest old film footage in the world, such as Prince Hirohito's chat with Lloyd George before World War I, and the first movies of Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini.

Patrice Wymore, known in New York as a dancer and singer, reported for her role in "Tea for Two" wearing the finest white slacks suit money could buy, with a white cap on her red hair. Even on the Warner Bros. lot she stood out. But two minutes later deflation of the spirit had set in. Director David Butler took one look, and asked if she were going to work on a parking lot between pictures.

When James Cagney and his "Kiss Tomorrow Goodbye" troupe made some scenes at a Glendale supermarket two elderly matrons were spotted among the extra players. They explained that they slipped in to get just one close look at Mr. Cagney.

THE FICTION CORNER

HE SPOKE HIS PIECE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

WITHOUT REALIZING it Armine had been watching the young man with the black hair and blue eyes. She admitted to herself that he was good looking. Also, he wore his evening clothes with just the right degree of casualness; his face was pleasant and guileless. Dangerous, she thought. The type of man who couldn't be trusted. Deceptive. Like Loring Brookes. Mere thought of Loring gave her a funny little pang.

And then the young man with the blue eyes and black hair started toward her. He weaved his way in among the dancers and tapped Seaver Clark on the shoulder. "Mind if I cut in?" he asked.

"Hope you don't mind? Believe me it took courage."

"Did it?" said Armine coldly. "Am I to feel flattered?"

He grinned broadly. "Sorry. I'll quit if you say so?"

"And leave me stranded in the middle of the floor?"

"Well, then, when the music stops." But when the music stopped they weren't on the floor at all. They were out on the terrace, looking up at the moon, and Armine was saying, "I do wish you'd take me back. I'm cold."

"You can't be cold. It's a warm night. Besides, if you start to go back alone I'll grab your arm. And that will make a scene."

She looked at him angrily, but he only grinned. "I've half a mind to do it. It might teach you a lesson."

"It probably would," he admitted. "But please don't. You see, I've been watching you all evening and planning this campaign—bringing you out here, I mean."

"The idea!" Armine tossed her head. "Well, you can bring me right back again."

"Not until I say what I have to say."

SUDDENLY HE sobered. "That's the trouble with you — you're never willing to give a fellow a chance. You take him at his face value and let it go at that. It's not fair."

What! Certainly you can't be serious. If this is some sort of joke, it's a poor one. Please take me back!"

"Wait." He gripped her arm. His face was tense. "You've got to hear me. I know it all sounds crazy. But it isn't. Last year, when I went away in such a hurry it was because my brother had been hurt in a football game. I wrote you the day after I arrived in California. Air mail. It wasn't till a month later that I learned the plane crashed and burned. Then I knew it was too late. I came on east, bringing my brother along with me. He got well—"

He broke off. She was staring at him in amazement. He gestured helplessly. "I tried to look you up, but you'd gone south for the winter. And then in the spring the university sent me up to Canada to do some research work. I got back a week ago, learned you were in town and came here tonight, hoping to see you. I . . ."

He turned away, got half-way to the door when she called. "Loring!" He swung back, and she came up to him. "Was . . . Robert Brookes . . . your brother?"

"Yes. How did you know?"

"I didn't know. But I read about him in the papers. And I read about the crash of the plane, too . . . Oh, Loring, what a stupid little fool I've been!"

She was in his arms, sobbing hysterically. Loring held her tight; presently tilted her chin and kissed her mouth. "Darling! I . . . I hate to think of what might have happened if you had objected to coming out on the terrace."

"Objected? Why, my precious, . . . if . . . if you hadn't brought me out I would have died!"

THE FACT THAT THERE ARE 12 PERSONS IN A JURY BOX IS BASED ON SCRIPTURAL PRECEDENT: SINCE THERE WERE 12 PROPHETS TO FORETELL THE TRUTH AND 12 APOSTLES TO PREACH THE TRUTH, SURELY THERE OUGHT TO BE 12 JURYMEN TO SEEK AND JUDGE THE TRUTH.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Treatment of Simple Diarrhea

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHEN AN ATTACK of diarrhea occurs, the first thought is usually to try to stop it before the individual becomes exhausted and loses too much fluid from his blood and tissues. What we forget is that something is present in the intestine that is causing the diarrhea, with its great increase in water from the lower bowel. This increase in water formed in large intestine, is nature's method of washing out the substance causing the irritation and for this reason a powerful drug should not be used to stop the diarrhea and thus leave the irritating substance present in the bowel.

As youngsters at home we were told that in an attack of diarrhea we were to eat no food for several hours, or skip one or two meals. This was good, but only half the treatment. As medical students we were taught to advise, or take, a good dose of Epsom salts which would carry away the irritating substance, and then use two or three doses of bismuth subnitrate to "dry up" the intestine once the irritating substance had been removed.

It is interesting to learn the method now used in simple diarrhea (not the severe type called dysentery), as described by Dr. Jackson Eto in "The Journal of the Missouri Medical Association." The suggestion for treatment of simple diarrhea in children is: (1) A short period of starvation: (2) ample liquids, by mouth if the patient can retain them without vomiting, under the skin if not; (3) absorbents such as kaolin or barium sulfate, which not only absorb the liquids but "sweep out" the bowel of all mucous and wastes as they pass through it.

Remember, this mild treatment—starvation, plenty of liquids and clay-like substances — is used in cases of simple diarrhea with no harmful organisms present. Dr. Eto points out that for severe infection of the bowel (dysentery), streptomycin, potassium salts injected into a vein, and stay in hospital is the treatment necessary for a cure.

A's Pennant Hope Is Thrown Away

By GRANTLAND RICE

CONNIE MACK picked up his first pennant in 1902, just 48 years ago. He won his last flag in 1931, and 1950 was his dream year for his 10th pennant.

Grantland Rice

It was a dream that so far has been shot full of holes. Except for rabid home-town team rooters almost everyone was pulling for the tall and stately Mr. Mack to win this 10th flag and so pull up even with his ancient rival, John McGraw.

As the new season broke open there was an outside chance, a rather shadowy one, that Connie and his Athletics might just make it.

It had to be an outside chance with the Yankees, Red Sox, Tigers and Indians rated ahead of him. But he had a pretty good outfield, he had strengthened his infield with $100,000 Dilinger and he seemed to have one of the best pitching staffs in baseball with Brissie, Coleman, Kellner, Scheib, Fowler, Hooper and other strong men on hand.

This pitching staff might do it at good odds. The Athletics looked as good as any of the others in the spring.

And then somebody jerked the rug from under Mr. Mack's feet. His team finished the first six weeks of the season batting .270, well up with the leaders. It fielded well enough. But practically every pitching arm in camp, right and left, collapsed. Bob Hooper, his Buffalo rookie, was about his best bet. Kellner was away slowly.

In place of winning a pennant after such a ragged start Mr. Mack's main objective now is the first division. To reach this restful spot he has to beat out one team from the Yankees, Red Sox, Tigers or Indians. These look to be the four strongest teams in the league at this moment.

So Mr. Mack's dream of another pennant for his 50th A.L. season doesn't look any too healthy. His Athletics needed a fast start back of a sound pitching staff. It has been 19 years since his Athletics made it three in a row with the brilliant Cochrane catching Grove and Earnshaw, with Al Simmons and others batting in runs.

There is no Lefty Grove hovering around today, winning 31 games and dropping only four. It is all a rather tough break for a veteran who has given so much to baseball for so long a time. He is almost certain, however, to move well forward when warm weather bakes out sore pitching arms and gives him at least a working staff.

The Greatest Team

The venerable Mr. Mack has two teams to contribute to the all-time argument of which are baseball's greatest teams. His two contributions are the Athletics of 1910-1914 and the Athletics of 1929, 1930, 1931

The other two selections belong to the Chicago Cubs of 1906-1910 and several Yankee outfits.

The first great Athletic squad won four pennants and three world series in five years. The second won three pennants in a row and two world series.

The main strength of Connie's earlier teams was his pitchers—Bender, Coombs and Plank—plus a brilliant infield, with McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker. Grove, Cochrane and Simmons were his three top stars in the 1929-1931 group.

The Yankee delegation of 1927-1928 was the most overpowering collection baseball has known on the attacking side. They had Ruth and Gehrig—for two things. They had Earle Combs, another star. They had Bob Meusel. They had Pennock. They had plenty.

The Yankees and Athletics have had the two best separate and distinct squads baseball has known.

Mr. Mack banked on brilliant pitching—Grove, Waddell, Pennock, Plank, Bender, Bush and Coombs—among others.

The Yankees relied largely on Ruth-Gehrig power, although they had their share of other important matters.

What Is Timing?

Stan Musial has said severa times that the main idea in batting is timing.

What we are now trying to locate is what timing actually is.

Bobby Jones had timing tamed completely. Bob was a slow, even-paced swinger. Sammy Snead is a faster swinger. He is also a master of timing. Ted Williams, who waits until the final split second to start his swing, is among the finest of all timers.

I saw one fine example of how timing can be measured. In this scientific device, a golf ball was placed on a tee. Just back of the ball at six-inch intervals there were slender uprights through which the club head had to travel to reach the ball. As the club head passed through each the time was measured by some hidden instrument.

Mighty Mite

The repulsive looking fellow in the accompanying drawing is a chigger, or technically, a mite—member of the family of mites, spiders, ticks and scorpions—which causes sportsmen in the south and midwest more discomfort than another insect or animal. He is a juvenile delinquent, a newly-hatched baby or larval stage of the common, bright red, spider-like mite often seen in early spring in gardens and fields.

The best way to get "loaded" with chiggers is to sit or lie down in areas where they abound. But, one can usually gets sufficiently infested while walking along a stream looking for that good bass hole.

But getting down to the purpose of this item, to protect yourself when out on a camping trip this summer, treat the ankles, calves, stockings, and trouser legs with a recommended insect repellent or a few pinches of ordinary sulphur. This is, however, only temporary protection. After a fishing trip a shower or bath with soap and water will help reduce severity of attack.

A number of houshold items will help relieve chigger bites, including ammonia, a weak solution of lysol, rubbing alcohol, camphor, vaseline, chloroform, iodine, or fingernail polish. These materials will also kill the chigger.

A Noble Try

Back in 1879 Missouri's first fish commission made a noble experiment in restocking the state's streams with fish. Although it failed, the experiment has been called the first sincere attempt to restock midwest streams.

The commission's first act was to establish a fish hatchery where speckled trout and such exotic species as California salmon, Atlantic white shad and German carp were hatched.

The California salmon and white shad are migratory species which live in the ocean except during early spring when they move up fresh-water rivers and streams to spawn. It was believed that these species, released in Missouri, would go to the Gulf then return each spring to spawn.

Some 200,000 salmon fry were released in several Ozark streams by the commission. Five years after the first release, the commissioners wrote: "We have placed California salmon in our waters for five successive years. No adult salmon has yet been captured on his return into our streams. There is no reason yet to be discouraged, as those fish cannot reach maturity in less time."

Time moved on and as yet no one has reported catching a matured salmon. But it was a noble try.

Perhaps the most colorful of the early operations was the rearing of German carp, such as practiced in the old countries. The commissioners had in their employ an "expert carp culturist" from Germany. Landowners were encouraged to propogate carp in ponds, and a booklet was printed explaining the art and offering hints on best methods of cooking the fish such as "carp boiled in beer" and "carp cooked in wine."

The commissioners were really sold on the idea. "We are assured," they wrote, "that the carp can be raised on the farm with as much certainty and economy as pigs and poultry."

By 1888, some 4,800 ponds had been stocked and over a half-million carp had been released in streams and public waters.

Though the carp idea went off with a bang it lacked lasting qualities. A few years later the commissioners agreed "we are of the opinion that we have fish of a better quality among our native fish in Missouri."

Regardless of their lack of success, the early commissioners did gain—an insight toward the needs for protecting and restoring wildlife. It was a noble try.

Quail Population

Declining bobwhite population has caused much concern to sportsmen throughout the broad range of this popular bird. Except in a few localities, quail numbers have declined in spite of reduced bag limits and curtailed seasons.

Conservation officials report, however, the bird population will begin to increase as the soil conservation program expands. The program will increase feeding grounds and cover.

HANCOCK COUNTY DAIRY EMPRESS—Miss Janice Olson, Garner, was crowned dairy empress of Hancock county at the Britt athletic field Friday night. She was crowned by Theodore N. the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Another story of a bunch of the boys who made the public highways their private playground. This one has an element of slapstick comedy about it except that the big joke involved was about as funny as plastic surgery.

Three young men were riding motorcycles down an Iowa highway one dark night a few years back when a little game of skill and daring developed among them. Two of the men would ride abreast and three or four feet apart while the third would speed on ahead, usually out of sight around a curve or over a hill.

Then the third man would turn around, come blistering back on the wrong side of the road and speed between the two motorcyles, guided by the headlights. So the game went. It gave the player the daring illusion that he was going head-on into an automobile.

And then along came a bus. Going in the same direcion, it passed the two motorcyles while the third rider was far up ahead over a hill, making his turn to come back.

He came up over that hill just as the bus was climbing the other side, fortunately slowed by the grade. Spying the wide-spaced headlights coming at him, the motorcyclist drove blithly between them and the little highway game had to be called on account of darkness.

The really incredible thing about this accident is that the man was not killed, though doctors worked for months to repair his features.

NORTH ELEVATOR UNDERGOING FURTHER REPAIR FOR COOP.

The north elevator, which is owned by the Klemme Cooperative Grain Company, is undergoing a "face lifting."

Last year the south section, or second elevator, was revamped and put into new condition. Now there is a crew at work repairing the south annex. A new foundation has been put in; the old siding torn off, a new roof put on and aluminum siding will replace the old wood siding.

When t' is repair job is finished the north elevator plant will be in good condition for a number of years to come.

Manager Marvin Lemke states that beginning next year, their main elevator on Main Street will undergo needed repair.

DUSTY FLOORS BAD FOR HOGS DURING SUMMER

Dirt floors in hog houses and dust in the shade cause wheezing and coughing in hogs during dry summer months, in the opinion of E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at Iowa State College.

Dusty conditions surrounding hogs will often cause them to cough violently which may end with a case of pneumonia. Even if pneumonia doesn't occur, pigs will not do as well if they are troubled with coughing.

Some good hog men remedy the problem by bedding houses with whole corncobs, Quaife says. This not only settles the dust but it also makes a cool bed for hogs. Sprinkling with oil in shady spots helps to hold down coughing but the use of cobs in the houses is still better according to the specialist.

Draft Facts !!

Washington, — Highlights of the draft law which President Truman put into operation Friday.

Any male, with certain exceptions, who have reached his 19th birthday and has not yet reached his 26th, can be ordered into uniform and kept in service for 21 months.

Any member of the National Guard or the reserves can be called into active service for the same length of time.

The 1948 draft law did not permit the activation of reserves and National Guardsmen, but congress gave that power to the president when it recently extended the law until July 9, 1951,

Every male must register with his local draft board as soon as he becomes 18. He can't be drafted for a year after that.

Exempted groups include ministers and ministerial students, aliens who have not applied for citizenship, mentally, morally or physically unfit persons, state and federal judges, congressmen and members of state legislatures, and other officials elected by statewide vote, conscientious objectors, sole surviving sons of families who already have lost a member in military service, and war veterans who served at least 90 days between Dec. 7, 1941, and Sept. 12, 1945, or at least 12 months between Sept. 16, 1940, and June 24, 1948.

Local draft boards may grant deferments to men who have dependents or who are engaged in essential work, but these deferments can be revolked.

DON'T RUSH STOCK ONTO SUDAN GRASS

Should Be 18 Inches High Before Using It

Let sudan grass for supplemental summer pasture get to be about 18 inches high before turning in livestock, advises R. E. Krenzin, extension agronomist at Iowa State College.

Sundan grass sown during corn planting will be about 8 weeks old when it reaches that height.

Successful pasture from the crop depends largely on good management. Agronomists agree that sudan is succulent, nutritious and perfectly safe if it isn't grazed before the 18-inch height. Even then it may be safe, but there is more danger and it won't produce as much feed when it's grazed short.

Rotate Fields

A common practice among some farmers is to rotate sudan grass pasturing. Two fields are planted about 2 weeks apart. The early plot is grazed down after it reaches 18 inches. Then the livestock is turned onto the late planting while the first field grows up again. These farmers have found this practice safe and productive, and they aren't pasturing short, stunted grass that may be suffering from lack of moisture or lack of fertility which can cause prussic acid poisoning. When frost comes, all cattle are taken out of the pasture because sudan grass can be dangerous then.

It makes good hay and silage too, Krenzin points out. In a soybean-sudan grass mixture the hay will have the highest nutrient content if it's cut when the bean pods are half filled.

OBITUARY OF MARY KRISTINE HANSEN

MARY KRISTINE HANSEN was born April 17th, 1877 in Adense, Denmark, the first of eight children born to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Niels Steffensen.

She was baptized in the Lutheran Church and in due time became a member by confirmation and thru-out her lifetime maintained this membership in the Luthern Church,

She attended the village school at Adense until she was eleven years of age, after which because of the death of her father, who was the village miller, it was necessary for her to work out and make her own way. For twelve years she worked as a dairy maid on the Danish farms near her home town.

In March, 1900, she boldly spent her meager savings for passage on a ship to America.

And here at the age of 23, in December 1900, Mary Kristine Steffensen met and married Carl Hansen at Hampton, Iowa. Carl was a farm hand at the time, and Mary was working as a nurse for Doctor Powers. They both continued at these jobs for about ten years, after which Carl Hansen took up railroading, and they lived successively at Coulter, Thornton and Clarion.

From 1914 to 1926 they operated a farm as tenants, after which they movd to Thornton where Carl Hansen operated a shoe repair shop for many years. In December 1947, Carl and Mary Hansen moved to Klemme in retirement.

And thus, for nearly fifty years, they maintained a modest, well kept, hospitable home. Not only were friends and neighbors always welcome, but, from time to time babies were welcome and cherished as well. Seven children were born to this union, five of whom survive.

Thru-out her lifetime, Mary Hansen was an intelligent, capable and willing worker, and all who knew her respected her talents and loved her warm personality.

She died Sunday evening, July 9th, 1950 at the age of 73 years.

She is survived by her husband, Carl Hansen, and five children:

Ole of Forest City, Iowa
Oage of Thornton, Iowa
Alvin of LaCross, Wisconsin
Harry of Rockwell, Iowa
Oda of Klemme, Iowa.

Also eight grandchildren, and one sister in Denmark.

GRAHL GETS ORDERS TO RESTORE BOARDS

Des Moines—Brig. Gen. Charles H. Grahl, Iowa selective service director says he has received orders to restore the Iowa local draft board system to the 1949 level.

The order, received late Friday, made no mention of calling up any Iowa registrants. The state has about 20,000 young men available now for immediate induction. However, if the nation should decide to call up 650,000 men, Iowa's share would be about 11,000, it is estimated.

Woman Sufferage

Dennis Morgan, screen star, tells the story about a swank club for men. One evening a dignified member walked in and was shocked to see women there for the first time.

"What happened?" he asked the club owner.

"We've decided to allow members to bring their wives in for dinner and dancing once a month," was the reply.

"But that's not fair," complained the member. "I'm not married. Will I be permitted to bring my girl friend?"

The owner thought for a minute and slowly replied: "I think it might be all right, provided she's the wife of a member!"

SIGNING OFF

In seventeenth century England, the people were so interested in what well-known individuals said shortly before they died that it was virtually a duty of the family of the deceased to publish such statements. Thus, when Richard Baxter, a famous English divine, lost his wife in 1681, he published "The Last Words of Mrs. Baxter." As it had a tremendous sale, the printer decided to cash in on the demand for the late lady's death-bed utterances, and he composed and published "More Last Words of Mrs. Baxter." But the minister soon killed its sale with a handbill which simply read, "Mrs. Baxter did not say anything else!"

Three Worst Things

A woman was vociferously heckling Aneurin Bevan during England's recent election campaign. The British minister of health stared at her and remarked, "A priest once said that the three worst things in life are a false friend, meat cooked twice and a cackling woman."

In The Flower Bed?

Frankie caught his cold sleeping next to an open window.

It wouldn't have done any good. He was on the outside of the house.

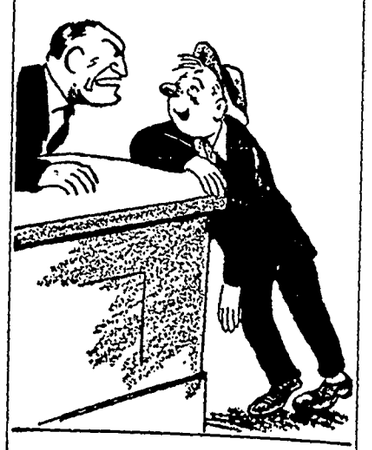
Purple with Wrath

Shopper—"I was to have met my husband here an hour ago. Have you seen him?"

Floorwalker—"Possibly, madam. What characteristic would serve to distinguish him?"

Shopper (lamely) — "Well, he probably is purple by now."

WHAT'S YOURS?



"You were brought in here for drinking," lectured the police sergeant.

"Thash mighty fine, Serg," replied the culprit. "Let's get started."

Can't Even Fight in Peace

Two men were brought before a judge for fighting in the street.

Couldn't this case be settled out of court?" asked the judge.

"That's what we were doing," answered one of the combatants, "when the cop pinched us."

BEFORE SWINE?

There was an occasion in the Yale law school class of William Howard Taft when he became annoyed because the class began to fidget and whisper a few minutes before the bell rang.

"Just a minute, gentlemen," he said. "I have a few more pearls to cast."

French oven toast is an excellent, appetizing way to use left-over slices of enriched bread. Dip the slices into a mixture of milk, sugar and egg to which a bit of almond extract has been added for flavor interest. Then place them on a well-greased cookie sheet and brown in a hot oven (450°). Turn the toast and brown on both sides. You'll find that French oven toast is delicious served with honey butter or maple syrup.

French Toasted Donuts

Next time the family suggests French toast, treat them to this delicious surprise. Slice donuts crosswise and dip them quickly into a regular French Toast batter that has been spiced with cinnamon. Fry as you would French Toast and serve with hot maple syrup.

Cake icing may be made by placing a plain chocolate candy bar on a cake while it is still hot. The heat of the cake melts the chocolate

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Wife-Dependency Shows Immaturity

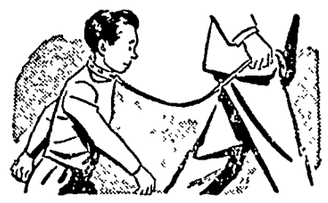
By Lawrence Gould

Can a man stand being "his wife's husband"?

Answer: Yes, if he is very im- ature— or exceptionally mature. man who is so childish emo- nally that he prefers putting the sponsibility for his life on his e's shoulders, even at the cost having nothing much to say out it, may be content to be own only as a famous or suc- ssful woman's husband; and so y a man so sure of the im- tance of his own work that he es not care if nobody else rec- nizes it. But the average male's ecure self-esteem demands that eryone shall realize that he ears the trousers."

o you "own" your children?

nswer: Not in the absolute se in which parents once did. r instance, the law, which once owed a father to kill his child he wished to, now forbids your ating a child with excessive elty, working him beyond his ength, or letting him grow up thout an education. It may even take your children from you if you are declared unfit to rear them. And you cannot own them psychologically, either. You can give them a chance to develop or largely deprive them of it, but you can't prevent their being themselves and not copies of you.



Are only children likelier to be delinquent?

Answer: No, reports Dr. William W. Wattenberg, Wayne University (Detroit) psychologist. Study of the records of 2000 juvenile offenders shows that only children are but half as likely to become delinquent as children with brothers or sisters. But—also contrary to the general impression—the only child is as apt as any other to become a member of a neighborhood "gang." While the causes of delinquency are complex, only children are less often victims of the most important of them—the feeling of being unloved and neglected.

A short time ago I wrote that the fact that infected teeth caused rheumatism was thought to have been discovered about 30 years ago, but about 100 years ago, Dr. Benjamin Rush, after whom Rush medical college is named, reported a case of rheumatism of the hip joint following the extraction of infected teeth.

Remember, rheumatism is only one of the conditions or diseases caused by infected teeth and tonsils. Some years ago it was found that inflammation of the nerves, the lining of the heart and kidneys, the eyes, were often caused by infected teeth. Anemia, thin blood, tiredness are other ailments often caused by infected teeth.

Don't wait to have any of the above conditions occur. The X-ray tells the story. Get rid of your infected teeth before trouble starts.

But HADACOL has done me more good than anything I have tried. My mother lives in Mobile, Alabama, and sent it to me. I don't think there's anything better than HADACOL, and if there is you can have it." (A very thoughtful mother to send her son HADACOL. Why don't you send a bottle to a relative with this trouble?)

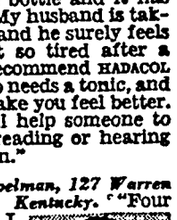
Alex J. Anderson, Route No. 1, Carysville, Florida, a very bright youngster. "I am ten years old. I've always been puny. I never have eaten or played like my brothers. I've been taking HADACOL for a while, now feel better, play more and like to go to school. HADACOL is really a good medicine." (Just leave it to the youngsters to find out what's good for them!)

Mr. Clifton Crum, 511 West Commerce Street, Greenville, Alabama. "I am taking my third bottle of HADACOL and it has done more for me than any other medicine. I was awfully weak and nervous and run-down. I would have weak nervous spells and I had no appetite for food. So I heard different people praising HADACOL over the radio. My wife wanted me to give it a trial and I sure am glad I did. My back would hurt me so with neuritis pains till I couldn't sleep at night but that is all in the past. My backache is gone now and I am feeling good so I am going to continue taking HADACOL. I am 35 years old, employed by Greenville Ice and Coal Co., Greenville, Ala. I hope everybody that needs medicine will try HADACOL. I just can't praise it enough as it seems to be just the medicine I needed.

Mrs. Ophelia Jefferson of Gulfport, Mississippi. "I'd been suffering from neuritis pains and aches and was advised to have my teeth extracted, but received no relief. I'm now on my seventh bottle of HADACOL and it's given me entire relief from the aches and pains. I'm able now to do a full day's work. The makers of such a marvelous remedy should certainly be praised."

Mr. Robert C. Stuart, Barter Inn, Abingdon, Virginia. "I am working in the capacity of Health Inspector for the State of Virginia and have for the past two years suffered heartburn and a form of stomach distress. I have had no appetite and have tried various medicines spending many hundreds of dollars for treatment and aid. I have not found any relief in anything or any treatment until I tried your remarkable HADACOL, which I praise with the highest regard. Now I eat three large meals a day without any pains or discomfort. I have gained 15 lbs. since the 15th of December—never felt better in all my life. I am now taking an active part in civic and extra curricular activities which I had to ignore since last December. I have worked zealously. Thanks to your remarkable HADACOL."

Mr. Alidore Kramer of Marrero, Louisiana. "I want you to know how your wonderful HADACOL helped me. I suffered so from neuritis pains and aches, I hurt so, and I could hardly use my right hand. I even had my teeth out but got no help. I started to get HADACOL. Now I sing while I plow my fields. I'm so happy. I'll never be without HADACOL. I take it every day." (That's the spirit—isn't it great to have that wonderful HADACOL feeling? Why don't you try it?)



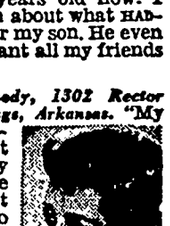
Mrs. Virgie Finley, Route No. 1, Monterey, Tennessee. "I was weak and run-down so that I could hardly sleep any, and was so nervous I could hardly do my housework. My stomach had so much gas on it that everything I ate seemed to hurt me. I had tried all kinds of medicine and nothing seemed to help me. I started taking HADACOL a few weeks ago and believe me it surely has helped me. Now I can eat anything and am sleeping well at night. I cannot praise HADACOL enough and I have taken only 4 bottles." (Mrs. Finley is a wise woman. She knows continued use of HADACOL prevents such distress from returning.)

Mrs. John R. Grizzle, Jr., 4903 B. Chaparral, Dallas, Texas. "I'm writing you to let you know just what HADACOL has done for me. I was feeling bad—nervous, had headaches, lost my appetite—so my mother advised me to get HADACOL and try it. My baby is only 2½ months old and it sure has helped me. I've taken only one bottle and it has done wonders. My husband is taking it now too, and he surely feels better, and not so tired after a day's work. I recommend HADACOL to everyone who needs a tonic, and it surely will make you feel better. I hope this will help someone to feel better by reading or hearing this information."

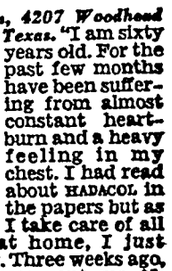
Mr. John Krumpelman, 127 Warren St., Lexington, Kentucky. "Four months ago I was suffering from lack of energy; no get up and go at all. I also had a lack of appetite and great irritability. Then my friends recommended HADACOL, and in a very short time my appetite began to go back to normal and it seemed as though a miracle had happened because everything was once again very bright."

Mrs. George F. Tuff of Poplar Bluff, Missouri. "I am 57 years old and I have started on the third bottle of HADACOL. I never have taken a medicine that helped me like HADACOL. I don't have neuritis aches or pains since I took the first bottle. I was so nervous, I had pains in my back, legs and arms till I couldn't work. Now I feel good and go all the time to work." (HADACOL gives such wonderful results because it treats the cause of such deficiencies.)

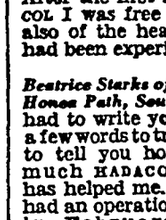
Mrs. Helen Barron of Meansville, Georgia. "My little boy had been sick for quite some time. Until I heard about HADACOL over the radio, he was weak, run-down, and apt to catch anything — he couldn't run and play like other boys did, and he wouldn't eat anything. So I can't praise HADACOL enough. He has taken 4 bottles and eats anything, and sleeps good, isn't tired when he gets up, runs and plays as much as anyone, has gained weight, and feels good. I have taken some myself. He is 11 years old now. I can't tell enough about what HADACOL has done for my son. He even looks better. I want all my friends to try HADACOL."



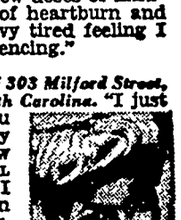
Mrs. Tom Kennedy, 1302 Rector Street, Hot Springs, Arkansas. "My trouble was terrible pains right after I ate my meals. I have tried pills but they didn't do any good, so I thought I would try HADACOL. After the first bottle of HADACOL, I got relief, so I wouldn't be without HADACOL. I have already told all my neighbors about HADACOL, how good it is. They are also taking it. I am 49 years old and I sure do feel a lot better, thanks to HADACOL." (What a wise woman Mrs. Kennedy is. She realizes continued use of HADACOL helps prevent such stomach misery from returning.)



Mr. Harry W. Smith, 10 North Water Street, Harrisburg, Illinois. "I am 41 years old, and I work at a Strip Mine. I have been bothered with aches and pains of neuritis and feel sleepy all the time, but my wife heard your broadcast on the radio about HADACOL. So I bought a trial size and it has helped me so wonderfully that I buy the large family size now. I can't begin to describe how I would feel if I couldn't buy it at all. I want everybody who feels bad to know about it."



Mrs. L. L. Martin, 4207 Woodhead Street, Houston 6, Texas. "I am sixty years old. For the past few months have been suffering from almost constant heartburn and a heavy feeling in my chest. I had read about HADACOL in the papers but as I take care of all the expenses at home, I just couldn't buy any. Three weeks ago, my son in Kansas sent me $5, telling me it was not for groceries but to please buy something for myself with it. I bought four bottles of HADACOL at $1.25 a bottle. After the first few doses of HADACOL I was free of heartburn and also of the heavy tired feeling I had been experiencing."



Beatrice Starks of 303 Milford Street, Honea Path, South Carolina. "I just had to write you a few words to try to tell you how much HADACOL has helped me. I had an operation in February. Then I started washing too soon, took neuritis in my hands and arms and after that couldn't do anything. I heard about HADACOL, decided to try it and I'm sure glad I did. My indigestion was so bad I couldn't eat anything I liked but now I can eat what I want. My hands don't hurt or my hips as they did before I started using HADACOL. Please keep hollering it out so others will hear about it."

BEST TO MARKET CHICKS NOW IF EARLY HATCHED

Now's the time to market chicks hatched in late February and March, says H. E. Bayles, Iowa State College extension poultryman.

He lists five factors that favor early marketing. First the price is generally better in the early part of the season. Declines usually continue throughout the summer. For best all-around results, market February and March chicks when they weigh 3 to 3½ pounds and are 10 to 12 weeks old. Bayles thinks that too many birds often are kept on Iowa farms past these weights.

Secondly the most economical gains are made early, when the chicks are growing rapidly. It takes about 3 to 4 pounds of feed to produce a pound of gain in chickens up to 12 weeks of age, while 5 to 6 pounds of feed are required for each pound of gain thereafter. With feed representing close to 60 percent of the total expense in raising chickens, Bayles thinks it's economically unsound to hold February and March birds longer, unless there is a prospect of an appreciable price advance.

The third reason for marketing now is to save labor. There is much early summer work on the farm and it should be used where it's most profitable. Not only do chickens marketed on time bring higher returns, but once they're out of the way, more time can be spent on pressing seasonal work.

The other factors that need to be considered for marketing now are the prevention of disease and securing of additional space for pullets. Bayles explains that many producers in past years have held birds a few extra weeks only to see a serious outbreak of disease wipe out all hope of profit. And producers who don't use a range shelter may need to market early to relieve overcrowded conditions in the brooder house and give pullets an opportunity to mature rapidly and normally.

FORMER KLEMME GIRL WEDS DENVER MAN

Exchange Vows At The Little Brown Church, Nashua

Miss Marian Kastler, daughter of Mrs. Maxine Kastler of Klemme, became the bride of Verne E. Batcheller, son of Mrs. George Batcheller of Denver, Colorado and Guy W. Botcheller of Colfax, on Sunday, June 18th, at 4:30 o'clock at the Little Brown Church near Nashua with the Rev. F. L. Hanscom officiating at the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Hanscom presided at the organ with a prelude of nuptial music and the traditional wedding marches.

The bride, who was escorted to the altar by her uncle, Donald Wickline, Webster City, wore a white slipper satin ankle length dress, with long sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. She wore a corsage of red roses. The shoulder length veil was held by a tiny band of white satin and white peonies. Her only jewelry was a diamond choker necklace and matching earrings, a gift from the bridegroom.

Mrs. Curtis Olson, Webster City, maid of honor, wore a yellow sheer street length dress with white accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

The bridegroom and his attendant, Curtis Olson, of Webster City, wore boutonniers of white carnation.

The mother of the bride, wore a sheer bemberg dress, with white accessories. She had a corsage of pink and white carnations.

Mrs. Donald Wickline, aunt of the bride was attired in a two piece navy and white suit dress, with navy assessories. Hre corsage was of white carnations.

Following the ceremony, a wedding supper was served to the bridal party at the Hanford Hotel in Mason City. A Wedding cake, topped with a miniture bride and groom, and the use of the bride's colors, blue and white completed the setting.

The bride is a 1950 graduate of the Webster City high school and was employed by the Hamilton Co. Production Marketing Ass'n. She attended the Klemme high school her first two years, finishing from Lincoln High, at Webster City June 2nd.

After a short wedding trip, the couple will be at home in Mitchellville.

A prenuptial shower was given in honor of the bride at the home of her mother on Thursday, June 15th. Friends and relatives attended from Webster City, Britt, Wesley, Garner, Ventura, Klemme, Kanawha, Charles City and Woolstock.

A post nuptial shower was given in honor of the bride at the Methodist Church parlors in Woolstock on Friday, July 7th.

WHITEWASH DAIRY BARN BEFORE USING LINDANE

Whitewash and residual fly sprays in the dairy barn should be applied at different times and not mixed, according to Earle Raun, extension entomologist at Iowa State College. He advises putting the whitewash on first and then applying lindane for fly control about 2 weeks later. Two jobs can be done at once by mixing whitewash and lindane, but half of the fly-killer will be wasted and it will not give effective control.

To prepare the barn or other buildings for spraying, Raun says the first step is to clean them up. The cobwebs, chaff and other material which clings to the ceiling and walls needs to be cleaned off. If a farmer has high pressure spraying equipment available, the entomologist says this can be used for cleaning by blasting the material down with plain water.

It's a good idea to cover the drinking cups and mangers in a barn before spraying so the chemicals won't get on them. Also, don't spray the chemicals onto feed.

For the dairy barn and other milk handling buildings, Raun suggests using lindane or methoxychlor. Mix the lindane at the rate of 16 pounds of the 25 percent wettable powder with 100 gallons of water. Methoxychlor should be mixed at the rate of 40 pounds of the 50 percent wettable powder per 100 gallons of water. Apply both chemicals at the rate of 1 gallon per 1,000 square feet.

Halverson performed the double ring ceremony in the presence of relatives ond friends.

Nuptial music was played by Miss Harriet Stenberg of Thompson. Mrs. Dean Olson of Forest City sang.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Erwin Foster attended her sister as maid of honor. Margaret Anne Gabel was flower girl and Ronald Olson, ring bearer.

Mr. Finer was attended by his brother, Junior R. Finer of Thompson, as bestman. Robert Severson of Leland and Erwin Foster of Forest City were the ushers and candle lighters.

Happy Ending

In pursuit of a ball, four-year old Billy Lorimore of West Union darted out into the street last week, right in front of an automobile driven by teen-age Clarence Bishop. But this story has a happy ending. Unlike some teen-agers, Clarence had the car under perfect control and stopped almost instantly. Billy was knocked down and bruised but otherwise unhurt.

Flash Flood

Miss Lena Hellenthal, 65 year old woman of near Mediapolis, was drowned in a flash flood which sent Dolbe creek raging over its banks near her home. Miss Hellenthal had gone to a pasture to get the cows. Apparently she fell in the creek a few rods of the home. Her body was found next morning, three miles away.

Lost Haul

Three Remsen fisherman lost a haul of about 75 bullheads and most of their fishing tackle, when their metal boat capsized in the middle of a lake in Minnesota. Two of the men could not swim but were wearing lifejackets. The trio, LeRoy Bunkers, Paul Treinen and Gibert Wagner were rescued after 45 minutes in the cold water.

KLEMME LOCAL NEWS

Forty-Third Anniversary

Last Friday, July 7th, was the 43rd anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Halfpop near Kanawha, but owing to her recent illness, they did not eclebrate. They had lots of cards and remembrances from friends, and the children and families came home: Mr. and Mrs. Dale Brede and children, and the Edward Halfpop family. Judy Brede stayed to assist her grandmother with the work.

Warm Weather Care Of Cream Is Badly Needed Again!

The road to success in cream quality is easy. It simply takes attention and the following of a few simple rules. Start with number one and follow these steps:

1. Wipe off cow's udder before milking.
2. Milk in good surroundings—a good clean barn.
3. Filter the milk at once with a good filter.
4. Cool cream in water and then place in storage can. DO NOT ADD WARM CREAM TO PREVIOUS SEPARATINGS.
5. After cream is cool, place lid tightly on can. Do not leave open. Store in cool place until delivered.
6. Clean all utensils and separator twice daiy and use a chlorine rinse, after use of good hot water and washing powder.
7. NEVER separate directly into previously separated cream.

If you have test variations in your cream, take a look at the cream just before it leaves your farm. If it is smooth, clean, sweet cream you will get a 100% accurate test. If it is sour and shows water segregation, no one in this world could test it 100% accurately with the ordinary testing equipment. "Lumpy" cream will not test accurately.

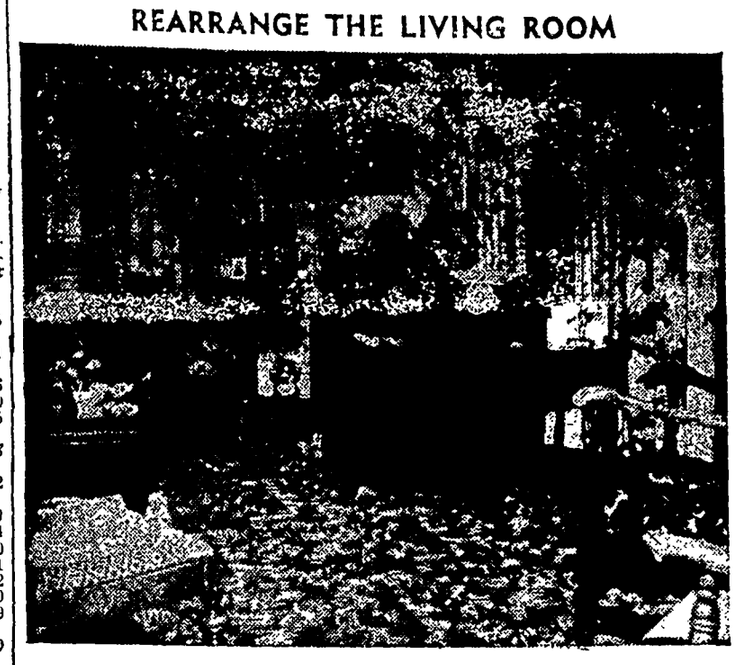
Lighten Summertime Work—
REARRANGE THE LIVING ROOM



Summer flowers, and just a few accessories, give all the interest your living room needs in the summertime. What counts is roominess and neatness and furniture placed for comfort and convenience.

These summer days, while we have flowers from the garden and inviting views at the window to enjoy, why not give them first place in the living room?

Give the knick-knacks and accessories and heavy draperies a vacation, and you'll have less summer work to do yourself, says June Brown, home furnishings specialist, Iowa State College. Your family will enjoy the airiness and neat, specious appearance of the room. And the prized decorative pieces will look the more attractive when you bring them out again next fall.

Room arrangement should always serve our families' needs, first and foremost, Mrs. Brown believes. In many living rooms it would be a good idea to go a step farther than removing unneeded accessories and eliminate some of the furniture. Extra pieces of furniture, however much you may cherish them, mean crowding and clutter if they're in the way.

Do Some Planning

Good furniture arrangement is a matter of planning. There aren't any hard-and-fast "do's" and "don'ts." But if guests move their chairs on their own for easier conversation, or if Mary or Johnny must interrupt a conversational grouping to leave the room, chances are the arrangement could be improved upon. If reading or working conveniently call for a major readjustment of furniture, that's another good sign some planning is needed.

First in importance in planning comes the needs of family members, rather than "how things look." Consider the habits, activities, and likes and dislikes of everybody from the youngest child to grandmother. Family needs change over the years, so furniture arrangements often need to change too.

In most homes the living room is the center of family life—the place for family councils, for entertaining, for evenings of music or reading or hobbies. Best guide in arranging furniture is what works for your own particular family group.

Try to plan groupings for conversation or activity, Mrs. Brown suggests. You may have a study center, a play area for the children and a well-lighted, comfortable area near the bookshelves for reading. Storage space for books, records, games and hobby materials is important. And so is adequate lighting. Allow 3-foot traffic lanes between doors and furniture groups.

Some Guides To Follow

If you have special problems which baffle you, have a furniturng-moving session and try some new arrangements. If the walls are cut up by windows and doors, some larger pieces of furniture might be placed at right angles to the wall, jutting out into the room. A davenport may often be placed in this manner, with a table or bookcase at the back, to help divide the room into different areas.

In general it's best to avoid placing furniture at oblique angles to the wall, or across corners. Try to distribute the large pieces along different walls so that one side of the room doesn't seem overbalanced with heavy furniture.

Too many small objects give a spotty, cluttered look. Especially in a small room, it's best to go easy on the number of pictures, plants, vases and figurines. Change ornaments now and then, rather than displaying them all at one time.

EYE BROMEGRASS FIELDS FOR SEED

A shortage of bromegrass seed is causing many Iowa farmers to watch their grass closely for seed development. It might pay big returns to harvest it.

Seed yield ran as high as 600 to 800 pounds per acre in college plots at Clarinda and Ames last year, says Darrel S. Metcalfe, Iowa State College agronomist. According to several commercial seed dealers, the seed retailed at about 55 cents per pound this spring. That's 10 cents above last year's price.

Combine Standing

Bromegrass seed is combined while standing, but it usually has a high percentage of moisture, so drying may be necessary. Some farmers spread the seed 8 to 10 inches deep on a floor and turn it daily until dry.

Another method is using an artificial dryer. Some seed producers use a seed corn dryer, making use of forced air. In this method the grass seed is first sacked to prevent the chaffy seed from blowing away. Portable seed dryers also are used.

Don't worry about inert material while combining grass seed, Metcalfe advises. This can be taken out later. The main thing is to get and save all the grass seed once it enters the machine.

Crop Needs Nitrogen

Rising bromegrass seed prices are attributed to less seed being harvested and more farm land being seeded down by farmers throughout the nation. Maximum seed yields most generally can be obtained by applying about 60 pounds of nitrogen per acre in late March or early April. Sod-bound bromegrass suffers from the lack of nitrogen, and that's why yields can be boosted by applying it. Nitrogen can also be applied in the fall when the plants are still actively growing, but Metcalfe says that better results have been received from early spring applications.

Alfalfa provides nitrogen for bromegrass, but it posses a problem in harvesting the grass seed. However, alfalfa doesn't produce maximum bromegrass seed yields, the agronomist says.

For Safe Keeping

A House Appropriations Committee study disclosed that in one year the Federal Bureau of Internal Revenue printed 500 million tax forms and 115 million instruction sheets to supply 47 million taxpayers. Hundreds of such forms, long outdated and no longer useful, were found stored in a leased building.

Official Hoarding

The extent to which surplus inventories of stock are built up by some Federal Agencies was recently pointed out to the House Appropriations Committee by Jess Larson, General Services Administrator. He said one agency had a supply of tracing cloth which would last them 9 years, enough fluorescent light tubes to last 93 years, sufficient ruled filler paper to last 168 years and a stock of loose leaf binders which would last them 247 years.

USE COMBINATION SPRAY OR DUST ON POTATOES

Combination sprays or dusts will provide effective control against all the important enimies of the potato plant, according to C. C. Blickenstaff, extension entomologist at Iowa State College, and A. F. Sherf, extension plant pathologist. The principal enemies are early blight and such insects as the flea beetle, leaf hopper and the Colorado potato beetle.

Early blight is the most common leaf disease of potatoes and causes brown spots to appear on the leaves about the time the plants have become full grown. Damage from the disease is evidenced by a reduction in yield due to the loss of diseased leaves.

The specialists say the flea beetle is a tiny, round, hard-shelled insect that is usually black. It works by eating small holes in the leaves of the plant.

Leaf hoppers are small and active and spend most of their lives on the undersides of the leaves sucking the plant juices. They cause the leaves to brown at the tips and edges, curl up prematurely and die.

Colorado potato beetles are commonoy called potatoe bugs are large, round, yellowish-orange insects with black stripes. Their offspring are soft-bodied red bugs with black spots along the sides. They feed on the leaves and the stems.

For controlling these enemies of the potato, the specialists suggests a combination of either a fixed copper compound or nabam, with DDT. Spraying is preferred because better coverage of the plants is obtained. However, dusting is satisfactory if it is done well.

This mixture should be applied every 10 to 14 days beginning when damage is first observed. Since these compounds are found available in varying strengths, they should be used according to the manufacturers' directions.

WATCH SORES ON STOCK NOW FOR SCREWWORMS

Watch for cuts and wounds in livestock and poultry because untreated sores may harbor screwworms, warns Earle Raun, Iowa State College extension entomologist.

Screwworms are particularly severe in cattle shipped into Iowa from the South, but there's also danger from the worms in native livestock. Every summer Iowa livestock is threatened by a red-headed fly from the South which lays eggs in open wounds. Maggots from these eggs attack living tissues, sometimes causing death to the animal.

A simple but effective precaution against the screwworm is to put Smear-62 on any open wounds or sores, and keep doing it every day or two until the sore is healed. Neglect might cause the loss of an animal.

CREEP-FEEDING CALVES USUALLY WILL PAY OUT

More pounds at a higher price are the usual advantages reaped from creep-feeding calves that run with their dams, says Rex Beresford, extension specialist at Iowa State College.

With average grain and cattle price relationship, creep-feeding will increase the value of calves enough at weaning time to pay for the extra feed and labor and leave some profit besides. Creep-feeding is helpful too if farmers want to push calves after weaning and sell as lightweight beeves.

That method of feeding has its limitations, however. Beresford explains that there is no advantage in creep-feeding the calves that will be carried through the winter on roughage and a light grain ration for growing out. It hasn't paid where calves were long-fed and carried to heavier yearling weights either. He summarizes by recommending creep-feeding for calves that will be sold at weaning or that will be pushed and sold for lightweight beeves.

A mixture of half-and-half shelled corn and whole oats, by measure, or a ration of straight corn-and-cobmeal provide a good supplementary feed.

It's The Furnishings That Mak Your Room—

RESTLESS OR RESTFUL

It's not so much the furnishings that go into a room, but whether or not they "get along" with each other that makes the difference between an attractive room and one that seems to impose itself on you.

What folks like in the way of home furnishings is pretty much a personal matter. But sometimes, when furnishings accumulate in an unplanned way over the years, the result is more confusion than of charming beauty.

One of the principals of good home furnishings is to have some plain areas in the room to offset the patterned areas. Thus the rug, the wallpaper, the curtains or draperies, and even the pictures won't vie with each other for attention, but will seem to complement each other, says Mrs. June Brown, home furnishings specialist, Iowa State College.

Too Much Pattern

Mrs. Brown points out that pattern is more than just a figured drapery, or a floral wallpaper—it may be the textured effect of what appears to be a plain-looking rug or a sofa. And too much pattern, or too many varied colors, leads to a "restless" effect in the room.

Not many people realize that their surroundings may be a subtle reason why they feel comfortable and at home in the room, or whether, for some reason, they want to spend more of their time in another room. Yet, "restless" rooms can produce this reaction.

The living room, she adds, is usually shared by the whole family. If the family rests there, listens to the radio, reads, chats and entertains friends there, then the colors and patterns in the room should be restful yet cheerful. To many small objects in the living room can create pattern just as much as the figures in the rug or draperies. Too many books, lamps, pictures, ornaments, flowers and cushions do more to promote confusion than to add comfort. These, and the furniture, need a quite yet colorful background to make the atmosphere seem restful.

Since the walls are the largest area of the room, its often a wise idea to make them plain. Thus they will seem to stay in the background. A second large area is the floor or rug area. Again, says Mrs. Brown, it may be wise to select a rug plain in color and texture to meet your needs. Then the pattern of your furnishings may be emphasized in well-planned, harmonious draperies and furniture.

Wise Planning

Of course, not all families can go right down to the store and buy a whole new roomful of furnishings. If the rug, for example, is patterned, it will be a good idea to keep the furniture and walls more subdued so they will not contend with the rug for attention. Instead the rug will tend to set them off. Likewise, the draperies may be less patterned.

Trere are many ways to work out color schemes in rooms to make for cheerfulness without overdoing it, Mrs. Brown adds. If it's a case of having a lot of money invested in your rug, then the best idea is to make your other furnishings "get along" with the rug. Slip covers are an inexpensive, practical way to tone down or "tone up" the appearance of your furniture. Sometimes it's a good idea to plan the entire color scheme around a lovely picture, by taking the central colors of the picture as a guide.

In any case, she adds, you may be sure that the furnishings of a room do more than than just be there. They have a very definite way of making the family feel "at home."

REPEATED SPRAYING IS NEEDED FOR FLIES

Farm buildings that were sprayed with lindane or methoxychlor for fly control will need retreating in 4 to 6 weeks. Earle Raun, extension entomologist at Iowa State College, reports that these chemicals lose most of their effectiveness after that much time has elapsed.

DDT is effective 6 to 8 weeks in cool weather but it loses its potency rapidly in hot weather. Raun suggests using lindane then.

Fewer treatments will be needed if a good sanitation program is followed on the farm, since fewer fly-breeding materials and places mean fewer flies. The entomologist says to clean up and spread manure on the field each day so it can dry out and not breed flies. If this is not possible, treat it with borax. Also use borax around water tanks and feed bunks.

Other things to check and get cleaned up are the garbage can, outdoor toilet, grass clippings, weeds, and decaying fruit and vegetables in the garden.

THE HIGHWAY STORY

By Bob Hullihan

A man watering his lawn that evening saw it begin. "I knew Carl and noticed that he had been knocking at the door of the house across the street for a long time. He tried to look in the front windows of the house, then just seemed to stand there. Finally he gave the door a kick and slammed away in his car. That's the last I saw of him.

A man in a tavern saw it continue. "Like to have a couple beers at night and like to have them in a couple different places. Saw Carl in both places that night with three or four other fellows. Carl was buying the drinks and they were buying his troubles.

"Things were quiet enough until Carl's girl friend walked in with another fellow. Seemed that Carl had been stood up and the fellows with him started calling the girl some pretty hard names. They told the other fellow they would get him.

"The girl got mad and told Carl she was through with him and that this was a good way for him to find it out. Carl got excited and jumped up and told the girl he was through with her too, but that he'd get back at her first. Then he walked out and his friends went with him. That's the last I saw of him."

A highway patrolman saw it just after the end. "Carl was driving when he apparently lost control on a slight, well banked curve. He died when the steering column entered his chest. Four young men with him were injured.

"The accident had its beginning when Carl found that his girl had broken a date. It grew with intoxication, the unexpected meeting with the girl and the friends who irritated the situation. When Carl climbed into his car he was in a mood to fight back at the things that were hurting him. He just chose the wrong weapon."

1949 DUCK KILL ESTIMATED AT 18.5 MILLION

The legal kill of wild ducks was increased during the 194[9] 50 shooting season by 1.5 mi[l]lion, according to the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Based on data gathered fr[om] 87,127 bag checks and 25,[0]00 post-season hunter contacts, [the] wild duck kill index figure f[or] the United States during [the] past hunting season was 1[8] million birds. The index [for] the 1948-49 season was 17 m[il]lion. The Service believes [the] increase was due to the liberalized migratory waterfowl hu[nt]ing regulations in effect dur[ing] the past season.

Although the number of d[uck] hunters declined about 10 p[er] cent to 1,676,400 in 1949, [the] Service stated that in addition to the increase of 10 days in the length of shooting season hunters had greater hunting opportunity because large flocks were concentrated in the steadily diminishing areas still suitable for migratory waterfowl. Also, millions of ducks and geese remained in the United States during the mild fall instead of wintering in Mexico and other southern points, which is their normal procedure.

The Mississippi flyway states which include Iowa, had 42 per cent of the hunters and 46 per cent of the kill, representing a 1 per cent increase in hunters and a 5 per cent increase in kill over 1948.

Feed Hay And Grain

ventative measures that can be used to minimize bloating include feeding hay and grain before turning out on rich succulent pastures—especially legumes; leaving cattle on new pasture only a short time at first then gradually increasing the time each day; mixing bromegrass with alfalfa to provide the "tickling" stimuli; self-feeding grain while pasturing; keeping cattle away from water when they first come out of the pasture, and not pasturing legumes when they are wet.

Many farmers place their selffeeder between the pasture and the drinking water or salt box. This will induce cattle to eat dry material with the pasture, Herrick points out.

If Bloating Occurs

If cattle bloat, there are several things farmers can do before the veterinarian arrives. Exercise the afflicted animal and force it to chew on a rope or stick. Everthing the front quarters often moves the food in the paunch, allowing gas to escape through the esophagus.

As a last resort, if no help is available and the animal does not respond to other treatment, insert a knife or trocar on the lift side at the highest point of the bloat.

WINDROWING GRAIN SAVES SHATTERING

Direct Combining May Result In Heavy Loss

Until artificial driers can be further developed, the best way to lengthen the harvest season for small grain and still save the most grain is to windrow some of it, says E. L. Barger, farm service director of the college farms at Iowa State College.

Experience during the last few years has shown that by combining oats direct in late season, often as much as 20 percent of it will shatter. Grain picked up from the windrow at the same time will generally shatter only 3 to 4 percent. The difference will pay the extra expense of windrowing and give a nice profit besides.

Windrowing Costs $1.50

Barger sets the cost of windrowing at $1.50 per acre including labor, and he considers combining from the windrow or standing worth $3.85.

Grain with more than 14 percent moisture binned without dehydrating usually will cause trouble. Although a lot of research has been directed toward artificial driers, they are still in the experimental stage. Until one is developed that will prove practical on the average farm, Barger suggests windrowing part of the crop.

Stretches Season

He says there are four main reasons for windrowing. Foremost is to reduce the moisture content enough to make binning possible. Another reason is that it enables the farmer to stretch his harvest season out without the danger of excessive shattering in the late season.

Windrowing also reduces the moisture in green weeds so they can be combined without raising the moisture content of the grain. In addition, fields that ripen unevenly can be windrowed and combined later. That does away with much of the shattering and the high moisture content.

Breaks Back

William Erhvoelt, a 15 year old youth of near Williamsburg, received a broken back recently when a wagon in which he was riding became separated from the towing tractor and turned upside down. The youth was taken to Iowa City.

Bouncing Brick

A brick which fell off a moving truck bounced up and went through the windshield of a following car, driven by Norman Dunntz of Newton, near Grinnell. Damage to the hood and windshield was estimated at $50.

Bicycle For Transportation

Mrs. Mike Wiemers of Gilmore City enjoyed her recent trip to Germany with her husband. Except that she had to learn to ride a bicycle, which is a principal form of transportation there. It was her first visit there since 1925.

Bee In Car

Joe Hillison of Illinois and his family had a bad experience near Waverly last week. A bee got into the Hillison car, which got out of control and went into the dich.

PARCHMENT PAD CLEANS DAIRY EQUIPMENT WELL

A new type washing pad for cleaning dairy equipment is now being recommended, according to A. W. Rudnick, extension dairy specialists at Iowa State College.

This pad is made of perforated parchment paper and is cleaner to use than a brush or rag, because it is nonabsorbent. It'll get the flat surfaces of equipment cleaner and in less time.

Rudnick says these are now available at most creameries and milk plants at a reasonable cost. They should be used with a good wetting agent that makes lots of suds. If they are, they'll scour out the equipment and in time will remove a slight amount of milkstone if there is any present. Rudnick says equipment such as pails, cans and strainers will acquire a good polish if the parchment pad is used on them.

Rudnick also advocates pouring boiling water over the separator when you're through washing it, and then placing it in a clean room. Cover it with a clean cloth. The hot water will make it dry quickly.

The dairy specialist advises against putting any dairy equipment outdoors in the sun after it's washed. Dirt will accumulate on the parts and increase the sediment content. This makes it necessary to wash them before they can be used.

Placing the equipment in the sun was advised before ready sources of hot water become available to the dairyman, according to Rudnick.

Varsity is derived from the word university.

Car Suspended

As Willard Mosher of Pierson drove his car onto a bridge near LeMars recently, the earth caved in under the car and left it hanging by its bumpers. One bumper was hooked to the edge of the bridge, the other to the road-bed, leaving the car suspened.

Centennial

At Delta, Mrs. Mary Fisher recently observed her 100th anniversary. She was born in Scotland, on June 15, 1850, and came to this country with her parents a year later. Indians were frequent visitors to the log cabin which was her childhood home in Wisconsin, Mrs. Fisher recalls.

YES . . NOW WE KNOW WHY!!
FELCO FEEDS HAVE PROVEN SUPERIOR

FELCO FEED HAS AUREOMYCIN

FOR TWO YEARS FELCO FEEDS HAVE INCLUDED THE NOW FAMOUS LEDERLE'S APF WITH AUREOMYCIN.

That's one of the major reasons why Felco Feeds have proven superior when fed on-the-farm by our local feeders.

Mr. Feeder: For some time we have known that Lederle's APF including Aureomycin, brought better feeding results than other APF addatives in feeds. (Dr. Catron of Iowa State College told us that months ago) . . . We waited to find out why our Felco Feeds with Lederle's APF were better. Now we know and can tell you it's because of the Aureomycin. (Experiments and results reported widely through The Hormel Farmer, April and May, 1950; Wallace's Farmer,, May 20 1950; the Sunday Des Moines Register, May 14, 1950.) Read any of these for complete report.

FEED FELCO FEEDS

ALL FELCO FEEDS ARE FORTIFIED WITH AUREOMYCIN - APF - VITAMINS - PROTEINS - MINERALS

That is why Felco Feeds guarantee top production at the least cost. Yes, you might buy cheaper feed, but not better feed.

Remember This: Always our feed will be based upon the latest reliable information resulting from constant honest scientific experiment to improve feeds. FELCO FEEDS will continue to be made with the one objective in mind . . . your increased feeding efficiency and greater feeding profits. FELCO FEEDS ARE TRULY YOUR FEEDS.

GOOD CITIZEN

Democratic Government Based On Individual Freedom, Dignity

This is the first of a series of 10 articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

Composed of leaders in the fields of religion, education, industry, labor and commerce, the foundation was organized early in 1947 to fight the rising tide of indifference and cynicism toward the privileges and responsibilities of American citizenship.

It is strictly a nonpolitical, educational organization. It is not antagonistic to any group or principles unless those groups or principles are hostile to the dignity and freedom of men.

WHETHER YOU call it democracy or a Republic, whether you judge its benefits by the car in your garage or by freedom to worship at the church of your choice, by the food on your table or by your freedom to speak out in public without fear, you are living under a system of government based on the dignity and freedom of the individual, that derives its powers from the bottom up rather than from the top down.

Clearly we must work at democracy to make democracy work—we must work for the freedom that works for us.

What are your rights as an American citizen?

1. FREEDOM of worship according to your conscience.

2. FREEDOM of speech and freedom of the press, including right to criticize the government and public officials.

3. RIGHT of the people to assemble peaceably and to petition the government for a redress of grievances—fancied or real.

4. THE RIGHT to keep and bear arms. (This means that the people as a whole shall have the right to keep and bear arms for the defense of their country. Their right to carry certain types of weapons for personal use, or to have them in their homes, is frequently limited by various federal, state, and local regulations, such as the Sullivan act in New York state.)

5. PROTECTION of the people against unreasonable search and seizure of person and property by the government without proper authority and good cause.

6. NO PERSON shall be held to answer for any major crime without review and indictment by a grand jury.

7. NO PERSON shall be placed in jeopardy (indicted, prosecuted or imprisoned) twice for the same crime.

8. NO PERSON shall be compelled to act as a witness against himself in any criminal case.

9. IF A PERSON is accused of a crime, he has: the right to a speedy trial; the right to the help of a lawyer; the right to trial by a jury, impartially selected; the right to call witnesses in his favor.

10. NO WIFE may be required to testify against her husband (or vice versa) in any criminal proceeding.

11. NO PRIVATE property may be taken for public use without just compensation and due process of law.

12. EXCESSIVE bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

13. A PERSON is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty.

14. THE RIGHT to vote, secretly, for anyone you want. (The constitution protects you against abridgement of this right. The specific right, however, is granted by the various states.)

15. FREEDOM of person, under the protection of habeas corpus, which gives any person who claims to be unlawfully held by an officer or private person the right to have a hearing at once so that he may know the reason why he is being held. (This means that the government of the United States cannot secretly, or openly for that matter, arrest persons as individuals or groups, throw them into prison or concentration camps, hold them there indefinitely and do what it pleases to them.)

16. NO "EX POST FACTO" law can be passed. (This means that in our daily living and thinking we can enjoy the liberty of doing and saying all that the existing law permits. Even if, at a later date, our government makes these things illegal, it cannot "date back" the law to make illegal anything that was done before the law was passed.)

This article is the introduction of the booklet "Good Citizen," produced by The American Heritage Foundation, sponsors of the freedom train. A complete book may be obtained by sending 25 cents to The American Heritage Foundation, 17 East 45th Street, New York, N. Y.

Stardust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

JEFF CLARK, who earned his way through Westminster College, in Sharon, Pa., as a radio-engineer disc jockey, landed high on the stardust trail when he was picked as top vocalist on "Your Hit Parade", as substitute for Sinatra. He switched from his platter-playing role with instant success in his first radio singing job, won the Arthur Godfrey Talent Scout award, and starred in his own New York radio and television shows before being tapped for starring honors. The handsome young baritone—he's 25—is unmarried, plays the violin and the guitar and is the inspiration of a large and active group of teenagers, who call themselves "Clark's Larks".

Elizabeth Taylor's wedding gown may have been gorgeous, but a lot of girls are going to decide to copy the one Claudette Colbert wears in RKO'S "The Secret Fury." A Hattie Carnegie original, it is white, embroidered in seed pearls.

Stan Freeman, one of the permanent stars of the popular "Piano Playhouse", can give a Carnegie Hall concert one night and arrange a singing commercial the next day. He's heard all over the air; "Rate Your Mate", the new Joey Adams show, is his latest assignment. In 1941 he won the McDowell Award as the outstanding young American pianist in the country.

Some of the most dramatically beautiful scenes ever filmed with mountain backgrounds were brought back from the French Alps for "The White Tower" by Director Ted Tetzlaff. An avalanche provided a really sensational sequence.

THE FICTION CORNER

SEE WHAT I MEAN?

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

EXCEPT FOR the fact that Allen Bursley was a coward, Maybelle's happiness was complete. Being a Weslyan, even though the once vast properties of her forefathers had shriveled to a mere 20-acre farm on the outskirts of Stockbridge, she could not abide cowards.

Worst of all, Allen Bursley didn't seem to think that being branded a coward was at all important.

"Why," he asked, "should I want to fight Steve Legge? I've nothing against him. He's done nothing to offend me."

"Why?" she stormed. "You ask me why? Isn't it enough to be told he's saying such dreadful things about you?"

"But suppose the stories aren't true? And what if they are?"

"Allen Bursley," Maybelle said tensely, "you listen to me. When you came up here and bought the Thompson place and tried to make a go of farming, everyone laughed. But you fooled 'em. You made the place pay by dint of hard work, and then you made me fall in love with you — and — and I was tremendously happy and wanted to get married only—"

"Only," said Allen, "everyone figured you were Steve Legge's girl, and when we became engaged Steve began to threaten. And now you won't marry me, till I've licked him."

"I wouldn't marry a coward," said Maybelle scornfully.

The word spread like wildfire. Maybelle Weslyan had broken off her engagement with Allen Bursley, because Allen had admitted being afraid of Steve Legge. Steve became more swaggering. He yearned for some excuse to bully the city man.

Allen withheld the apology that rose to his lips.

THE OPPORTUNITY came a fortnight later in front of the village postoffice. It was evening and more than half of the town's population was gathered there. Allen Bursley came out onto the porch, his attention concentrated on a letter in his hand. He did not see the outthrust foot of Steve Legge, and fell over it, saving himself by grasping a post.

Look where you're going, you clumsy idiot! Kicking a man in the leg."

Allen withheld the apology that rose to his lips, and said instead: "Keep your legs under you if you don't want them kicked."

"Say! Who do you think you're talking to, you shriveled-up city sissy?"

Allen hesitated, carefully folded his letter and tucked it into his pocket. "Legge," he said, "I don't want to quarrel with you—"

Steve let out a roar of contemptuous laughter. "Afraid, eh? Well, we don't abide cowards—"

"But," finished Allen quietly, "Since you insist, let me advise you, you brought it on yourself."

Steve lunged and something struck him like a sledge-hammer and set him back on his heels.

He struck out blindly, accompanying his blows with foul curses, only to have the curses jammed between his teeth with the same sledge hammer.

Above him Allen Bursley heard a feminine cry from behind and turned, to see Maybelle running toward him. He held out his arms, but she stopped, hand over mouth, trying to get out the cry of warning, and failing. The club, held in the hand of Steve Legge, descended crushingly on the back of Allen's head . . .

When Allen opened his eyes his head was pillowed in the lap of Maybelle. She was looking up at someone and talking. "Allen licked him," she was saying. "He's much stronger than he looks—"

Allen's eyes twinkled. "No, I'm not," he said unexpectedly. "It wasn't because I'm strong. It was knowledge—knowing how to handle myself, like knowing how to farm. That's the trouble with you folks up here. You don't know how to do things. See what I mean?"

"All I ask is that you teach me how to—make you a good wife forever and ever."

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

A Little Secret of Murder—Revealed After 40 Years

By BILLY ROSE

On an October morning in 1903, in a village not far from La Rochelle in eastern France, a young priest paled as he listened to his first confession.

"Yesterday afternoon," he heard the penitent on the other side of the curtain say, "I met a strange girl on the dirt road that runs by the pond. When I tried to make friends with her, she laughed at me, and I got so mad I picked up a stone and hit her to make her stop laughing. She fell down, and when I yelled and she didn't move I got scared and buried her beside some bushes."

Father Antoine recognized the voice as that of a 15-year-old who was known in the village as "the story teller"—a boy who was always talking about his daydreams as if they had actually happened.

Billy Rose

Even though he didn't know whether the confession was fact or fiction, the priest imposed the most severe penance, and in addition ordered the boy to visit him every day after school for a friendly talk.

A few weeks later, Father Antoine was almost certain the "crime" was an hallucination. For one thing, there had been no report of a missing person in the district and, for another, the boy's descriptions of the murder grew more and more confused.

ONE AFTERNOON he finally admitted to the priest that his story was a fabrication. "I did meet a girl," he said, "and she got me so angry that I wanted to kill her. But I never touched her, and afterwards I got all mixed up about what I wanted to do and what I really did."

"I suspected as much all along," said Father Antoine, "but I must admit I was shocked at first. You see, you were the first person who had ever confessed to me."

Two years later, the boy's family moved to Paris and the priest all but forgot the incident—until a new paved road was laid alongside the old dirt one. Under a bush near the pond was found the decomposed body of a girl, and the coroner testified it had been there about two years and the skull had been crushed by some heavy object.

Bound by his vows, Father Antoine could say nothing, and for the next 40 years the secret remained with him.

THE YEARS of the German occupation were difficult ones for those who lived in the La Rochelle district, but many of the villagers did what they could for the resistance movement—and not the least among them was the priest, now in his late 60's. And when liberation finally came, a great celebration was arranged with Father Antoine as the guest of honor.

After the dinner there was a good deal of reminiscing among the veterans of the underground, but when someone asked the priest to tell of his own adventures, he smiled and declined. "The occupation was eventful for all of us," he explained, "but in my calling the eventful is almost an everyday occurrence. As a matter of fact, the first confession I ever heard was that of a murderer."

Then, remembering his vows, Father Antoine apologized for his off-guard remark, and despite the urging of the guests would say no more.

Later that evening a delegation of underground workers from other districts joined the celebration and one of them, a colonel in the Maquis, was asked to say a few words.

"Meeting Father Antoine tonight is a great pleasure," he said to the gathering, "and not only because of his war record. Although he doesn't remember my name or face, I knew him when I was a boy—as a matter of fact, I was the first person who ever confessed to him."

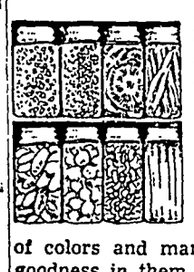
Can your Fruits, Berries with this Chart

(See Recipe Below)

Fruit Canning Is Easy

FRUIT CANNING yields big returns for little effort, every homemaker admits when she goes to her canning shelf to load her arms with a jar of pears for the luncheon salad, berries for pie, or peaches for dessert.



It's delightful, too, to gaze on the colorful jars of fruit and berries, with their luscious array of colors and marvel at the juicy goodness in them.

Fruit canning is simple, too, because the fruit requires only a short cooking time to prepare for the jars. This cooking before packing helps shrink the fruit to give a better pack and, at the same time, extracts some juices which may be used for packing.

Select Ripe Fruits

FOR FRUIT canning, it's wise to choose fruits which reach full maturity on vines or trees in place of getting green produce which you have to ripen on the window sill or out on the back porch. Naturally ripened fruits and berries have firmness that makes them easier to handle as well as sweetness which can be acquired in no other way.

Plan to can only the amount that you can handle efficiently for speed is required so there is no spoilage on the way to the jar. When fruit waits around after one step for another, it will be exposed to air and will lose much of its flavor and appearance.

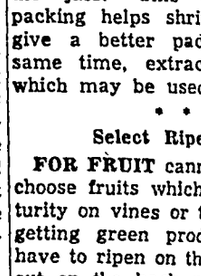
MAKING A WATER BATH

THE USE OF a boiling water bath canner has been widely used and recommended for processing fruits since it gives such good results. This can easily be made at home if you do not already have one.



Select a large preserving kettle, lard pail or even wash tub. The vessel should have a cover which fits tightly so that you can cover it during processing and thus prevent the water from boiling away. Even so, it's a good idea to have a kettle of water bubbling on the range to replace whatever does boil away and escape in steam, as the jars must be well covered during the whole processing time.

Whatever vessel is used for a canner such as described above should also have a rack that keeps the jars off the bottom of the canner about one-half an inch. If you cannot buy a rack to fit, use jar lids, fitting these all around the bottom.

Use this Routine for Canning

THE SAME ROUTINE applies to all fruits, berries and tomatoes, the latter being included in this class rather than with vegetables since tomatoes are acid like fruits instead of non-acid, as are vegetables.

Get together pint and quart jars as needed, and see that they have no imperfections such as cracks or chips off them. Check, also, to see that you have enough suitable covers as well as jar rings, if you are using the cap and rubber closure.

Fill the canner almost full of water—the jars will take up some room, so it does not have to be completely filled, and turn on the fire so the water can start to come to a boil as you work on the fruit.

Prepare the fruit with a thorough washing. Bacteria lodge in soil, and you want to get rid of this so that none will rub into the fruit as you pare or cut it.

Use the chart for preparing the fruit for jars. If you want excellent results, you'll grade the fruit for size and ripeness as much as possible when packing jars.

Fill one jar at a time to within ¼ inch of the top with both fruit and syrup (or, fruit juice or water, as desired). Run a spatula down the inside of the jar to remove air bubbles. Wipe top clean and put on the jar, as directed by the manufacturer.

Process and Cool Jars

AS EACH JAR is filled it should be placed into the canner, without touching or giving them a chance to bump against each other. When the canner is full, check to see there is enough water to cover jars thoroughly.

When water comes to a boil, start counting processing time. When time is up, lift the jars out on a folded cloth or several thickness of newspaper. Tighten those covers which need it, according to the type which you use.

LYNN SAYS:
Use These Tips For Fruit Canning

To help decide how many jars you'll need, use these figures as a guide. Two to two and one-half pounds of the following will give one quart canned produce: apples, apricots, peaches and pears.

Heavy syrup gives the most luscious packs in canned fruits. Use three or four cups of sugar to a quart of water. Bring to a boil and cook just until sugar is completely dissolved.

Fruit or berries which you plan to use for pie or as juice for jelly can be canned without sugar. You'll add this when the fruit or juice is used.

The riper the fruit or berry, the less it will need in the way of sweetening. However, allow at least some syrup for sweetening the fruit as you'll need liquid for filling the jars.

Pick plums for canning just as they begin to ripen. If too ripe, they will be mushy. If too green, they lack flavor.

Cards' Owner Is Chief Optimist

By GRANTLAND RICE

IN EVERY GAME played in any sport there is usually a leading optimist to match a leading pessimist.

For example, practically all football coaches are soaked from ankle to forehead in pessimism. In baseball you get the optimists—up to July. And probably the chief optimist of the lot is Fred Saigh, the owner of the Cardinals

Grantland Rice

Fred was that way back in March. He was still that way in early June. "Don't sell us short," he writes. "After a rather hectic start, we are now ready to settle down to play some real baseball. We are supposed to be a veteran team. We are both young and old. I honestly believe we are going to surprise you and a lot of others."

The Cardinals are not going to surprise us. We picked them to finish second last fall and they carried the fight right up to the last day. We picked them to finish second this fall, although rating Eddie Sawyer's Phillies right alongside.

This Cardinal line-up is really a remarkable collection. Many of them were supposed to reach their peak in 1940, 1941 or 1942.

Here and there some ball club has a survivor from the Neolithic age who lasts eight or ten years. But only one or two are still on the scene.

Look at the years these Cardinals reached the big leagues: Max Lanier, 1939; Enos Slaughter, 1938; Stan Musial, 1941; Marty Marion, 1940; Howie Pollet, 1941; Harry Walker. 1940; Harry Brecheen, 1940; Alph Brazle, 1943.

Here we have eight men who average 10 years service with one club. Make it nine and one-half years if you care to. And yet this one club, built on spirit as well as ability, is still one of the favored teams in the older league, a ball club that might well enough go on to beat the highly favored Dodgers and win another pennant.

They are the exact opposite of the youthful Phillies—many, many years older. Yet neither the Dodgers nor Phillies so far have been able to shake these veterans loose. They have an exceptionally fine manager in Eddie Dyer, a sportsman, a scholar, a gentleman, an able manager and a swell guy.

We have no idea of selling the Cardinals short. They are the only National League team in over 20 years that has been good enough and game enough to crowd the American League into a rough corner more than once and apply the old right hand to the chin. What other National League team has won four world series in the last 20 years?

Vanderbilt Uprising

The right things in life don't always come to the right people, but a turn in this direction has been taken by Al Vanderbilt and his racing stable.

Outside of Discovery, the Vanderbilt stable hasn't been able to give racing too many top horses just before and after the war. You had the feeling some years back that Vanderbilt horses seldom won any races. You considered this point in your visits to the mutuel windows. But there has been a sweeping change in the last two years. Bed O'Roses won $199,200 last year as a two-year old

Vanderbilt is a smart horseman He saw at once, with the war over, that he had to move in a hurry. So he got Winfrey, one of the smartest trainers in the business, to get his horses ready.

He also picked Ralph Kercheval to run his farm. You may have forgotten Ralph Kercheval. Not so long ago he was one of the best backs Kentucky ever had. Ask Shipwreck Kelly, his teammate

Kercheval was also one of the greatest kickers football has ever seen. I mean up there with Ken Strong, the nonpareil of kickers

Kercheval had taken a keen liking to the thoroughbred game. Both Winfrey and Kercheval have worked together to give Vanderbilt as strong a combination as any racing man needs.

Tangled Snarl

The so-called fight game has developed the weird habit of moving further and further into the deep, tangled wildwood. As a starter it has only two good divisions today and the better one, the middleweight, is practically twisted out of shape. The leading people eligible to fight for this crown are Jake LaMotta, defending champion; Ray Robinson, welterweight champion; Robert Villemain and Laurent Dauthuille and Rocky Graziano.

The odds now are that Ray Robinson is the best middleweight in the world today with Villemain and Dauthuille about even for the runner-up spot.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: The Book of Ruth.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Proverbs 31:10-31.

Why Families?

Lesson for July 16, 1950

THE ENGLISH language has a word not found in the original languages of the Bible; it is not in Latin, German or French for that matter. It is the word "home." But homes were not invented in England or America; the ancient peoples of the world had homes even if they had no special word for them. The story of Ruth is a home-story, a family tale. It comes from the times of the Judges, which were very rugged times indeed.

Dr. Foreman

To read the Book of Judges you would think that everything was plots and wars and murder. There isn't a peaceful story in the book. And then comes the story of Ruth, to remind us that even in those terrible times there were happy people, people who minded their business and worked hard and stayed home and loved one another

The bright spots in today's vast seas of misery are just what they were in Ruth's time.

Working Together

"A HOME is a place to go when everything else has shut up" is not a true proverb. For if that is all it is, it is not a home. It is only a boarding house and not a very attractive one at that.

It is the people who live in it who make it. But just throwing people together within four walls, even if the people are closely related, will not make a home. When you read the story of Ruth you see one thing standing out: they were all working people.

To this day, there are fewer divorces in the country than in the cities, and one big reason for that is that country families have to work together, while city families often have little in common. In the country everybody turns to and does something about the house, everybody helps everybody else; while in the cities where so much is done by machines and houses are very small, there isn't much a family can do together. Still, it is worth while for any family to try to work out something that they can all do together.

Unity in Variety

IT is striking that in the Bible the warmest expression of devotion shown by one person to another, is expressed by one woman to her mother-in-law, by Ruth to Naomi. Ruth was of a different race and generation and nation. Yet she takes Naomi's family for her own.

That illustrates another beautiful feature of living in a family. You learn to live with all kinds of people. Even in so small a group, no two are alike. And the thing that holds a family together almost better than anything else is not similar tastes in breakfast foods, or identical eductions, or equality of age or temperament: it is common ideals, it is agreement about the important things in life.

What do you, for example, think is the greatest thing in the world? Do your family agree with you? If they do (or you with them) then you have a basis for a happy family life.

Unity in Worship

HIGH ideals, held by all in common, are almost the best family cement; but better and best is religion. When you read the story of Ruth you are struck not only by their high ideals but by their natural, heart-felt, everyday religious faith. It comes out in the remarks of Boaz. It was one of the things that no doubt had attracted Ruth to the family in the first place. The climax of her famous promise to her mother-in-law is "thy God shall be my God."

It is at best confusing, and at worst tragic, when families are divided in their religious faith. Some one has said that when the father belongs to one denomination and the wife to another, the children are likely to become Nothingarians.

The old family pew, happily not out of style in many places, is more than a quaint custom. It is a fine symbol of family life at its best. Where are the most of the broken homes? Among the families where father and mother send the children to Sunday school while they themselves lie around at home reading the paper, or among the families where all go to the house of God together? A home without real religion is a home without its surest foundation.

Old Half Dollar Commemorates Trip

The Old Spanish Trail half dollar of 1935 commemorated the 400th anniversary of the first overland trek on land that now is part of the U. S.

The expedition, heading westward through the gulf states and ending in what is now El Paso, was organized by Cabez de Vaca, a Spaniard, in 1535 in St. Augustine, Fla.

The 10,008 halves of this special series were struck at the Philadelphia mint in September, 1935, and they were distributed at $2 each by the El Paso Museum committee, with the profit furthering the museum.

L. W. Hoffecker, El Paso coin collector and later president of the American Numismatic association designed the coin. Edmund J. Senn prepared the models. No portrait of de Vaca is known so, as the explorer's name means "head of a cow," this device was chosen for the obverse (heads) of the coin. The words include Liberty/Alvar Nunex Cabeza de Vaca/United States of America/E Pluribus Unum/Half Dollar

On the other side is a yucca tree in full bloom superimposed upon a map showing the expedition's route through Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, the dates 1535-1935 and the words El Paso/Old Spanish Trail/In God We Trust.

Novelty of the design attracted wide comment at the time. Dealers charge up to $12 for the coin today.

If The Communists Took Our Town...

Ever think what it would be like if the Communists took over our town?

What would happen to you and me? We'd be told what to think, what work to do. Farmers' crops would be confiscated. Our kids would be taught only the Communist side. Newspapers would follow the line or be closed.

A far cry from our American democracy!

Sure, we have folks right here in town who would enjoy telling everyone what to think, how to act. But we never take them too seriously. Because we don't like dictators, amateur or professional.

Our American freedom is as simple as a man's right to think his own thoughts, exercise his own tastes. It's as basic as Joe's right to prefer ice cold lemonade . . . or mine to enjoy a temperate glass of beer.

At least we've learned one lesson from Communism. Once we start whittling at our freedom, even in little things, there's no telling where it will end.

MORE FARM ACCIDENTS IN HOMES THAN ELSEWHERE

"We're safe at home," is a statement repeated often by a good many persons every day of the year. However, Norval Wardle, extension farm safety specialist at Iowa State College, says farm families have more accidents in the home than anywhere else.

The home phase of safety is being stressed on Monday of National Farm Safety Week, which is being observed in Iowa July 23 to 29.

Wardle says that a survey made in 457 Iowa Farm homes showed that all contained accident hazards. It was found that of 23 home accident factors checked, an average of 6 were found in each home. Some were present more than once. He says that whenever we think we're safe at home we should check and make sure we are.

The most dangerous spots in the home are the floor sand the stairs, according to the farm safety specialist. He says that most accidents that happen on stairs occur at either the top or the bottom. If the top and bottom step are painted a contrasting color, it will help draw attention to them and remind the user to be careful. A safety gate is also advised at the head of a stairs in homes with children under 2 years of age.

Scatter rugs should be made secure by some method such as using skidproof mats under them. Grease and water that is spilled on the floor should be wiped up immediately and not left until someone slips in it.

Another thing that will come in handy and help prevent accidents, is to keep a safe step ladder handy for use to reach high places. Use this instead of a chair, box or table that is apt to tip over, Wardle suggests.

FREAK CRASH FATAL TO GOODELL MAN—Just peaking its nose out of the garage is the large semi-trailer truck which Saturday afternoon plowed through the length of the Boller station-garage at Goodell. The truck jackknifed, the highway patrol reported, and ripped through the garage and station, causing injuries which proved fatal to Howard Boller, 24, who was standing in the garage. A pickup which ventured on to the highway had caused the truck driver to apply his brakes, it was reported.

GRASSHOPPERS ARE THREATENING NOW

Can Kill Them Easily While They're Young

Grasshoppers are theatening southern Iowa gardens, and considerable damage is reported in local areas in northern Iowa. Young hoppers are easy to kill so now is the time to strike says Harold Gunderson, Iowa State extension entomologist.

If grasshoppers are sprayed early enough, they can be caught in the fence rows around the garden so the chemicals won't have to be put on vegetables. Spray that will kill grasshoppers should never be put on the edible portion of plants. By watching vegetation in the fence rows gardeners can tell when hoppers are starting to eat. Tha't the time to spray.

Chlordane or Toxaphene

One-half pound of chlordane or three-quarters pound of taxaphene in 5 to 10 gallons of water per acre will take care of the young hoppers, Gunderson says. Use 4 tablespoons of emulsifiable concentrate per gallon of water for gardens or small areas.

Grasshoppers out in the fields are usually seen soon after the firstlegume hay crop is taken off. Warm sunlight hits the ground that had been shaded and the first hatch soon emerges. Spraying done when the second crop of hay is short isn't dangerous, the entomologist says, because only the low leaves are treated and they won't be put up for hay anyhow.

Caution On Pasturing

Pastures treated with the chemicals can be grazed 3 weeks after spraying. Livestock other than dairy cattle will be safe if turned out 2 weeks following application, but dairy cows should be held off an additional week. By then there is sufficient growth so cattle won't graze down into the treated leaves, Gunderson concludes.

RUBBER BOATS MAY BE DANGEROUS

Use of rubber boats on deep waters may well become a factor in increased drownings in Iowa, according to Verne Petersen, State Boat Inspector for the Conservation Commission. "Rubber deteriorates very fast when exposed to the elements and there is no way of knowing just when or how a rubber boat or a raft of that type will suddenly give way." According to Peterson, the various types of rubber boats and rafts now in use on many state waters were made for the Army and Navy and were used during the war as emergency craft only. Because of the difficulty in examining the rubber in these crafts, Petersen advises that they be used with discretion and then only in shallow water.

MUSIC MOTHERS RAINED OUT AT ICE CREAM SOCIAL SAT. EVE

Ernie Gerardi Came To Rescue, Set Up Shop At His Cafe

The Music mothers were doing a land office business at their ice cream social Saturday evening until the heavy rain hit them. It looked like it was going to put them out of business when Ernie Gerardi came to their rescue and set them up in business again in his cafe where they continued to sell ice cream, cake, pie and coffee which was served in the booths.

The ladies sure got drenched in the down-pour and there were a lot of nice hair-dos and permanents ruined. Looks like the beauty parlor will have an extra run of business this week getting the ladies dolled up again!

WEATHER FAVORS PLANT DISEASE

In seasons like the present one fungicides are likely to be needed for gardens and orchards to prevent severe losses from plant disease, says County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

Potatoes, tomatoes, peaches, apples, cherries, roses, raspberries, and peonies are a few of the plants which need special attention during cool, wet seasons.

High humidity conditions always favor the growth and reproduction of plant disease fungi, Henderson says. Certain fungus and bacterial diseases are spread by blowing and splashing rain, while many of the pathogens require a water film on the leaves to germinate and enter the plants where they cause infection.

Actually, the influence of weather on plant disease is so great that many farmers and gardeners regard weather as the primary cause, instead of a contributing factor, Henderson has pointed out.

One of the important treatments to be carried out at the present time is control of tomato leaf spot.

Spraying or dusting with a copper or organic fungicide will control the disease if applied from now until late August, according to A. F. Sherf, Iowa State College extension plant pathologist.

He says fixed copper compounds such as Kooper King, Compound A, or Tribasic gives satisfactory control when applied at the rate of 1 pound in 25 gallons of water, or 1 tablespoon per gallon. Organic sprays such as Ziram and Nabam are effective too, but they are not widely available as yet.

Complete vine coverage is important, especially just before rainy periods. Bordeaux mixture also will control leaf spot, but it may injure plants and reduce yields, Sherf says.

Street Improvment Up To Klemme Property Owners

EVERY FARM NEEDS TO HAVE FIRST AID KIT

Every farm should be prepared for emergency treatment in case of accidents, according to Norval Wardle, extension farm safety specialist at Iowa State College. This means a first aid kit is an essential part of farm equipment. Prompt and correct treatment for injuries can often save a life or prevent serious infection.

Wardle says that these kits do not have to be expensive and are not difficult to provide. Homemade kits containing the essential medications, drugs and dressings will serve as well as costly-prepared kits.

In making the kit, Wardle suggests selecting a tight box, preferably a metal one. A cash box, fishing tackle box or a tightly covered tin can may be used. The box should be thoroughly cleaned and well labeled. The farm safety specialist thinks Farm Safety Week, July 23-29, would be a good time to check old kits or get new ones together.

For the contents of the box, he recommends including rolls of adhesive tape of various widths, sterile guaze pads, an assortment of bandaids, swabs and sticks, sterile white cloth or bandages, tourniquets and burn ointment. Other things to include are scissors, boric acid, tincture of benzoine, an antiseptic, such as tincture of methiolate and aromatic spirits of ammonia.

The farm safety specialist suggests locating the first aid kits in the kitchen and the farm shop. Small kits also may be carried on the farm tractor and in the car.

Snake Story Told By Don

BULL SNAKE GOT CAUGHT IN RUNWAY TRAP

Don Schaefer just about jumped out of his pants Sunday night after he and his wife had returned home from the show.

Don opened the door of his service station to see if all was well and, in the dark stepped on something that made him shiver. He turned on the light to behold a 2-foot long bull snake eyeing him. The snake had gotten caught in one of Ed. Thompson's Runway mouse traps and was thrashing around on the floor. Don climbed up over oil barrels and looked for an exit through the roof but finally decided to come down off of his perch and put the snake out of its misery with a 10-lb. sledge hammer!

Too bad about the snake. Bull snakes are valuable around the farms; they catch mice and gophers. No doubt the snake was only trying to do Don a good turn by catching a few mice for him!

HOGAARD-TRUMBELL WEDDING HELD JUNE 30

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Trumbell announce the marriage of their daughter, Jeanne Arlys, to Vernon Hogaard. The Rev. A. B. McKeith read the single ring ceremony June 30 in the Congregational parsonage at Belmond in the presence of the parents of the couple and the bride's brother, Maurice.

The bride is a graduate of the Klemme high school and has been employed as a clerk in a store at Forest City.

The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hogaard of Buffalo Center and is associated with his father in the blacksmith business. After July 15, the couple will be at home in Buffalo Center.

INTEREST AGAIN BEING SHOWN IN IMPROVING KLEMME SIDE STREETS

Improving Streets Would Include Grading And Hard Surfacing

A lot of Klemme folks are again wanting something done to the streets of Klemme, not only to smooth them up but to dust treat them with something more permanent than calcium chloride.

The mayor and the council have been approached by a number of property owners who would like to have the streets improved. Because of the reaction to a black top program a year ago, the council is reluctant to proceed with a program without a petition signed by a goodly number of property owners.

Will Call Public Meeting

If a sufficient number of property owners are interested in a good street improvement program, a public meeting will be arranged and facts and figures will be presented by someone who knows the business.

It is also suggested that those who are interested, and even those who were opposed to the last proposed improvement, be invited to take a tour of several of the towns which have been improved. Talk to the officials, talk to the property owners and see for yourself just what the deal is all about.

Anyone interested in taking a tour can contact the Civic Club or the Mayor and a trip will be arranged to see some of the work that has been done in the past few years.

When a street improvement program is put in, it includes all of the necessary grading and drainage connected with the job to make the hard surfacting satisfactory and permanent.

This work can still be done this year providing that action is taken soon. There is only one way to find out what Klemme can do—look into the matter thoroughly—then do something.

UNION SERVICES WILL BE HELD AT REFORMED CHURCH SUNDAY

There will be no services in the Klemme Methodist Church Sunday as that congregation has been invited to attend the services at the Evangelical and Reformed Church for the morning service at 9:30 o'clock.

As Rev. Vernon Jaberg is on his vacation, Rev. E. M. Egeland will deliver the sermon. At a later date a union service will be held at the Methodist church and Rev. Jaberg will be in the pulpit.

Sunday school will be held at each church as usual. The regular service will be held as usual in the Liberty Methodist Church.

A Maine Joke

EAVESDROPPING is an old family pastime with Maine's Sen. Owen Brewster who, as this column revealed, tapped the telephone wires of California airplane manufacturer Howard Hughes.

More than three years ago—February 18, 1947, Senator Brewster appeared before a judiciary subcommittee to oppose the appointment of John Clifford as U.S. district judge for Maine. The senator explained that Clifford came to Brewster's hotel room to discuss a local housing problem.

"He said he would come up to my hotel room and see me," Brewster continued. "I did something which I have never done before, and I do not think I will ever do again. We had two rooms at the hotel, the door open between, and I asked Mrs. Brewster to listen to the conversation."

Since then it's been a standing joke in Maine whenever anyone mentions having a talk with Senator Brewster to ask: "And was Mrs. B. standing behind the door?"

Diogenes' Lantern

Most congressmen are scrupulously honest about taking gratuities for introducing legislation for their constituents—unlike Congressman Wood of Georgia whose office collected $1,000 for passing a bill compensating Ralph Stanfield after he was crippled by a U.S. army truck.

For example, when Senator Sparkman of Alabama was still a congressman, he introduced a private bill to compensate a constituent who also had been injured by an army truck. The constituent was so grateful that he deposited $500 in the bank in Sparkman's name and sent the deposit slip to Sparkman.

This was promptly returned, however, with a courteous note, thanking the constituent but asking him to keep his money.

After Sparkman changed the deposit back to the constituent's name, the bank returned the worthless deposit slip to Sparkman. Across it was scribbled: "At last Diogenes can put down that lantern."

This referred to the Greek philosopher who carried a lighted lantern around in mid-day, searching for an honest man.

McCarthy's $10,000

There may be more than meets the eye behind the $10,000 paid to Sen. Joe McCarthy of Wisconsin by the now bankrupt Lustron corporation for writing a 7,000-word booklet on housing.

It's well known that the $10,000 the Lustron people paid McCarthy was part of the RFC millions which the government advanced to Lustron. Thus, in effect, all the American taxpayers helped to subsidize the senator from Wisconsin.

But not generally known is that McCarthy had done a terrific job for the real estate lobby prior to receipt of the fee. Not only had he engaged in a tenacious, vitriolic battle against the housing bill—a battle just as tenacious as his present row over alleged communism in government—but he also dominated the appointment of a house-senate housing committee supposed to investigate the need for public housing.

In the closed-door battle over the appointment of this committee, in October, 1947, Senator Tobey of New Hampshire, chairman of the banking and currency committee, turned up with the proxies of four senators in his pocket. All four would have voted against McCarthy.

Whereupon McCarthy moved that the committee refuse to honor proxies. Such a refusal is almost unheard of in congressional committees. However, McCarthy had a scant majority of the committee with him, and got away with it. He then obtained the appointment of New York's Congressman Gamble, a foe of housing, as chairman of the housing committee, with himself as vice-chairman. It was as vice-chairman that McCarthy spent the taxpayers' money to tour the country studying housing, and later cashed in on that trip by getting $10,000 from the Lustron Corporation.

Though McCarthy now states he sold his article to the highest bidder, actually, according to Lustron officials, McCarthy pleaded for more dough.

His income tax for 1948 may show the reason why. As filed in the state of Wisconsin, McCarthy's tax return shows his total income was $28,947, including his senate salary of $12,500 plus the $10,000 from Lustron, plus $4,535 in dividends from the Milwaukee and the Central of Georgia railroads. However, McCarthy also lists losses to the tune of $25,881 which he claimed from the sale of securities of the same railroads.

ZOO ADOPTS SEAL BOYS CAN'T FEED

LONG BEACH, CALIF. — The Nu-Pike zoo adopted a baby seal recently that three boys brought ashore from Alamitos Bay and could not support.

The boys discovered the seal following their sailboat one day and reached out and petted him. He reciprocated with a contented wriggle, and they took him aboard.

They tried to return him to his mother by putting out to sea with him, but the little animal refused to stay on his own, and each time he followed the boys ashore.

SPORTLIGHT

Athletes Now Are Aping the Sloth

By GRANTLAND RICE

THEY TELL YOU—and they prove it—that every record in sport that can be timed or measured has been broken. The moderns keep setting new marks.

There is also another record the moderns are setting. This is adopting the habits of the sloth, the creeping pestilence, the crawler and the time-waster.

A few days ago on his television hour Dizzy Dean asked Bill Grieve, the umpire, why modern games lasted so long.

Grantland Rice

"I pitched against Carl Hubbell," Diz said, "and I beat him 1 to 0. The game only lasted an hour and 29 minutes."

Scoring in the Southern league some years before in Atlanta, I timed one game at 45 minutes.

Grover Cleveland Alexander rarely took an hour and 40 minutes. "You ought to handle a game in an hour and 30 minutes," old Alex once said.

Christy Mathewson was a quick worker. Maybe an hour and 50 minutes. But, today, practically no pitcher can work a game under three hours or three and one half hours. The real answer is that it usually takes three or four pitchers to work a game. Few pitchers ever last five innings.

Ball games have practically doubled in the last 20 years, so far as time is concerned.

What about golf? Gene Sarazen and Jim Barnes once opened a big tournament and got around in two hours. Years ago golfers stepped around in two hours and a half. Few rounds absorbed three hours. Two hours and a half could be considered a standard time measurement.

As a matter of record, two hours and a half was considered slow time when a Bob Jones or a Gene Sarazen was involved.

"Two hours is plenty for a two-ball match," Sarazen says. "Two hours and a half is enough for a four-baller."

The average ball game should last around an hour and 50 minutes. The faster ones should be completed in less time Ball games today that run over two hours and a half are disgraceful episodes. Naturally you can't have fast ball games with pitchers handing out 10 or 12 passes and also showing a deep reluctance to let the ball go.

As Lefty Gomez once said: "You're all right as long as you hold the ball. It's after you pitch the trouble starts."

In the same way these creeping pestilences who turn surveyor on every putting green are not going to finish any round of golf in three hours. Or even four hours.

The Tougher Mold

There has been an argument lately as to whether old-time fighters belonged to a rougher, tougher mold than the present crop. They were talking about such so-called tough men as Rocky Graziano, Jake LaMotta, Ray Robinson, the two French fighters and a few others with no heavy-weights mentioned.

Are there any heavyweights left? Who are they? This debate recalled a turn in the life of Tom Sharkey, the old sailor.

At the time Sharkey was training for his fight with Jim Jeffries at Coney Island. It happened a little over 50 years ago.

Sharkey was doing his road work along the beach. There was a restaurant in the neighborhood where the sailor would stop for lunch. Sharkey's lunch consisted of a 5-cent glass of beer and a frontal assault on the free lunch.

Day after day old Tom would do his galloping, pay for his beer and mop up the free lunch. Finally the restaurant owner said to an assistant: "This guy is eating up all the profits. Change our free lunch. Go out and get the toughest dog biscuits ever made."

The assistant reported with dog biscuits you couldn't break up with an axe. No one it seemed could even make a dent in one. They were harder to bite than a hydrant.

But this didn't check Tom Sharkey's daily assault on the free lunch counter. He seemed to charge in with a keener attack each day. He cleaned up.

After a week, the restaurant owner surrendered. "My clients can't eat this junk," he said. "This big guy seems to like it even better. Junk the dog biscuits and put in the old stuff."

Feller and the War

After watching Bob Feller pitch so brilliantly against the Yankees recently your correspondent began to wonder what might have happened to the Van Meter entry if it hadn't been for the war.

Feller's case strikes me as the toughest break any ballplayer has known. Feller had won 24, 27 and 25 games in 1939, 1940 and 1941—76 games in these three years.

He was then just 23 years old, approaching his peak. After that he was in the U.S. Navy through 1942, 1943, 1944 and 1945.

Labor's Freedom Grows

NO WORKER in industry or transportation need now be a member of a labor union in order to secure or hold a job. He can hold a union membership if he wishes, but if he does not he cannot be barred from employment because he is not a member.

That has been true on the railroads since the enactment of the railway labor act some years ago. It has been true in industry since the passage of the Taft-Hartley act.

The railway unions now have bills before congress that would, if passed, reestablish the closed shop and the check off provisions as they apply to the railroads. It is not probable that they will pass at this session, but if President Truman is successful in securing the election of a Fair Deal congress at the November elections the bills will pass at the next session opening in next January.

The unions have made a vigorous effort to ignore the closed shop provisions of the Taft-Hartley law, but without success. Management has stood firmly against the provisions of any contract that would violate the provisions of that law.

The Chicago Typographical Union was especially insistent that any contract they accepted must provide for the closed shop, but newspaper publishers fought it out, and after a year the new contract without a closed shop provision was signed.

In practically all the strike settlements management has stood pat against accepting any closed shop provision. It has insisted on a strict obedience of the Taft-Hartley law. Management accepts without an argument what the Taft-Hartley law describes as "the American shop."

That provides that all workers who wish to join a union may do so, and the union becomes the bargaining agency for all employees, for those who do not join, as well as for those who do, but no employees may be discharged because they do not join.

The one possible exception is the Chrysler company. The United Auto Workers claim their new contract with Chrysler provides for the closed shop, but Chrysler has not admitted that in the case of Ford, others of the big automobile manufacturers, and U.S. Steel, the closed shop probably will not be considered again as a part of a strike settlement argument, unless President Truman should succeed in securing the repeal of Taft-Hartley.

It all means that the workers now can join or remain out of the unions. They no longer will be forced into union membership in order to secure or hold a job, and the unions will not again place a prohibitive cost price on membership.

Under the labor laws as we now have them, the unions will continue to serve and represent the workers as they have in the past. The present laws have not weakened their effectiveness; they have not proved to be "slave laws" as union executives so loudly proclaimed them.

The labor unions have accomplished wonders for American workers, in the matter of wages, working hours and working conditions. Well do I remember the conditions in printing offices more than half a century ago. One and a half dollars for a 12-hour day, with no overtime pay, was considered good wages for printers. That is a far cry backwards from the standards of today, and the unions can be credited with the greater part of the difference.

With growing accomplishments the labor executives in many cases became arbitrary and arrogant. They would not account for the expenditures of union funds, they perpetuated themselves in office. Such things were encouraged under the Wagner act.

Now the workers are entitled to and receive an itemized statement of the purposes and amounts for which their money is expended. The executives must recognize the rights of their members. In fact the members are no longer slaves to their executives. Under the Taft-Hartley law the unions have grown in numbers, with a greater membership today than they have had at any time in the past.

Do we Americans realize the efforts our ancestors made to lay a foundation for our nation? A foundation on which to build our prosperity, our freedoms, our liberties; a foundation on which has been built 60 million good paying jobs that put into the pockets of the average American family $5,000 a year or more. Do we know the details of our past, or do we care what happens to us in the future? The children of today are taught but little of American history. We can sink and lose it all, or continue to a glorious future.

ARMED MIGHT

Russia Has Largest Army

WASHINGTON—Russia has the mightiest army and air forces in the world.

An official estimate made recently by American military men placed Russian strength as of today:

1. An army of 175 divisions ready for combat, and the ability to increase this to 300 divisions within 60 days and 500 in a matter of months. Together with satellite armies, the Soviet can muster 40,000 tanks.

2. An air force "whose strength in nearly categories is now the largest in the world." It includes long range bombers but none with a range as great as this country's B-36.

3. The world's largest submarine fleet, including some smorkel submarines able to remain beneath the surface for long periods.

4. The ability to produce an atomic explosion.

Develop New Weapons

To combat this tremendous force, the United States is concentrating its efforts toward the development and production of revolutionary weapons, some of which made their first appearance during the war.

These American military experts contend that scientific advances make it possible to achieve relative security without spending to the point of bankruptcy. But they say this less costly way of matching Russia's military strength will still not be cheap or easy.

America's apparent long lead in atomic bomb production, plus the capacity of the United States air force to deliver the bombs, has been and is now preventing Russia from seizing western Europe.

Among the other sensational disclosures of western military men is their belief that there is now practically a military vacuum in western Europe which invites aggression. And they predict that this vacuum will cause a war if it is not filled by the time Russia has a substantial stock pile of atom bombs and a peak of military strength.

When will that be? Military experts report that no one outside the Kremlin knows, but have estimated it around 1953.

Specialists in Training

Many military leaders do not believe huge conscripted armies will be necessary to defend Europe in case of war.

They explain it this way: the best means of preventing an invasion of western Europe is to be prepared to meet masses of heavily mechanized ground forces with smaller numbers of highly scientific ground troops equipped with revolutionary new weapons.

In connection with this point of view, Secretary of the Army Pace said recently, "Adding to these the more recent developments with regard to guided missiles and rockets, target seeking equipment, and the possibilities of tactical use of atomic weapons, it may well be that tank warfare as we know it will soon be obsolete."

These official statements about new weapons gave the people of the Atlantic pact countries new confidence, as they doubtless were intended to do. But whether they impressed Russian leaders and will affect Russian policy is something no one knows.

Startling Art Forgery Revealed After 126 Years

LONDON, Eng.—One of the most startling art forgeries in the history of art—probably committed about 1796—has been discovered by the British national gallery.

A recent X-ray of Van Dyck's portrait of Cornelis van der Geest, which hung in the National Gallery for 126 years, has proved that only the head was painted by the master and the rest of the half-length portrait is a forgery.

The painting of the head measured about 15 inches by 13 inches, and the body, painted apparently in the eighteenth century, was added, gallery authorities believe, with the view of selling the picture in England at a higher price.

The forger carefully laid in the wood on which the original head had been painted a larger panel of wood with the brand of the Antwerp Guild, and smoothed them to a continuous surface.

The forged painting was less well done and had to be altered.

The painting has been rehung with the forged part hidden by a wide Dutch frame of black wood.

Bandit Locks Grocer In Ice Box to Cool Off

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — George A. Weber, a grocer, isn't taking any chances with the lock on his refrigerator.

A middle-aged Negro recently shoved Weber into the refrigerator and held him up, taking $700. Then the man slammed the refrigerator door and plugged the hasp latch with a steel knife sharpener.

Weber spent 10 minutes in the cold before a bread delivery man heard his cries for help.

The grocer sawed the hasp off the lock to prevent another such occurrence.

Famous song writer has this to say: "Camels scored a hit with me years ago. A great-tasting smoke! And Camels are mild!"

Unexpected

A young couple asked the parson to marry them immediately following the Sunday morning service. When the time came, the minister rose and announced: "Will those who wish to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony please come forward?"

There was a great stir—and 13 women and one man walked up to the altar.

Sideline Wisdom

My brother-in-law, a particularly successful contractor, credited his good fortune to the "sidewalk superintendents" who gathered to witness his building projects. He employs one man to do nothing but gather the comments of the crowd, and he claimed that many a major problem was solved by piecing together these bits of wisdom from the sidelines.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

How much trouble would you go to for a cigarette? Three highway partolmen, two big wreckers and their crews once worked most of one night to fine one, and it was a cigarette no one ever smoked.

A semi-trailer truck lay flat on its left side, almost blocking the highway. Two big wreckers labored and strained around it, their floodlights glaring down on the accident scene. It was the work of hours to lift that truck, but the work of only a few hushed minutes to pick up the body of the driver who had been killed beneath it.

Under the body, they found one cigarette. A patrolman slipped it into an envelope.

The mechanics of the accident were clear enough to investigating officers. On a down hill grade, the right front wheel of the truck had dropped off the highway slab and into a drain. That sent the truck climbing a sharp embankment until it overturned.

The driver had either been thrown from the truck or had tried to jump when it came over on him. The mechanics were clear, but what had been cause? Why had an experienced driver lost control of his vehicle for that fatal second?

From all the heavy tangle of that accident, the investigation finally turned back to that one small cigarette found beneath the body of the driver. It was a full cigartte, unsmoked. But one tip was darkened as though a flaring match had been held to it for an instant.

"He must have been just lighting up" a patrolman said, "one hand on the wheel and eyes off the road. Or maybe, the match blinded him for a second. It doesn't take long for this sort of thing to happen."

VACCINATE YOUNG CALF TO CONTROL BLACKLEG

Vaccinating young calves is the best way to control blackleg in cattle, according to Dr. D. B. Radloff, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

He points out that blackleg is one of the most common pasture diseases in cattle up to 2 years of age. It is more prevalent in pastures that have creeks, rivers or ditches running through them, but it has occurred in pastures that do not have any drainage from surrounding farms. It has sometimes appeared in calves that have never been outside the barn.

Blackleg strikes rapidly in a herd of cattle, says Dr. Radloff. The usual experience is to find an animal dead in the pasture without any signs of being sick. Generally a farmer figures that the animal has been struck by lightning.

In such a case, Dr. Radloff recommends calling a veterinarian to post the animal. He can determine the cause of the death and may save further losses in the herd if blackleg or any other contagious disease is present.

Dr. Radloff points out that the initial symptom of the disease is lameness in either one or both of the front or hind quarters. This is followed by dullness and lack of appetite. Swellings in the muscles of the shoulder, hip, chest and back also appear.

The acute nature of blackleg and the fact that the animal is usually found dead makes treatment of the disease impractical. However, Dr. Radloff says if the disease is in the beginning stages, penicillin administered in large doses along with certain sulfas by a veterinarian may produce favorable results.

KEEP WEEDS OUT OF YOUNG WINDBREAKS

While farmers are busy spraying, haying and harvesting, Ed. Gardiner, Iowa State College extension forester, reminds them that weeds may be taking over in their young windbreak tree plantings.

He urges farmers to clean out the weeds within 2 or 3 feet of the young trees. After putting in a lot of work and expense to get young trees started it isn't practical to allow them to be killed or stunted by weeds, Gardiner says.

Weeds are easier to pull now too. In a few weeks they will be old and tough and will have done their damage. If left to grow, they will rob the windbreak of moisture and shut off sunlight during the rest of the summer, and they may mean the difference between stunted and thriving trees. Then when these tall weeds break down later on in the season they may do further harm by smothering the small trees, the extension forester concludes.

Fido, a dog's name is taken from the Latin fidus meaning faithful.

GOOD CITIZEN

American's Right to Vote Often Abused, Corrupted, Neglected

This is the second of a series of 10 articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

Of the nine promises of a good citizen the first is: I will vote at all elections. I will inform myself on candidates and issues and will use my greatest influence to see that honest and capable officials are elected. I will accept public office when I can serve my community or my country thereby.

The right to vote—to vote in secret and to have your votes count—is a great right.

It is grounded in the faith that the average judgment of all of us together in the long run will be right—that "you can't fool all the people all the time." It has many flaws. It has been corrupted, abused and neglected, but by means of it the American people over more than a century and a half have done pretty well for themselves.

Through agents chosen by you and others like you all laws are made. No man, regardless of his station in life, wields more power than you in the voting booth.

You can also vote by not voting, for by staying away from the polls you can help a self-seeking minority make the wrong decision.

Don't be afraid to "lose your vote." The vote that doesn't elect a man still influences what he does. A candidate who just squeaks through knows that you and others like you can repudiate him next time.

In this atom-splitting age you are voting on the gravest issues in the history of mankind.

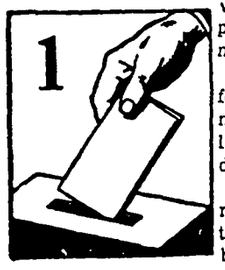
WHEN YOU REACH voting age you become a member of the "ruling class"—the one and only ruling class of this country.

Use this power to vote.

Vote during the big year elections, of course—and at state elections.



Vote at your party primary.

Vote also for your city's mayor or village president.

Vote for members of the school board.

Vote on policies and officers of your union.

Vote as a stockholder of any company you have invested in.

Vote on civic improvements and bond issues.

Vote on officers of your club, your lodge, your grange.

In general, all citizens over 21 years of age have the right to vote, but the various states have different laws as to how long you must live in the same place, when to register, etc. In certain states literacy tests or poll taxes are required. In no state is property ownership a requirement.

But don't consider you have done your duty merely by voting in national elections every four years. There are also congressional elections, state elections, city elections, and local elections of various kinds.

THERE ARE three ways to vote. You can vote for (1) party, (2) issues, (3) people.

If the total party program, as expressed in its platform, appeals to you as being best for the country, it is sound to vote a straight ticket for the people pledged to put that program into effect.

If a single issue seems to you more important than anything else, it is sound to vote for persons who support your view of that issue, regardless of party.

If the ability of an individual to judge each issue fairly and to keep the interests of the people uppermost appeals to you, it is sound to vote for that individual, regardless of party or any particular issue.

But even if you spent your life at it, you couldn't be fully informed on all the candidates and issues.

The answer is to do the best you can. It is better to vote on the basis of party allegiance and your own "sense of things" than not to vote at all. Your own knowledge and convictions, whatever they are, will be combined with the knowledge and convictions of a lot of other people. As a group we are usually wiser than we think we are.

Star Dust
STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

BETTY HUTTON, bright star of "Annie Get Your Gun" and "Let's Dance," has worked hard for every bit of her success, but the career closest to her heart is being the mother of her two little girls—and she could give lessons to a lot of mothers! "They're going to grow up knowing everybody doesn't have a house and back yard like theirs," she told me. "They're going to know that some people don't have enough to eat, as I didn't when I was little." As for her future—"I'm really an entertainer, not an actress; if the time comes when I can't make pictures, I'll sing in night clubs. Show business is wonderful!"

Crooner Alan Dale has given up leaving his weekly radio show by the stage door, now departs by crossing the rooftops to the third building away. Mobbing bobby soxers have stained his new suits with lipstick smears, inkspots, streaks of eyebrow pencil (which they use for autographs). But popularity pays; he was king of four New York college proms in June.

Margaret O'Brien's scheduled starring vehicle, "City Girl," for Columbia, was abandoned by mutual consent of the actress and the company. She still has a one-picture commitment with them, and a new story is being prepared.

THE FICTION CORNER

REPUTATION AT STAKE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

MIKE DIDN'T INTEND to be unreasonable about it. He had a reputation for fairness, and he meant to live up to it. There wasn't a person alive who didn't have faults. And knowing this to be a fact, Mike could understand why such a gorgeous creature as Serena Wood fell short of being a paragon.

Not that Serena's faults were anything to worry about. If they had been Mike would never have asked her to marry him.

Serena's greatest fault, he thought, was her inability to get ready to go any place on time.

Mike adopted a unique method in order to cure this deficiency. For a time he decided to fall in with Serena's habits.

Thus, he would dispel any possible doubt in her mind regarding his purpose. Presently he would begin to get himself ready on time and sit around waiting. Serena couldn't help noticing and take heed.

During the next half year Mike noted with some satisfaction that Serena had already begun to feel his stronger personality. She was allowing herself a bit more time to get dressed for parties, and once or twice suggested to Mike that he hurry up.

By the time the six months was up, Serena had improved greatly. He decided to forego his tapering off, letting well enough alone. Three months passed and the situation had taken on quite a new aspect. Serena, unconsciously, was doing a lot of walking from one room to another switching off lights that Mike had left burning.

THINGS REACHED a point at the end of a year that called for some sort of undertaking. Oddly, it was Serena who brought matters to a head.

"I realize," she told Mike crossly, "that everyone has their faults. But it does seem to me that you could attach a little more importance to things around the house. I've done my best to make you change your ways. I've even resorted to artifice."

"Artifice?"

"I mean, like telling you we have to be at a party 15 minutes before hand in the hopes that you'll get ready on time. I've deliberately gone into the bedroom to switch off the lights after you come out, hoping that you would notice. I've got out of bed and padded way to the kitchen to shut off a dripping faucet

"I didn't mean that you were weakminded or anything like that. We all have our faults."

that you've left running. I declare, Mike, you can't have a very strong personality."

"Now wait a minute, Serena. Something's wrong here. We've got to have an understanding."

"We certainly have. From now on if you leave the lights burning they stay burning and you can pay the bill. If you're late for parties I'll go on ahead and you can make your own excuses."

"But about this personality business. Now——"

"I didn't mean that you were weakminded or anything like that. We all have our faults. Why, even I have some, I suppose. I've tried to help you overcome yours. But from now on you'll have to shift for yourself, unless you can give me some co-operation."

"Co-operation! Why, hang it, I did those things deliberately to break you of them, and now I find myself doing them automatically and — and — liking it.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Graham stared at each other. "It's my fault that you have faults and I have faults because of your faults. Oh, darling, Mike, don't you see what's happened? We made the mistake of—of thinking ourselves perfect. Let's start all over again — now that we have an understanding, and work the other way."

"O. K.," said Mike. "O. K." He grinned, remembering he had a reputation for fairness and now was the time to live up to it.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

How Selfish Is City Life?

By Lawrence Gould

Does city life make people "selfish"?

Answer: I do not believe so. Obviously, the more neighbors you have, the less interest you can take in them as individuals, and in a metropolis like New York, you cannot have the same kind of intimacy, even with your best friends that you might have in the country or a small town—you see them too seldom. But "neighborly interest" can be just as selfish as the city-dweller's ignorance of his next-door neighbor's name — at least, the New Yorker does not pry into your personal affairs or try to dictate how you shall live.

Should you fool with "amateur hypnosis"?

Answer: No, warns Dr. Irving S. Dribben in The Military Surgeon. He reports the case of a 17-year-old "rookie" who became acutely insane after being hypnotized by a group of soldiers in camp. Psychiatrists brought him back to normal, but he had periods of amnesia for days afterwards. The hypnosis had released buried emotional disturbances which had given him no previous trouble. Allowing an amateur to hypnotize you is nearly as dangerous as letting someone amuse himself by trying to remove your appendix.

Can anyone predict the future?

Answer: Most certainly not. For even if what tomorrow holds in store is "predetermined" by what happens today, the conditions that may influence it are so complex that no single mind could grasp them. You might say, for instance, that a given marriage appears "destined" to be happy, yet an accident or illness no one could foresee may wreck it. And while the much-maligned U. S. Weather Bureau has a better record than most people realize, to say with absolute certainty that it will not rain tonight, you would have to know more than a dozen Einsteins.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

Let's Show World There's Life in the Old Liberties Yet

By BILLY ROSE

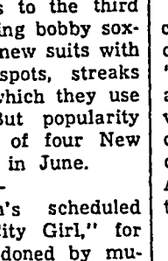
Hon. Harry S. Truman
The White House
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. President:

I see by the papers that the Freedom Fair which was scheduled to open in Washington in 1951 has been called off. I respectfully suggest that you press a few buttons and call it back on again, and with your patience and permission I'd like to tell you why.

As this lopsided eight-ball of a planet currently shapes up, about the only thing worth talking about is freedom, or the lack of it, and as you yourself have repeatedly pointed out in your speeches, our people ought to know what they're talking about when the subject comes up.

Well, what's the best way to demonstrate that there's still plenty of life in the old liberties? Fastidious facts and figures? Cliche' - studded press releases? Rah-rah-rah editorials? No, Mr. President, not in this day and ague. As I see it, the best way to stand off the sugar-coated strychnine being handed out by the kids in the Kremlin is to hand out a few lollypops of our own, and I can't think of a better place to do it than a 200-acre fairground within eyeshot of the Lincoln Memorial.



Billy Rose

Impact-wise, what would such a shindig actually accomplish? Not much, Sir, if it were just a run-of-the-Flushing-meadows type of fair. But it would do a potent plenty if it were a mammoth, hit-'em-in-all-five-senses whooptydo in which everything from spectacle to sideshow were built around one simple theme: The Freer the Enterprise, the More Enterprising the Freemen.

ONCE AND FOR ALL, let's concretize in terms of daily living and loving how well our Joe Doakses are doing compared with the Josef Dokczes in the Iron Curtain countries.

For example, in the exhibit area let our big auto outfits trot out their cars alongside a few Russian cars, and then let them dramatize how many man-hours of work it takes to make one—and, even more important, own one. And alongside the big General Motors building, let's have an even bigger U. A. W. building in which Walter Reuther can dramatically document how much better off his men are in terms of union contracts, working conditions and pension plans than the auto workers in the various Commielands.

Once and for all, let's pull out all the stops and compare our homes, schools and churches with theirs. Let's exhibit an American voting booth with a curtain on the door, and next to it a Russian voting booth with an N.K.V.D. man where the curtain ought to be.

In short, let's give the Pinkos the lumps they've been asking for and make it clear as the nose on Jimmy Durante's face that there's no freedom unless everybody can exercise his taste and tonsils as he sees fit.

Let's even show them up on the midway. Instead of the usual Chamber of Horrors, let's restage the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty, and instead of the old-hat Ubangi sideshow, let the populace take a peek at a Siberian slave labor camp.

WITH NO POMP but plenty of documented circumstance, one big lesson is a cinch to emerge from the fair I envision: That "degenerate democracy" still provides the bestest for the mostest; that our way of life has got what it takes, and it would be downright silly to let the Commies take what we've got.

Of course, Mr. President, there isn't a chance of getting such a fair on by next year, but if the right words were dropped into the right ears pronto, there's no reason why the grand opening couldn't be set for '52. And, according to my astrologist, that would be an auspicious year for a fair, seeing as how around that time a certain party will be doing its darnedest to convince the voters that it has a special talent for making democracy work.

If you think well enough of this notion to get behind it, Sir, I'll be glad to pitch in and help—whether it's making policy or pink lemonade. Of course, I wouldn't do it for free. My fee would have to be the same as I'm getting as advisory director to the California World Progress Exposition which will be held in San Diego in '53—a one-pound can of good smoking tobacco.

Respectfully,
Billy Rose

KEEPING HEALTHY

Treatment of the Tired Patient of 50

By Dr. James W. Barton

When a man or woman past 50 who has always lead an active life begins to feel tired all the time it is not because he is growing old but because there is some underlying condition present, slight or severe. Perhaps the commonest cause of tiredness in a man or woman past 50 is infection, although his family and he himself may think it due to overwork.

An examination should be made by the family physician and dentist to try to find infection of teeth, tonsils, gums, sinuses, gall bladder or large intestine. The regular processes and the fighting forces of the body keep working away as best they can despite infection, but finally the infection begins to win the fight and tiredness and sleepiness is the result.

While infection is the commonest cause of tiredness in the patient of 50, the thyroid gland in the neck may become less active which also causes a "slowing up" of the individual physically and mentally

In "Clinical Medicine," Dr. W. B. Kountz of St. Louis (Washington university school of medicine), states that a basal metabolism test, which is used to test the rate at which the body processes of the body are working under control of thyroid gland, should be made. A persistent fall in metabolic rate may be first sign of body degeneration with symptoms of tiredness, nervousness and inability to keep up physically. The pulse is fast (at first) and abdomen distended. "Lack of physical and mental vigor is noted; the blood pressure may rise without organic disease."

The treatment for underactivity of the thyroid gland is: thyroid extract in doses of one-half to one grain daily, with organic iodine, which stimulates metabolism (building up and breaking down of body tissue) and delays degeneration.

As infection is commonest cause of tiredness in patient of 50, the family physician and dentist should first be consulted. If no infection present then a metabolism test is made which may show that the thyroid gland is underactive. The metabolism test is not expensive.

HEALTH NOTES

Any fresh or canned juice may be consumed by the patient with high blood pressure if it contains no artifical flavor, color or preservative.

Many-Gifted Man

Lesson for July 23, 1950

IF A MAN can do one thing well, he can usually find his place in the world. Life being as short as it is, and the possibility of misfits being what it is, it may also be fair to say that many a man who does one thing well could have done something else better, if he had had the chance. In Grey's "Elegy," you remember the line, "Some mute inglorious Milton here may rest."

Dr. Foreman

That is, in a country church-yard may rest the bones of some hired man who, if he had had another kind of start, might have been a world-famous scholar and poet like John Milton.

Triple-Threat Men

WHAT in football is called a "triple-threat man" is to be found off the gridiron, sometimes, in real life Once in a great while there arises a man who not only "could have done" more than one thing well, but who because of special circumstances and opportunities actually does many things well.

Such persons are rare, and far above the average. Ordinary men take such a long time becoming experts in one line that they simply don't have time in their lives to be expert at other things too. But there are geniuses with many sides, or perhaps men gifted with many talents plus an extraordinary capacity for hard work.

In our times there is Albert Schweitzer, outstanding not only as a scholar but as a musician, doctor and missionary. The President of Harvard at the present time is a noted chemist as well as a distinguished executive. Robert E Lee was a brilliant soldier who also, as an educator, left his mark on his native state to this day. Leibnitz was a diplomat and philosopher; S B F. Morse not only invented the telegraph but was a painter of unusual ability; the man who thought up the idea of savings banks was a minister of the Gospel; King David was a poet, musician, general and monarch.

Samuel the Versatile

SAMUEL, Judge of Israel, was another such man. "Jack of all trades but master of none" does not describe him, for he was master of whatever he did. He has gone down in history as a prophet—what in our times is called a preacher; but this was by no means all. He served his generation in other ways as well.

He was the chief executive of the people, king without the title. Though possessed of dictatorial powers, when during a wave of unpopularity he resigned, and dared his critics to produce one single case of dishonesty or graft, none was brought against him.

He was a circuit judge, going from one city to another dispensing justice. He acted as a priest, indeed as the high priest of his people. We know of one occasion when he led his people in battle, and he was as successful as if war had always been his business. He was a kingmaker, for God entrusted to him twice the delicate mission of selecting Israel's king.

Times and the Man

TWO thoughts strike one who reads the story of Samuel. One is the way his great and many-sided powers were used for public service. Put into modern terms, he could have made a fortune if he had "stuck to private practice" and used his talents for himself. But at no time and in no way did Samuel work for Samuel. He worked for God and his country, and he died a poor but honored man.

One of the greatest needs of the nation today is men of Samuel's calibre, triple-threat men.

We have plenty of small-calibre bureaucrats, and we have plenty of large-calibre men who are quite selfish. How few unselfish large-calibre men there are! The other thought is that the times and the man go together. A man's greatness comes in large part from his opportunities.

John Milton helped make England—but England also helped make him. Samuel helped make Israel, but at some other stage in history, he might have lived and died a country priest.

Let no man think himself self-made; not even a great man. Without the God who endows him with his gifts, without the times that call forth the gifts, even the most gifted shrink to little or nothing.

Burn Raspberry Canes After Picking Fruit

A good way to get in a lick at next year's raspberry disease is to destroy all canes that bore fruit this year immediately after the fruit has been picked.

Cut canes off at ground level and burn them regardless of whether or not they have leaves, advises A. E. Cott, extension horticulturist at Iowa State College. Not only does this help control disease, but it allows more light and air for canes that will bear fruit next year. It also conserves moisture and plant food.

Cott reminds gardeners that their raspberry bushes will be benefited a lot by keeping out the weeds. The two won't mix without harmful effects to the raspberries.

MOISTURE CAUSE PAINT PROBLEMS

Insulated Walls Need To Have Vapor Barrier

Blistering, peeling paint on many Iowa houses is causing home owners to bombard Iowa State College engineers with letters for advice.

The answer to their problems can usually be put in one word, "moisture," says Sherwood DeForest, extension building specialist at the college. In most cases the house has been insulated without using a vapor barrier. Then when warm and humid inside air cools within the walls, it loses the ability to hold moisture. Moisture from cooling air condenses out in the insulation.

The principle is the same as droplet formation on a drinking glass during the summer, he explains. When warm air strikes the cool glass, air temperature is lowered, moisture condenses and droplets form because the cooler air can't hold as much moisture as warm air.

Vapor Causes Pressure

Vapor that's formed inside walls creates a pressure which directly causes blistering and later, peeling of the paint. Moisture that's trapped in walls also will rot wood and destroy the effectiveness of insulation

Wet insulation is worse than no insulation at all, DeForest says, because of moisture conducts warm temperature right out of the house instead of acting as an insulation.

Several things can be done to keep out moisture. In new homes that are insulated with loose, fill-in insulation during construction, a moisture barrier of glossy, black paper or aluminum foil should be placed between the studs and the inside wall to keep out moisture. Regular building paper isn't vapor-proof, DeForest reminds home builders. This moisture barrier must be the right kind of material if it's going to do the job. The bat or blanket type insulation usually has a vapor barrier attached to the insulation.

Protect Attic Floor

A vapor barrier in the attic floor should be placed under the insulation and above the plaster.

For older houses that are insulated by blowing insulation between the studs, two coats of aluminum paint on the plaster will form a good vapor barrier. Wallpaper must be removed before these coats are applied. Any interior decorating can be used successfully over the aluminum paint.

Lowering the humidity inside the house during cold weather helps to save outside paint too. It's this moisture that condenses within the insulation material. Houses that insulated usually have enough open spaces so excess vapor in the walls can escape. In the insulated, winterized houses, humidity usually rises because there's little air circulation.

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., United States Senator from Massachusetts was scheduled to give the keynote address, but was unable to come to Iowa. Senator Hickenlooper gave the address in place of Sen. Lodge. Many people heard Sen. Hickenlooper's stirring address over the radio.

An article in this issue by Gerald Bogan gives a report of the convention.

Adopt 1951 Budget

The 1951 budget for the administration and operation of the county assessor's office was adopted this week by the Hancock County conference board. The hearing on the proposed budget will be held at the Courthouse in Garner at 1 p. m. Monday, July 31. The proposed expenditures for 1951 are listed at $16,000 and a tax levy of $11,000, which is approximately $6,000 lower than in 1950. Extensive reductions were made due to a reduction in the field force formerly required to make personal property listings.

Dusty Streets

Oiling Not The Answer To Dust Treatment Of Streets

The writer drove to Leland Sunday to see the streets which had recently been given an oil treatment to hold down the dust.

We are informed that where oil is used, two coats should be applied each year. The streets oiling at Leland holds down the dust, but it seemed that their gravel streets were inclined to pit and rough up.

It does not seem that oil is the right answer to the problem.

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Love's road may never run smooth, but a stop sign violation on that particular highway can have interesting results.

A highway patrolman approaching a rural intersection one afternoon saw a car slam through a sign and take a screaming turn onto the highway. When the officer got the car stopped he found a driver with a white-knuckle grip on the wheel and a much less steady grip on his emotions. "Gimme the ticket quick," he growled, "I've got places to go."

As is the routine, the patrolman asked first to see the man's drivers license. He didn't have it. "Left it home, back down the road a way."

It was obvious that the driver had just been through some kind of emotional exposion. He was in no condition to drive on the public highway. To gain some time with the man, the patrolman told him to park his car then they would both go back to his home in the patrol car to pick up the license.

The driver blew up. "I can't go home," he said. "I just had a fight with my wife and I just left there for good." He jerked his thumb toward a hastily packed suitcase in the back seat.

But the patrolman forced the point and the two men drove back. It took about fifteen minutes of talking by the patrolman before the man got out of the car and stomped back up to the house he thought he had left forever.

The patrolman waited for him. The patrolman, in fact, waited half an hour. Then the man returned with his license, meekly accepted the ticket, and climbed in with the patrolman to ride back for his car.

It was a silent ride. The man didn't speak until he was getting out of the patrol car. "Sorry I kept you waiting there," he said, but the wife and I patched things up while I was in the house. She had to find the license."

HORSES AND COWS ARE THE MOST DANGEROUS OF FARM ANIMALS

It's true that bulls should be kept in safe bull pens and handled with care for greater farm safety. However, County Extension Director Paul Henderson points out that the bull is actually a minor factor in accidents caused by livestick on the farm.

He says horses now are listed as the animals causing the largest number of accidents on the farm. Cows rank second.

There are still a lot of horses on the farm, even though their numbers have been decreasing. One of the main reasons horses cause accidents are that they're not worked much now, and as a result, may not be well-trained.

Henderson says a good rule to remember during and following National Farm Safety Week that is being observed from July 23 to 29, is "Preventing animals from becoming frightened will prevent accidents."

Farmers are around horses and cows a good deal. As a result, they become more familiar with this livestock and forget to warn the animals when they approach them. Ths scares the animals and they sometimes involuntarily cause an accident by jumping or kicking. A farmer respects a bull when he approaches him and gives him adequate warning. This policy should be adopted for all farm animals.

The largest share of accidents aren't caused as a result of maliciousness on the animal's part. More often they're the result of frightening the animal, Henderson observes.

CONCERTS BY KLEMME HIGH SCHOOL BAND ARE GREATLY ENJOYED

Every Saturday night a large number of people enjoy the musical entertainment provided by the Klemme school band, directed by Stanley Bulka.

Saturday evening the band played an especially fine program of a variety of musical numbers. Some out of town visitors remarked that it was one of the best concerts that they had ever listened to.

If you are not taking in the weekly Saturday evening concerts you are really missing something good.

USE CONCRETE FEEDLOT TO SAFEGUARD CATTLE

Iowa farmers can help safeguard their investment in high-priced cattle by building a concrete feedlot, says Dr. J. B. Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

Not only do paved lots protect dairy cows and help beef cattle to gain efficiently, but the hard surface also helps to combat foot rot, which is a common disease in cattle.

Foul and wet feedlots are ideal for the organisms that cause foot rot. Sharp stones, nails and barbed wire often start sores in the feet of cattle. It's through these sores that foot rot organisms enter, Dr. Herrick explains.

For treatment of the entire herd he recommends that a large foot bath be placed so animals must walk through it on the way to the pasture or the water tank. An antiseptic solution or copper sulfate solution of 1 pound copper sulfate per gallon if water may be used. This type of treatment will help mildly infected animals, as well as prevent the spread of foot rot to clean cattle.

Animals with a more serious attack should be treated individually by paring and trimming the hoof to remove the mud and dead tissue. After the foot is cleaned, apply formaldehyde, liquid lime sulfur, or sulfaurea packs, all of which have given good results.

KILL RAGWEED AND POISON IVY NOW

This is the time of year when control measures for ragweed and poison ivy are most effective, according to County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

Control of ragweed now will prevent setting of seed, increase forage and pasture yields and if kept from blooming on a community-wide scale, it can benefit hay fever sufferers.

Henderson recommends mowing for control, especially in rotation pastures where legumes are present. Since ragweed is suceptible to 2,4-D, spraying is an effective control measure in permanent pastures without legumes. E. P. Sylwester, Iowa State College extension botanist says to use three-quarters lb. of amine form of 2,4-D or ½ lb. of ester per acre.

With poison ivy also deafed out well and still not far enough along to be resistant to chemicals, Henderson says this is the logical time to hit it, too.

Sylwester's recommendations for ivy control are 2 pounds of a half-and-half mixture of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T per acre. For small areas, 2 tablespoons of the mixture may be used in each gallon of water.

About 95 percent eradication of poison ivy can be expected with the first spray, and stragglers and regrowth can be sprayed later in the season. Henderson suggests that persons who are immune to poison ivy do the actual spraying and control work.

WASH HOUSE AND CONTENTS DESTROYED BY FIRE MONDAY A. M.

A wash house and contents at the Joe Burgess farm home southeast of Klemme was consumed by flames Sunday morning, at about 3:00 o'clock when the family was awakened. The Goodell fire department was called and kept the flames from spreading to nearby buildings.

The small building, used as a wash house, housed an oil hot water heater. It is thought that the heater caused the fire. The water was being heated for the weekly family washing which had already been taken to the wash house. Just before the fire department arrived, the hot water tank blew up and sailed through the side of the building and went through the wall of a machine shop 40 feet away. The blast broke several windows in the Burgess house.

A large quanity of clothing was lost in the blaze, as well as a washing machine, oil heater and other items. These were all insured, but the wash house was the only building on the farm not insured.

MARTY LINK'S

"ISN'T IT WONDERFUL TO BE IN LOVE WITH SOMEONE YOU LIKE?"

'Slingshot 355'

THERE WAS a large "Do Not Disturb" sign on Elmer Twitchell's door. It developed he had become a victim of the rash of westerns called "Colt 45," "Winchester 73," etc. And, hearing of others to be titled "Remington 22" and "Smith & Wesson 40," he had plunged into a series of scripts featuring outstanding American weapons. On his desks were slips of paper bearing such suggestions as "Bazooka II," "Gatling 33," "Mauser 38," "Enfield 00" and "Rabbit Gun III."

At the moment he had settled on a movie to be called "Slingshot 355." "It was the most devastating weapon of my boyhood," he declared. "Hardly a window in my neighborhood back home escaped its touch. Dozens of local merchants had posses out trying to fix the blame for broken windows. Many a neighbor had his hat knocked off by it. I once plugged my schoolteacher with it from an alley. And I'll never forget the most exciting runaway in town the day I shot Lutz's grocery wagon horse in the rump."

"The slingshot is really the great American weapon," Elmer went on. "In it man has through the years found expression for his earliest yen for marksmanship. It has done more damage than all the Winchesters and Colts in history. I'm talking of the old-fashioned American slingshot made from the fork of a tree branch, with good stout rubber for a sling and a piece of real leather to hold the pebble or slug. The script on which I am working will tell the story of the part played in history by this primitive troublemaker.

"Of course, I'll need ballyhoo to put the picture over, so I am going to hire press agents to claim that Buffalo Bill, Annie Oakley, Wyatt Earp and all the great marksmen began with a slingshot. I'm even going to offer rewards for the earliest types sent in to me for exhibition in theater lobbies."

Mr. Twitchell admitted he also had in mind some movies on yacht club cannon, rabbit guns, pea shooters and putty blowers "There is a great opportunity for a modernistic film to be called 'Water Pistol 86,'" said Mr. Twitchell. "This is the current weapon of the young, and I think it a sign of decadence When I was a boy the water gun would have been scorned by any kid over five years of age Today, young men almost old enough to be candidates for public office are finding delight in it. The other day they arrested some seniors in an American college for running around town with squirt guns. Imagine it!"

"There is no limit to what a writer can do in the field of weapons at the moment," he admitted. "Have you thought of the common red brick or paving stone?"

"I am thinking of the heaved rock and its place in American marksmanship," he said "The bar bottle, too, is worthy of consideration. It ended many a tough fight."

"What about vegetables?" we asked.

Elmer leaped to his feet. His eyes gleamed. "I have it," he cried. "The perfect title, 'Ripe Tomato 75!'"

Gary Cooper's new movie is a story of the tobacco industry. An opportunity for a big scene in which he ambushes a parade of cigarettes on the parade ground was overlooked.

A Harvard psychologist has trained pigeons to play "Take Me Out To The Ball Game" on the piano. That's nothing. Yale has a bird that can say, "Game called on account of rain."

"The New York State Bar association expressed resentment at Governor Dewey's charges that senile and alcoholic judges were kept on the bench and stated that the standards of judicial fitness in New York are unexcelled by any state in the country"—News item. Is that good?

Nothing has scared as many Americans in years as Secretary Tobin's recent declaration that there could never again be a big depression in this country.

Youth Wins Bet by Socking Officer, But Goes to Jail

RIPON, Wis. — Robert Stahowiak, 19, bet a friend $100 he would have the nerve to punch a police man in the nose. He did.

But the one punch cost Stahowiak $100 fine on an assault and battery charge, plus $59 costs, plus six months in the county jail.

He had also been charged with gambling, but it was dropped. The judge also ruled that Stahowiak could not be probated or paroled.

Are delinquents apt to become criminals?

Answer: That depends upon how they are treated, say a judge, a psychiatrist and a psychologist in the Northwestern University Reviewing Stand. A juvenile delinquent is a child with a problem, not a "problem child," and if he is treated as an enemy by the community, his finding the answer to his problem will be made just so much harder. If there were sufficient mental hygiene clinics to permit all juvenile delinquents to be shown a better way of getting satisfaction out of life, the danger of their turning to crime might be avoided.

In Gastroenterology, Drs. S. Wolf and T. P. Almy report that they made repeated observations of swallowed barium sulfate in 14 patients with well-established cardiospasm. They found that the obstruction in the oesophagus was often associated with a decided amount of movement of the lower two-thirds of the oesophagus.

Even when the oesophagus was widened to some extent, the cardiospasm was present; it was only when it was greatly widened that this extra amount of movement disappeared. These two physicians found that these spasms bore a direct relation to stresses and strains or freedom from stress and strain in the emotional life of these patients.

In short-term experimental observations, it was noted that when emotional topics were discussed, there was an increase in the obstructive symptoms.

Don't Be Satisfied With Only Temporary Relief—Now It Is Possible To TREAT THE CAUSE OF ANY SICKNESS

DUE TO DEFICIENCIES OF VITAMINS B_1, B_2, NIACIN AND IRON

Mr. John McClendon, P. O. Box 8191, Los Angeles, California. "My age is 44. My trouble is stomach distress. Can't eat and when I do, it makes me sick. But HADACOL has done me more good than anything I have tried. My mother lives in Mobile, Alabama, and sent it to me. I don't think there's anything better than HADACOL, and if there is you can have it." (A very thoughtful mother to send her son HADACOL. Why don't you send a bottle to a relative with this trouble?)

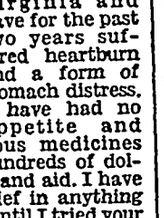
Alex J. Anderson, Route No. 1, Caryville, Florida, a very bright youngster. "I am ten years old. I've always been puny. I never have eaten or played like my brothers. I've been taking HADACOL for a while, now feel better, play more and like to go to school. HADACOL is really a good medicine." (Just leave it to the youngsters to find out what's good for them!)

Mr. Clifton Crum, 511 West Commerce Street, Greenville, Alabama. "I am taking my third bottle of HADACOL and it has done more for me than any other medicine. I was awfully weak and nervous and run-down. I would have weak nervous spells and I had no appetite for food. So I heard different people praising HADACOL over the radio. My wife wanted me to give it a trial and I sure am glad I did. My back would hurt me so with neuritis pains till I couldn't sleep at night but that is all in the past. My backache is gone now and I am feeling good so I am going to continue taking HADACOL. I am 35 years old, employed by Greenville Ice and Coal Co., Greenville, Ala. I hope everybody that needs medicine will try HADACOL. I just can't praise it enough as it seems to be just the medicine I needed."

Mrs. Ophelia Jefferson of Gulfport, Mississippi. "I'd been suffering from neuritis pains and aches and was advised to have my teeth extracted, but received no relief. I'm now on my seventh bottle of HADACOL and it's given me entire relief from the aches and pains. I'm able now to do a full day's work. The makers of such a marvelous remedy should certainly be praised."

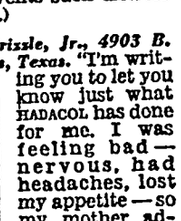
Mr. Robert G. Stuart, Barter Inn, Abingdon, Virginia. "I am working in the capacity of Health Inspector for the State of Virginia and have for the past two years suffered heartburn and a form of stomach distress. I have had no appetite and have tried various medicines spending many hundreds of dollars for treatment and aid. I have not found any relief in anything or any treatment until I tried your remarkable HADACOL, which I praise with the highest regard. Now I eat three large meals a day without any pains or discomfort. I have gained 15 lbs. since the 15th of December—never felt better in all my life. I am now taking an active part in civic and extra curricular activities which I had to ignore since last December. I have worked zealously. Thanks to your remarkable HADACOL."

Mr. Alidore Kramer of Marrero, Louisiana. "I want you to know how your wonderful HADACOL helped me. I suffered so from neuritis pains and aches, I hurt so, and I could hardly use my right hand. I even had my teeth out but got no help. I started to get HADACOL. Now I sing while I plow my fields. I'm so happy. I'll never be without HADACOL. I take it every day." (That's the spirit—isn't it great to have that wonderful HADACOL feeling? Why don't you try it?)

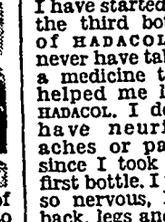


Mrs. Virgie Finley, Route No. 1, Monterey, Tennessee. "I was weak and run-down so that I could hardly sleep any, and was so nervous I could hardly do my housework. My stomach had so much gas on it that everything I ate seemed to hurt me. I had tried all kinds of medicine and nothing seemed to help me. I started taking HADACOL a few weeks ago and believe me it surely has helped me. Now I can eat anything and am sleeping well at night. I cannot praise HADACOL enough and I have taken only 4 bottles." (Mrs. Finley is a wise woman. She knows continued use of HADACOL prevents such distress from returning.)

Mrs. John R. Grizzle, Jr., 4903 B. Chaparral, Dallas, Texas. "I'm writing you to let you know just what HADACOL has done for me. I was feeling bad—nervous, had headaches, lost my appetite—so my mother advised me to get HADACOL and try it. My baby is only 2½ months old and it sure has helped me. I've taken only one bottle and it has done wonders. My husband is taking it now too, and he surely feels better, and not so tired after a day's work. I recommend HADACOL to everyone who needs a tonic, and it surely will make you feel better. I hope this will help someone to feel better by reading or hearing this information."

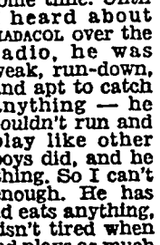


Mr. John Krumpelman, 127 Warren St., Lexington, Kentucky. "Four months ago I was suffering from lack of energy; no get up and go at all. I also had a lack of appetite and great irritability. Then my friends recommended HADACOL, and in a very short time my appetite began to go back to normal and it seemed as though a miracle had happened because everything was once again very bright."



Mrs. George F. Tuff of Poplar Bluff, Missouri. "I am 57 years old and I have started on the third bottle of HADACOL. I never have taken a medicine that helped me like HADACOL. I don't have neuritis aches or pains since I took the first bottle. I was so nervous, I had pains in my back, legs and arms till I couldn't work. Now I feel good and go all the time to work." (HADACOL gives such wonderful results because it treats the cause of such deficiencies.)

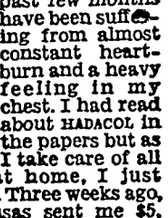
Mrs. Helen Barron of Meansville, Georgia. "My little boy had been sick for quite some time. Until I heard about HADACOL over the radio, he was weak, run-down, and apt to catch anything — he couldn't run and play like other boys did, and he wouldn't eat anything. So I can't praise HADACOL enough. He has taken 4 bottles and eats anything, and sleeps good, isn't tired when he gets up, runs and plays as much as anyone, has gained weight, and feels good. I have taken some myself. He is 11 years old now. I can't tell enough about what HADACOL has done for my son. He even looks better. I want all my friends to try HADACOL."



Mrs. Tom Kennedy, 1302 Rector Street, Hot Springs, Arkansas. "My trouble was terrible pains right after I ate my meals. I have tried pills but they didn't do any good, so I thought I would try HADACOL. After the first bottle of HADACOL, I got relief, so I wouldn't be without HADACOL. I have already told all my neighbors about HADACOL, how good it is. They are also taking it. I am 49 years old and I sure do feel a lot better, thanks to HADACOL." (What a wise woman Mrs. Kennedy is. She realizes continued use of HADACOL helps prevent such stomach misery from returning.)

Mr. Harry W. Smith, 10 North Water Street, Harrisburg, Illinois. "I am 41 years old, and I work at a Strip Mine. I have been bothered with aches and pains of neuritis and feel sleepy all the time, but my wife heard your broadcast on the radio about HADACOL. So I bought a trial size and it has helped me so wonderfully that I buy the large family size now. I can't begin to describe how I would feel if I couldn't buy it at all. I want everybody who feels bad to know about it."

Mrs. L. L. Martin, 4207 Woodhead Street, Houston 6, Texas. "I am sixty years old. For the past few months have been suffering from almost constant heartburn and a heavy feeling in my chest. I had read about HADACOL in the papers but as I take care of all the expenses at home, I just couldn't buy any. Three weeks ago, my son in Kansas sent me $5, telling me it was not for groceries but to please buy something for myself with it. I bought four bottles of HADACOL at $1.25 a bottle. After the first few doses of HADACOL I was free of heartburn and also of the heavy tired feeling I had been experiencing."



Beatrice Starks of 303 Milford Street, Honea Path, South Carolina. "I just had to write you a few words to try to tell you how much HADACOL has helped me. I had an operation in February. Then I started washing too soon, took neuritis in my hands and arms and after that couldn't do anything. I heard about HADACOL, decided to try it and I'm sure glad I did. My indigestion was so bad I couldn't eat anything I liked but now I can eat what I want. My hands don't hurt or my hips as they did before I started using HADACOL. Please keep hollering it out so others will hear about it."

What Steps Up The Flavor?

BUTTER!

Just a pat of butter in each bowl of soup doubles its appetite appeal. Adds nutrition, too. And butter does so much for the appetite appeal of other foods. Its natural golden color comes from rich golden cream — since four pints of cream go into the making of each pound of butter.

For nutrition, for health, for downright goodness . . . there's nothing finer than the high-score Iowa butter for which our creamery has built such a reputation. Use butter generously in cooking, and at every meal.

ANNA LOU DeWEERDT BRIDE OF GLENN WILLE JULY 18TH

The Rev. M. J. Manternach performed the double ring ceremony. Nuptial music was provided by Mrs. Gus Pappas of Garner.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father was attired in a nylon marquisette over satin gown, with long fitted sleeves, trimmed with nylon lace which formed the fitted bodice and train, her fingertip veil was held in place by a tiarra of pearls. She wore a five strand pearl necklace, a gift of the groom. Her bouquet was two orchids surrounded by white carnations.

She had as her attendants, her sisters, Miss Joanne DeWeerdt, as Maid of Honor, who was attired in a lavender nylon net gown with matching headpiece. Miss Ida DeWeerdt, as bridesmaid, was attired in a gown of yellow nylon net with matching headpiece. They both wore pearls. Their bouquets were of a lily surrounded by carnations.

Miss Joyce Barker, niece of the bride, was flower girl. Her gown was aqua organdy with matching headpiece. Her bouquet was a lily surrounded by carnations. She wore a strand of pearls.

David Weiss, nephew of the bride was in bearer. He wore a dark suit and carried the rings on a white satin pillow. He wore a white carnation boutonniere.

The groom's attendants were Darwin Wille, brother of the groom, as bestman with Allen Lau, brother-in-law of the bride, as groomsman. They all wore light suits. George Barker of Britt, brother-in-law of the bride and Raymond Wille of Klemme, brother of the groom were the ushers. They all wore white carnation boutonnieres.

The bride's mother wore a beige hemberg dress with matching accessories and the groom's mother wore an aqua dress with matching accessories. They both had pink carnation corsages.

Immediately following the ceremony a recepion was held in Hull's dining room at Garner. The bride's able was centered with a four tiered wedding cake, topped by a miniature bride and groom, and baked by Mrs. Claude White of Klemme. Mrs. Raymond Wille, sister-in-law of the groom, cut the cake, and Mrs. Harold Rockow, sister of the groom, poured. Lillian Wille and Darlene Barz were waitresses. Mrs. Orvin Anderson, sister of the bride was in charge of the guest book.

The groom is employed by the Iowa Farm Bureau Insurance Co., Cerro Gordo County and after a short wedding trip, they will make their home in Mason City.

One hundred and eighteen guests attended from St. Ansgar, Osage, Mason City, Klemme, Britt, Garner, Annawan, Ill., Barron, Wisconsin, and Honolulu, Hawaii.

The bride's going away outfit was of pink organdy with white accessories and she wore an orchid corsage.

IOWA TEACHERS CONSERVATION CAMP

(By Novella Bredbenner)

Miss Novella Bredbenner returned home Saturday night after spending three weeks at Springbrook State Park near Guthrie Center where she had attended the First Iowa Teachers Conservation Camp. Twenty-six elementary teachers from the various sections of the state attended this "outdoor school" and lived in cabins originally built for a C.C.C. Camp.

Dr. G. W. Mouser of the Science Department of Iowa State Teachers College was the Director of the camp. He was assisted by Dr. Dorothy Miller of I.S.T.C., Mr. George Worley of the State Conservation Commission, and Miss Iva Green of the State Department of Public Instruction. Each day during the three-week period the group was taken on a field trip by visiting specialists.

The first week at camp was spent in studying the conservation of soil. Dr. C. S. Gwynne, Geology Professor at Iowa State College, conducted several field trips to acquaint the group with the bed-rock formations and the glacial drift sheets of Iowa. Mr. M. A. Anderson, Extension Agronomist of Iowa State College, and Byron Barnes, Soil Scientist of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, took the group on a tour in Guthrie, Greene, and Carroll Counties to show them various soil association areas. Mr. J. E. Bishop, Guthrie County Extension Director, and M. B. Huntley, Farm Planner, conducted field trips to several farms in the area to show the group contouring, terracing, strip farming, grassed waterways, etc. Other guest speakers were Frank Mendell, head of the Soil Conservation Service, Wayne Pritchard, Chairman of Iowa State Soil Conservation Committee, Clarence Hidelbaugh, Guthrie County Soil Conservation Representative, and Lester Clapp, Extension Soil Conservationist of Iowa State College. Miss Aitchison, noted geographer, summed up the activities of the first week with a lecture on international conservation.

During the second week, the conservation of water received most emphasis. Mr. Kenneth Kiug, Assistant State Conservationist, spoke to the group about the need for water conservation in Iowa. Mr. B. I. Severson, Area Game Manager, and Dr. John Bardach, Biologist of Iowa State Teachers College, conducted a most interesting field trip at Lakin Slough. The students enjoyed wading waist-deep in the slough to discover the nests of marsh birds, the various types of water plants, muskrat mounds, and small animals of the slough. The Fourth of July was devoted to a field trip to nearby rivers and creeks where the plant and animal life was studied. One day during that week Earl Rose and Harry Harrison, Fisheries Biologists of the Conservation Service, helped the teachers seine fish in the lake in Springbrook Park. The native onlookers" were amazed to find so many kinds of fish in the lake—and no doubt wished that it was legal for them to seine! On one of their field trips they visited some of the 35 ponds that make up the fish hatchery at Lakeview, Iowa. As another part of their study of water conservation the teachers visted the Little Sioux Flood Control Project in Ida County and saw some farm ponds in Guthrie County. Another day six Conservation Officers from the nearby counties conducted the field trip and acquainted the teachers with hunting and fishing regulations.

The last week of the school was devoted to the Conservation of forests. On Monday an all day field trip was conducted by Bob Drexler, Farm Forester, and R. B. Campbell and E. T. Gardner, Extension Foresters of Iowa State College. The group visit a bottom-land forest area near Adel, and upland forest area near Winterset, and the Stevens State Forest near Lusas in southern Iowa. Dr. Martin L. Grant, Botanist from Iowa State Teachers College, conducted the field trip relative to the taxonomy and ecology of trees, and plants. Later in the week Mr. M. A. Ellerhoff, Supt. of Forestry of the State Conservation Commission, and two other foresters took the group on a field trip to show them how foresters select merchantable trees.

In addition to these various field trips conducted each day by visiting specialist, there were early morning bird hikes, laboratory periods where insects, leaves and flowers were mounted, and periods where methods of teaching were discussed.

Everyone who attended this First Iowa Teachers Conservation Camp felt it was most worthwhile and hope that next year more Iowa Teachers will be able to participate in this "outdoor school."

Too Much Hay

Dale Shaeffer, farmer of near Sumner, stored too much baled hay in a barn there recently. The barn gave way under the load, the hay bulging the walls outward and the entire structure collapsed.

Cool Under the Collar...

No matter how hot it gets, Tom Smith up the street stays pretty comfortable. Tom's house has a big screened-in porch that catches whatever breeze there is.

But it isn't just the breeze that keeps Tom's place cool. Tom himself is a cool, pleasant kind of guy. He can listen to a neighbor talk exactly opposite to what HE believes, without getting upset.

And that policy of respecting the other fellow's view adds a lot to his happiness, and even to his health.

"I figure the other fellow has a right to HIS ideas and tastes, just as I have to MINE," Tom says. "Things like clothes, what kind of breakfast food he eats, whether he likes a glass of ale better than beer — or iced tea better than coffee — all of those things are for HIM to decide."

That's what I like about Tom. He believes in other people's rights, even when it's 100 in the shade.

If YOU Want Parts

Every farmer is more or less familiar with his own machinery. He knows it's condition better than anyone else. He should know a little bit ahead of time what repair it is going to need before the machine is ready for the field.

Right now, transportation difficulties and shortages are making the parts situation very critical. If you are going to need anything not ordinarily carried in stock, get it ordered early, at least a month ahead of time.

GOOD CITIZEN

This is the third of a series of 10 articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

The second promise of a good citizen: I will serve on a jury when asked.

When you receive a notice of jury duty, your first reaction may be, "Brother, how can I get out of this?" It interferes with your work or leisure. It's a lot of trouble. The pay is chicken feed.

Yet anyone who dodges responsibility or jury duty digs his little spadeful away from the foundation of one of our country's broadest freedoms.

The obligation to serve on a jury is the reverse side of the right of trial by jury.

When you sit in a jury box and look at the accused on the stand, how can you fail to say, "There, but for the grace of God, go I?" Or, when listening to the two sides of a damage suit, how can you fail to say, "What if I were in the same fix?"

A jury of 12 impartial, open-minded men and women, a little cross section of the community, under oath, is every man's protection against injustice, individual prejudice, intolerance and persecution.

JURY DUTY is a chance to have a front-row view of how our democratic justice is administered.

You may have wondered why justice moves so slowly and why so much expense is justified in sometimes minor cases. From your seat in the jury box you will gain a new and comforting realization that the system of pleas, rules of evidence, objections, exceptions and legal briefs and arguments, complicated as it is, gives time and opportunity for the slightest ray of possible innocence to shine out—for the truth to prevail beyond the shadow of any reasonable doubt.

Lack of familiarity may have given you a distorted view of courtroom procedure, and a fear or dislike of courts in general. Jury duty gives you a new insight into the reasons for the many happenings of the courtroom which cannot fail to send you home a better citizen.

There are three kinds of juries on which you might be called to serve:

The grand jury's function is to hear complaints of the commission of an offense and to inquire, by aid of testimony presented by the district attorney, whether there are "prima facie," that is, "at first view," grounds for criminal prosecution. It functions, therefore solely in criminal courts.

IN A FEW states the grand jury may be done away with, even in murder cases, and the charges may thus be brought by the prosecutor, to avoid delays incident to grand jury hearings.

A trial jury, petit jury or common jury is used in all cases except when the accused elects to be tried by the court or is charged with only a "petty offense." It functions only after the grand jury has returned an indictment against the accused. Witnesses are presented both by the prosecuting officer in the behalf of the state or commonwealth and by the attorney for the defendant.

THE PETIT or common jury is employed in civil cases, except where the issue is one of such a nature that the case may be decided by the court (judge) without a jury. The procedure is much the same as in a criminal case, except that the district or state's attorney has no connection with it. Private citizens, and not the state or commonwealth, are the prosecutors in a civil suit, except where the state has a civil interest, as in a tax case, for example.

A coroner's jury is impaneled by the coroner to help decide facts surrounding death of one or more persons when there is cause to believe that death may have resulted from a criminal act. The coroner acts as presiding judge, has the power to call witnesses and may place suspected persons under bond to await grand jury action.

This article is Chapter 2 of the booklet "Good Citizen" produced by the American Heritage Foundation, sponsors of the freedom train. A complete book may be obtained by sending 25 cents to the American Heritage Foundation, 17 East 45th Street, New York, N. Y.

ILONA MASSEY, has had experience in playing a beautifu spy; she did it in two movies, "International Lady" and "Invisible Agent." So her role in the new NBC Monday night series, "Top Secret," is right up her alley It is based on the actual experiences of a spy whom she knows, but who could not possibly be so beautiful as Ilona. You've heard her sing in "Balalaika" and "Rosalie"; she has fun as a comedian in her latest picture, the Marx Brothers' "Love Happy." By the time you read this she may have publicly announced that the marvellous new ring she wears on her left hand means that marriage is in the offing; as yet she hasn't admitted it.

Porter Hall, the character star, has a nice, meaty role in Paramount's "Ace in the Hole," starring Kirk Douglas and Jan Sterling. Laid in Albuquerque, N. M., it is the story of a big-time newspaper reporter who hits the skids, then sees a chance for a comeback while covering the story of a man imprisoned below ground. Hall plays the newspaper editor.

Bandmaster Paul Lavalle and his "Band of America" will make a 15-minute recording of American marches for the State Department's "Voice of America." It will be released in Italy, with Lavalle doing the commentary, in Italian.

THE FICTION CORNER

WIND FOR THE MILLS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

IT WAS THE FAMOUS wind storm of 1935 which lasted three days and which nearly devastated the town of Mapleridge that gave Silas Kent the idea of selling his windmill to the town. The heavy gales practically ruined the mill as a useful farm appliance, a fact which was, actually, unimportant, as Silas had installed town water three years before. But it gave him the idea nevertheless; it was either a matter of paying to have the thing repaired, or sell it, and as Si was a hard-shelled old New England Yankee of the first water, the idea of paying for anything went against the grain.

He waited a month and then dropped over to his neighbor, Asa Gardeners.

"How's that?" said Asa, regarding Si in astonishment. "Sell the town that rickety old windmill? Sell it? Why, you blasted old highway robber! It's a wonder we ain't got out an injunction agin you long ago fer defacin' the landscape.'

Si reddened to his ears. "Rickety old windmill! You callin' my windmill rickety? Dang you, Ase, you're plumb onromantic and onsentimental."

"It's time it was torn down and drug off then," said Asa. "It's cluttering up the scenery."

The next day Si went down town and tackled other prominent citizens. But he was too late. Asa Gardener had, apparently, thought Si's idea about the best joke he'd heard in years, and had proceeded to let every one in on it. Worst of all, Mapleridge's citizenry saw eye to eye with the selectman. They were easily amused.

"How's that?" said Asa, regarding Si in astonishment. "Sell the town that rickety old windmill?"

Si came home in a rage He was serious in his idea about erecting the windmill on the village green. Why, they were even talking about getting a court order to make him tear it down. If they succeeded it would cost him some money. The thought was griping

It is necessary to note that coincidence played a big part in the events that transpired during the next week. For it was coincidence, most assuredly, that caused J. Allan Brown, philanthropist, public-spirited citizen of Boston, Mass., to pen the letter that set all Mapleridge agog. The letter was directed to S. Kent. He opened it in the postoffice, with half a dozen curious citizens standing idly by.

Within an hour every resident of Mapleridge knew that the great J. Allen Brown had spotted Si Kent's windmill; and wanted to buy it for $1500 to add to a collection of American relics he was making.

IT TOOK MAPLERIDGE about a half day to grasp the significance of all this, and then things began to happen. A special town meeting was held. Speeches were made to the effect that Si Kent's windmill was certainly a landmark and it would be a shame to have it moved off to some museum. Why, Si himself had suggested erecting it on the village green.

A committee was appointed to see Si the very next morning.

"What?" said Si. "Give you My windmill? After the way you talked? Dang you, get offin my property! Git offin it afore I have you throwed off!"

The committee withdrew to the sidewalk and consulted.

Presently they returned. Bert Englewood, a lawyer who was considered quite an orator, made a speech. He wound up by offering $2000 cash for the windmill, and Si weakened.

Triumphantly the committee withdrew and Si went back into his house. He closed the door and began to laugh, which was almost a phenomenon. Sara, his wife, looked at him in astonishment, and Si said:

"It's nothing, Sara, nothin' Only it's a lucky thing fer me them folks didn't insist on me showin' 'em that letter from J. Allen. Why, there wan't nothin' on it but a lot of scribblin, I done myself."

Stars of 'All Time' Don't Exist

By GRANTLAND RICE

IN THIS GOLDEN jubilee year which Connie Mack isn't enjoying too much with his Athletics, he has at least struck the smartest note in the manner of selecting all-time teams.

His embattled ball club may not be celebrating Connie's 50th year at the helm in the proper manner, but then Connie isn't doing any of the pitching or the hitting.

Grantland Rice

In attempting to get a deep background on all-time stars from the famous veteran, we ran into this rebuttal:

"I don't believe in picking outstanding stars except for every 10 or maybe 20 years. There can be no such thing as the greatest star over a period of 40 or 50 years. This goes for pitchers and hitters. It also goes for all football players and football teams. I'd say that a ranking every 10 years would be fairest. There are too many changes that take place—changes in methods of play, changes in equipment—that must be considered."

Mr. Mack happens to be 100 per cent right. Who, for example, could set Young, Johnson, Alexander and Mathewson against the best pitchers of today? There is no possible basis for any comparison. The old-timers threw a dead ball which could be fuzzed, emeried, watered, doctored and otherwise maltreated to such an extent that any number of odd things could happen.

Batters couldn't afford the Babe Ruth blast, the Ted Williams swing or the full-rounded clout that 90 per cent of the players use today. Ty Cobb might easily have been one of the best of all homerun hitters, using the modern system of swinging—full tilt. Babe Ruth might have batted over 400 many times by choking up his bat and going for singles. Cobb broke loose once in St. Louis and hit five home runs in two days Many of Ruth's strike-outs would have been singles and doubles with a shorter swing

Baseball has become an entirely different game from what it was from 1890 to 1920

Old-time pitchers might easily have had as much trouble winning 20 games today as they had in winning 35 or 40 over 30 years ago. It doesn't seem possible now that Babe Ruth came on as a slugger 31 years ago. Even at that time Ty Cobb said one day, shortly after the homerun outburst opened — "The old game is gone. The day of the pitcher and the base runner is over."

Many modern pitchers might have been 30-game winners back in other and entirely different years—the Fellers, the Lemons, the Sains, etc. But this is something no one can ever prove. Dizzy Dean was the last 30-game winner back in 1934, a matter of 16 years away.

Same in Football

The same periods of comparison belong to football. No all-time stars can involve both the pre-forward-pass year and the era following 1905. The two games—from 1870 to 1905, from 1906 to 1950—are nothing alike.

In the brave days of old, 11 men often played the entire game. Substitutes rarely got to play. Seventy-minute men were common. Later 60-minute men were not unusual.

Today the football athlete is a member of a large platoon. Or rather two platoons. Leading squads have an offensive team and a defensive team. Few football players, working on both offense and defense, can last 50 minutes.

So there is no way to compare a football player, such as Willie Heston of Michigan, with a modern back Heston was probably the finest ball carrier of all time. But he came before the passing game arrived. Heston weighed 190 pounds and could beat Archie Hahn, national sprint champion, for 50 yards. He once jumped over Walter Eckersal, in the safety position

They are always tinkering with football rules. No two decades are alike. It would be impossible to compare players of the 1910-1920 period with players of the 1940-1950 period.

In the same way it is impossible to compare Jones, Hagen and Sarazen from 1920 to 1930 with Hogan, Nelson and Snead

The implements are different For example, smart golfers figure the modern wedge saves from two to three strokes a round. They figure it is worth at least 10 strokes in a 72 hole test

Certainly the finely tempered steel shaft is a big modern aid In the old days a pro needed his own clubs. Now he can walk into a shop and pick up a new set before his round and play as well.

Courses are better groomed. Most of the low scores today are made over easy courses. Quite a change takes place when they go from a 270 scoring test to Merion with its 287 count. Many courses today lack the guarding rough.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

Uncle Charlie, Delancey Street Machiavelli, Sets a Trap

By BILLY ROSE

My Uncle Charlie is a man like this: Do him a favor and you've got—or are stuck with—a friend for life.

For instance . . .

Forty years ago when Charlie married my Aunt Frieda and moved into a flat on Allen street, things were so tough that they seldom knew where their next boiled potato was coming from, and the couple would have gone hungry many a night had it not been for a kindly baker on Delancey street named Schultz who occasionally slipped them a bag of stale bread.

Later, when my uncle got a job and began bringing home a fairish buck, he kept up his friendship with Schultz, and to this day if my aunt so much as buys an onion roll from another baker he'll shout, "Ingratenik! You're nipping the hand that once was feeding us!"

Billy Rose

A couple of months ago, Charlie finally got a chance to square up his long-standing debt when a Viennese gentleman named Dunkelmeyer opened a bakeshop a few doors away from Schultz's run-down establishment. It was quite a layout—newly-fixtured, complete with chromium counters and, as if that weren't enough, an hermetically-sealed display window outlined with neon tubing.

SHORTLY AFTER he opened, the Viennese began to spread it around that his competitor used unsanitary methods and that the raisins in his cupcakes sometimes had wings. This, of course, was hitting below the breadbasket, but it brought results and, as of a few weeks ago, the old baker's shop was as deserted as a nightclub at noon.

"What you're needing to stop this Jakie-Come-Lately," my Uncle Charlie told his friend one day, "is public relations."

"Won't do no good," said Schultz. "Even my private relations are buying from Dunkelmeyer."

"Then advertise," said Charlie. "I am recommending Battstein, Bartstein, Durstein and—pardon the expression—Osborn."

"Four fellas for one job?" said the old baker. "Who could afford it?"

"Besides, you should fix up your window. For instance, lay out the bagels like an American flag."

"Waste of time," said Schultz. "but I got another idea. This Dunkelmeyer is using machines to mix his dough and maybe your wife, Frieda, could talk it around that on his rolls he is sprinkling metal filings instead of poppy seeds."

"Too big a risk," said my uncle. "Dunkelmeyer could answer back that there is fingernails in your pumpernickel."

"So what?" said Schultz. "Better a fingernail than nuts and bolts."

THE NEXT EVENING as the old man was closing the store, Charlie asked to borrow his keys. "Maybe with the cellar key," he said, "I could get into Dunkelmeyer's basement?"

"On this block," said Schultz, "the locks are mostly the same. But what business you got in his basement?"

"It came to me a thought," said my uncle, "but don't worry, I'll be delicate like a ladyfinger."

That night happened to be Saturday and Delancey street—the Champs Elysees of the East Side—was a-hop with window-shoppers, and around 10 a crowd began to mob Dunkelmeyer's window. And small wonder—two mice were nibbling at the groom on top of a seven-layer wedding cake, while a third peeped in shy ecstacy from behind the bride's wedding dress.

When the gogglers were 10 deep, Charlie elbowed his way to the window "Is on account Dunkelmeyer has his mixing machines in the cellar," he explained to the crowd. "In them the mice are building nests."

Well, that did it, and a few days later when my uncle breezed into his friend's shop, the Dutchman kissed him on both cheeks.

"Dunkelmeyer is kaput," he said. "It wasn't ethics, but it brought back the customers."

"Up-to-date public relations," said Charley modestly.

"How you drilled a hole from the cellar up to Dunkelmeyer's window I can understand," said Schultz, "but where did you get the mice in such a hurry?".

"Simple," said my uncle. "I set a cage-trap in your pantry next to the cheese strudel."

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Three Men Speak

THREE LETTERS came to me this week from three angry men. They were not angry with me, but with all women. They are disgruntled over what they consider the unfairness of women, and the way the world expects to spoil and pamper women, and the amount of money women spend, and their discontent and inefficiency, and with the whole situation generally.

One of these men is in Spokane, Washington, one in Tucson, Arizona, and one in Fontana, Wisconsin. Of course, they don't know each other, but by a curious coincidence they all wrote at about the same time and they all say about the same thing.

"My wife knows that I have gone daily to the same office for the 11 years we've been married," says the Washington man. "She knows that my associates between the hours of nine and five are the same nice, friendly unexciting men. She knows that I get $5 a week for my lunches, and that I come home dead beat at night.

Thrilling Adventures?

"Yet I'll be darned," Jim Polk goes on youthfully, "if she doesn't talk as if I was off every morning for thrilling adventures. Our kids are now 9, 8 and 5, all in school, all healthy. Adele has so much more leisure than I have, or ever have had since I took my first job at 17, that there simply isn't any comparison. Adele can make her own schedule of hours; I can't. She telephones, goes to market, stops somewhere for lunch, and maybe takes in a movie. Or she talks with her friends about fresh curtains in the kitchen, or the children's clothes, or she lies down for a nap. Where the Hannibal," asks Jim disgustedly, "does she get the idea she gets the worst of it?"

"She telephones . . ."

Martin Elge of Fontana puts it even more forcefully. "Oughtn't a man to have equal consideration with his wife?" he demands. "The minute she gets tired or discouraged she threatens to claim alimony, take the kids, go back to her mother and get a job. Maybe he loves her and his home and his kids; that doesn't matter, she's lost interest. It's nothing to her that time will work almost any marriage into a good marriage," Martin goes on.

"That's true in my own case. In our forties we are a happily married couple. But there were years when my wife felt like a prisoner because of small children. Now with all of them settled, I've got the harder job, and she begins to see it. But all our young years were spoiled by her discontent and resentment; she paid little or no attention to me, except to say that she wished she had it as easy as I had.

Their Own Bosses

"Women have a better time, they spend more money, they're much more their own bosses than men," says this same letter. "They live longer; there are thousands of comfortable widows. They hold all the cards; they could make a man's life heaven, make him glad to get home, make him willing to work like the treadmill mule that most of us are, but do they do it? They do not.

"I believe," Martin finishes, "that you are a woman who might do something about it, about all this envy and nagging and the divorces that break up homes and take little kids away from their fathers. Some day aren't we going to begin to end the injustice of punishing men who haven't done anything wrong, unless it's wrong not to satisfy a spoiled woman?"

The third letter is short, and right to the point.

"A man's world!" writes Fred Fisher from Arizona. "Haw, haw, it is to laugh! I married a terribly pretty, sweet little girl when I was 21, and within six months she was running up bills, going about with other men, and mad as a snake because there was going to be a baby. She got the divorce on grounds of extreme mental cruelty.

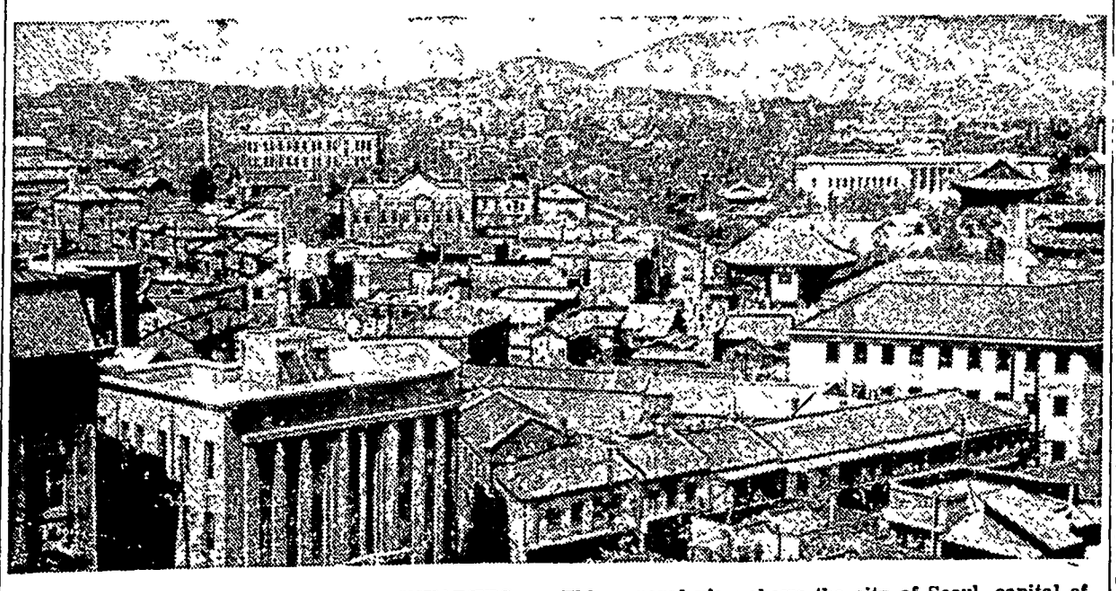
"Well, I was pretty grouchy in those days. Also she got my son, and by way of settlement, my father's home that he had left to me. She sold it at the real estate peak, took my boy to another town, had a swell time on the money, and married again.

"I married again, too, a much finer woman, but it was the same thing. She felt she was a slave and that I had it all my own way. We have two girls, their care certainly kept their mother busy for some half-dozen years, but it was lovely care, and I used to envy her.

EAST GERMAN STUDENTS SEEK REFUGE IN WEST BERLIN . . . Twenty-five boys and girls, representing an entire class at the Einstein high school in Potsdam, have been granted refuge in West Berlin. The class fled to West Berlin to escape arrest because of their resistance to the Communist school administration. The youngsters complained the teachers were ignoring usual studies and concentrating on political indoctrination and compulsory sports. The Red officials ordered the school closed and reprisals after the students distributed pamphlets attacking the puppet regime. Two of the class were seized but the rest managed to escape.

CRISIS IN UNITED NATIONS . . . Faced with the greatest crisis of its history, the United Nations ordered a halt to the Korean war. Ignored by the Communists, the U. N. found itself in a bad spot. Unless military sanctions were ordered and its authority in the world upheld, its future existence was but a matter of time. The delegates, however, voted 7 to 1 for an American resolution endorsing the President's decision to send aid to South Korea in the form of United States planes and ships. By its action the U. N. has secured its future and its influence in world affairs, observers have agreed. The security council is shown voting 9 to 0 to invoke Chapter VII of the U. N. Charter.

MRS. ROOSEVELT PAYS RESPECTS AT PATTON'S GRAVE . . . Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is shown with son Elliott and his children as they paid their respects at the grave of General George S. Patton, famed commander of the U. S. third army, in the Hamm military cemetery. From left are Mrs. Roosevelt; Elliott (partly hidden behind his mother); Chandler Roosevelt, Elliott's daughter; Mrs. Perle Mesta, U. S. minister to Luxembourg; and Elliott, Jr.



SOUTH KOREA CAPITAL FALLS TO INVADERS . . . This general view shows the city of Seoul, capital of South Korea, now in the hands of Communist invaders from North Korea. Scattered reports nearly a week after the sneak attack began indicated the invaders had passed beyond Seoul in its drive on Suwon to which the government fled shortly before the fall of the capital. The South Korea government had established a temporary capital at Taejon approximately 90 miles south of Seoul. The capital fell to the invaders four days after the opening attack as the Communists used tanks and planes which the South Korea forces did not have.

Lesson for July 30, 1950

NO MAN is too busy to serve God. He may think he is, but the excuse will not stand. There are too many busy men who do serve God. One of the most famous men in history is a shining example. If ever a King was "too busy" to attend to religion, David would have been the man. His kingdom was a new one, cemented together from tribes that had been at one another's throats not so long before. He was surrounded by enemies who kept him at war most of the time. He was commander-in-chief of the army, chief justice of such courts as there were, chief executive in civic affairs; and furthermore, the times were not "normal" but turbulent in the extreme. Still he had time for religion. He led in that as in everything else.

Dr. Foreman

Public Religion

THE first thing he did as king was to conquer the "unconquerable" city of Jerusalem, which had been in enemy hands for hundreds of years. And the next thing he did was to bring the Ark to Jerusalem and settle it there, making Jerusalem not only the civil but the religious capital of the nation.

In an almost spectacular way the king made himself sponsor for the organized religion of his people. For centuries before David, the Ark and all the formal worship that went with it had been stuck off in minor towns, inaccessible and unpopular, in fact disregarded by most of the people, as the book of Judges shows.

Now David, by bringing the Ark to Jerusalem and selecting for it a site on the city's highest hill, made sure that in his realm religion would never be an obscure thing. Sometimes we hear people say, "I believe in Christianity but not in the church." That is like saying "I believe in justice but not in the courts." "I believe in love but not in marriage." "I believe in education but not in schools."

David knew that if organized, public religion has to hide in holes and corners, it will not only lose respect, but people will soon forget all about it. The Ark was not an idol; neither is the Church. But if the Ark then, and the Church now, do anything else for religion, at least they keep it out where people can't help knowing about it.

Private Religion

DAVID knew, as some of his successors did not, that public worship is not the whole of religion. His personal relationships were controlled by his religious faith.

Take the case of Mephibosheth (chap. 9) for instance. If David had followed the usual pattern, he would have had poor Mephibosheth beheaded before breakfast. For the young man was the one remaining grandson (so far as we knew then) of David's bitter enemy, King Saul.

In those days you always went on the principle that if a man was your enemy, so were all his relatives. It was generally true, too; and under the customs of those days Mephibosheth might have been expected to plan revenge, sooner or later, for his grandfather's and father's deaths.

David did not let him sink into obscurity but gave him what we would call a pension, a princely one too, treating him as if he were one of his own family.

The Inner Life

WELL, religion has its outside but it also has its inside. Public worship and loving your neighbors are not the root of religion but its fruit. The roots of it are deep within the soul. And David had that true faith which comes from within.

He was humble, not proud, as Psalm 24 shows. Great king though he was, he knew there is only one King of Glory. He was confident, as every leader must be; but his confidence was based not on himself but on his God. (II Sam. 22, which is re-written as Psalm 18.)

And when David sinned, as he shamefully did, he did not make excuses for himself or sink with easy satisfaction into his worst self. If to be a saint is to be without sin, then David was no saint (and you are one?). But if being a saint means that in spite of sin one comes to have the cleansing kind of experience that Psalm 51 records, then David was a man after God's own heart.

Small Favor

A tramp entered a drugstore and asked for five cents worth of insect powder. The clerk paid no attention to him, and he repeated his request. "Say," said the clerk, "do you think I've got nothing else to do but waste time wrapping up five cents worth of insect powder?" "Who said anything about wrapping it up?" asked the tramp, and added, pulling out his collar, "All I want you to do is shake it down me neck."

SAFETY SIGNS WILL APPEAR ALL OVER KLEMME

Signs of safety will crop up all over Klemme August 17th as a result of the safety poster service subscriptin campaign now being conducted here by the American Legion Auxiliary as part of a state-wide project of the Iowa Safety Congress, Mrs. Dave Schwichtenberg, local chairman, said today.

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary are now contacting all business firms and public buildings in Klemme offering subscriptions to the safety poster service. The service includes:

1. A display "stop sign" with insert for safety posters.

2. A series of 52 weekly safety posters, each illustrating a specific safety lesson and featuring a cartoon personality named "Safety Sake."

papers and radio station carry- papers and rtdio stations carrying out the theme of each poster and a monthly movie, "IOWA SAFETY ON THE MARCH," which will be distributed through Iowa theaters.

The safety poster service will go into operation throughout Iowa August 17 and the "stop signs" carrying the first posters will appear in Klemme business houses and offices on that date, according to Mrs. Schwichtenberg.

Mrs. Schwichtenberg said that they will arrange to change posters in all "stop signs" in Klemmé each Thursday and that the same changes will be made by other youth groups in every community in the county and state on the same day each week.

"This is an entirely new method of safety education," Mrs. Schwicheenberg said, "in which young people, business and professional people and civic groups in Klemme can participate with others all over Iowa in hitting safety problems with greater force than has ever been possible.

She urged all Klemme business men "interested in safer living for all" to cooperate by subscribing to the safety poster service.

H. L. Bush, Jr., Iowa safety congress chairman for Hancock county, has called the safety poster service "the biggest safety education projeit based on ty education project based on ever been undertaken in this county."

"It's purpose," H. L. Bush, Jr. said, "is to create a broad, permanent safety consciousness in Iowa through constrant repetition of safety messages, through youth and adult participation in the project and by a saturation of safety material which will be possible if the poster service can be placed in every business house, office and public building in Iowa.

SAFETY UNIT TAKES SHAPE IN HANCOCK COUNTY

Organization of the Hancock County chapter of the Iowa Safety Congress has taken shape after two meetings at Garner recently. Purpose of the new organization is to make everyone conscious of the need for safety, on the highway, farm, in the home and everywhere else.

Twenty-one persons attended the first meeting held at the REA building on the west edge of Garner, with H. L. Bush, Hancock County REA project superintendent, county chairman, presiding.

Three vice chairman were elected as follows: Hancock County engineer, C. F. Merten of Garner, engineering; county Supt. Charles Whitney, schools, Hancock county Sheriff L. M. Brower, enforcement.

Committees for safety in its various aspects were named as follows: Schools, Talkus Ahrenkiel of Klemme; home, Mrs. E. A. Ayres of Goodell, state conservation officer; industrial safety, J. W. Pritchard, Britt; commercial vehicles, Edwin Bock, Garner; and traffic safety, Clarence Daniels, Garner marshal.

Fish Dinner!

TIMES PUBLISHERS ATTEND N.E. IOWA FISH FRY AT LANSING

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, Sr. drove to Lansing, Iowa, Friday morning where they were guests of the North-East Iowa Press Association at an outing and fish-fry.

The visiting publishers and their wives, some over 150 people, were taken by boat up the Mississippi river near the Minnesota border to an island. A 5:00 o'clock fish dinner was served on the island. Over 150 pounds of dressed cat fish were prepared by a game warden and everyone had all the cat fish they could eat, along with French fries, cold slaw, pickles, bread and butter, coffee and cake.

Had Ride On Private Boat

Two boats were used to transport the people from Lansing to the island. Mr. and Mrs. Jorgenson were privileged to make the trip on a $50,000 cabin cruiser owned by a toy manufacturer at Lansing. The boat was completely equipped with modern kitchen sink, kitchen cupboards, hot and cold running water; electric refrigerator and gas stove. The boat also had a modern bath room, sleeping quarters for 8 persons in the cabin. The front of the boat was glassed in and finished in black walnut. Plans are to finish the entire boat in walnut. A lot of people could be seated on the top deck, as well as on the foredeck. The boat was powered by two large marine engines in a fire-proof room. There was ample room for about 40 people to make the trip up the river on this boat. Another large launch made two other trips to accomodate the visitors.

Northeast Iowa is very scenic and is called "The Switzerland of Iowa." It would be a good place to spend a vacation as the scenery is similar to the Ozark Mountains in Missouri and Arkansas.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

No story this week. Instead, an outright safety plug. The kind of thing that makes some people glance at the nearest clock and claim a previous appointment. This happens, I suppose, because safety is not a thing, not something we can take home and show the wife. or stick on our cars, or buy an extra five pounds of "just in case."

Safety is not a commodity. If it were, someone could shout, "Safety is scarce! The price is going up! Get your now!" And perhaps we would have a run on safety.

Well, it can be shouted anyway. Because safety is scarce. The price is going up. Every year in Iowa some 1800 killed, some $25 million lost in all kind of accidents. That's scarcity. That's high price.

And now the plug. (Second chance to get to that appointment.) The Iowa safety congress has a stockpile of safety. But they have the old problem of distribution, the problem of getting safety awareness to all the people in a steady supply.

The answer: Get safety into the places where people shop, work and relax. The safety poster service of the congress proposes to do this. Civic groups are now offering subscriptions to this service to business firms in every Iowa community. The goal: To get a poster container made in the shape of a stop sign into 25,000 Iowa business, manufacturing and service firms, offices and public places by August 17.

On that date, and on each Thursday thereafter, a safety poster will be placed in each of these stop signs. The posters will hit a specific safety theme all over the state at the same time and for a full week.

They call this "safety saturation." It's the same method used to sell soft drinks and cigarettes. If the posters are displayed in enough places in Iowa there isn't a one of us who won't get some safety injected into his life each week.

And considering that safety is so scarce, so high priced if you haven't got it, that's something.

IOWA DRAFT QUOTA IS HIKED TO 860

Des Moines,—Iowa will have to furnish 860 men in the September call, an increase of 516 over the original September call, Brig. Gen. Charles H. Grahl said Friday.

General Grahl, Iowa selective service director, said this would mean about 1,800 more men would have to be called in for pre-induction physical and mental examinations.

Iowa's original call had been 344 men for September. About 1,300 had been notified to report for examinations to fill this quota.

The defense department Thursday had issued a call for 100,000 men for the entire United States for September and October.

Iowa is expected to have to furnish about 1,000 men in Oct.

RELOCATION OF HIGHWAY 18 IS UNDERWAY

Relocation of highway 18 from Garner east on the north side of the Milwaukee railroad tracks is already under way, it was revealed Thursday in a letter from F. R. White, Ames, chief engineer of the state highway commission.

The work already has been done in surveying the location of the highway from the overpass west ofGarner to the Cerro Gordo county line, he said. Soil tests and work on plans also is well under way, White reported.

"It is our intention to proceed to let contracts for this grading, bridge and culvert work from Garner east as soon as we can procure the necessary right of way and compete the other necessary preliminary work," the chief engineer wrote

"We expect in the near future to release the plans for this project to our right of way division for the purchase of the necessary right of way."

The grading and bridge and culvert work from Garner east to the Hancock-Cerro Gordo county line is included in the 1950 program approved by the state highway commission, White said, but the program does not include any item for paving.

Neither does the 1950 program include any grading, bridges or culverts on the Cerro Gordo county end of the road, the chief engineer said. Preliminary surveys are known to nave been made, however, from the county line east to connect with the new blacktop road between Mason City and Clear Lake.

Annual Priebe Reunion In Klemme Park Last Sunday

WATCH FOR LEAF SPOT IN TOMATOES NOW

Iowa tomato plants have now reached the stage of growth when fungus leaf spot is beginning to appear and destroy the lower leaves, observes Arden Sherf, Iowa State College extension plant pathologist.

The disease shows up when the plants become bushy. It may be idenified by small, round spots with dark brown edges and gray centers. The spots usually appear first on the lower leaves, and they increase in size until the leaves turn brown and finally drop off.

During cool, wet weather with splashing rains, the upper leaves also become diseased. Loss of leaves from the disease results in reduced yields and poor quality fruit, Sherf points out.

He says spraying or dusting with a copper or organic fungicide will control such leaf diseases if applied immediately and at 10 to 14-day intervals until August. Recommended copper compounds include Compound A, Kopper King or Tribasic applied at rates of 1 pound in 25 gallons of water or 1 heaping tablespoon per gallon.

Bordeaux mixture will control this disease, but it is hard on the plants and may reduce yields, Sherf says. Organic sprays such as ziram and nabam are useful, but not widely available as yet.

Dusts are not as satisfactory as sprays because poorer coverage generally results. However, a number of dusts are on the market and will be of value if applied at 4 to 6-day intervals. They should contain at least 6 percent copper or 10 percent of an organic compound, Sherf says.

Complete vine coverage is most important, especially just before rainy periods. Tomato leaf spot is always less serious where the tomato patch is moved to new ground each year, since the disease overwinters in dead vines.

CREAM SEPARATOR MORE EFFICIENT WHEN WASHED AFTER EACH USE

Hancock County farmers who wash their separators only once a day may be pouring plenty of cream in the hog trough, says county director, Paul Henderson.

If milk and cream aren't thoroughly washed out of the separator right after separating is done they will harden onto the plates and bowl. This hardened material obstructs the flow of milk and cream, Henderson points out, causing poor separation and loss of cream.

Hardened cream between the plates will route the flow of cream along one plate directly into the flow of skimmilk on the plate above it. In other words, these lumps will "unseparate" the milk and cause cream to go out through the skimmilk spout. Too, clots in the cream outlet will partly block the passage of cream and force additional amount of it into the skimmilk. The butterfat test also will fluctuate of hardened lumps in the cream and bowl slime will cause extra wear on the spindle and tend to unbalance the bowl.

Washing the separator twice a day actually takes less time than washing less often and giving solids a chance to harden onto bowl parts, Henderson reasons.

When the separator is washed after each use the milk and cream are loose and can be whisked off in a few minutes. There's an Iowa State College pamphlet available in the county extension director's office that tells how to wash a separator in 2 minutes.

Must Have Been Green

During his early playing days, the late Babe Ruth possessed an enormous appetite. Often, at the ball park, he would eat a half-dozen frankfurters at a sitting.

One afternoon in the locker room before the game, manager Miller Huggins noticed that Ruth looked a little green.

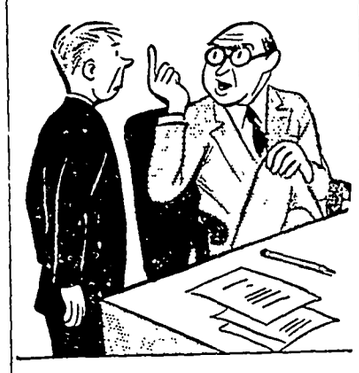
"Is something wrong, Babe?" he asked.

"My stomach's acting up," said Ruth. "It must be that party I went to last night. I never saw so much food in my life; lobsters, crabs, clams, roast turkey, fried chicken and to top it off—strawberries."

"And I suppose you helped yourself to everything in sight," said the manager.

"Yes," confessed Ruth with a groan. "But that's the last time I'll ever eat strawberries!"

OUGHT TO SUE



A well-known lawyer was always lecturing his office boy—whether he needed it or not. One day he chanced to hear the following conversation between the boy and the one employed next door.

"How much does he pay you?" asked the latter.

"I get $2,000 a year," replied the office boy—"ten dollars a week in cash and the rest in legal advice."

Three Stories

Here are three Samuel Goldwyn stories:

Goldwyn in a talk to his employees started off with: "Gentlemen, I want you to know that I am not always right—but I am never wrong."

And the one about some visitor admiring his wife's hands. "Yes," said Goldwyn, "she has got beautiful hands—I am thinking of having a bust made of them."

And when he decided not to join a certain undertaking by several Hollywood producers, Goldwyn said: "Gentlemen, include me out!"

Dangerous Spot

A Yankee tourist was out sightseeing in London. They took him aboard the old battleship Victory, which was Lord Nelson's flagship in several of his famous naval triumphs. An English sailor escorted the Yank over the vessel, and coming to a raised brass tablet on the deck, he said, as he reverently removed his hat:

"'Ere, sir, is the spot where Lord Nelson fell."

'Oh, is it?" replied the American blankly. "Well, that ain't nothin'. I nearly tripped on the durned thing myself."

Quick Recovery

That's a wonderful nurse you have here," said the hospital patient to the intern. "The touch of her hand cooled my fever instantly."

"Yeah," agreed the intern, "we heard the slap all through the ward."

NO TIME TO QUIBBLE

The hunter came running back to the others of the party. "Just met a big bear," he panted, breathlessly, pointing to the woods, "back there."

"Good!" shouted the others almost in unison.

"Did you let him have both barrels?"

"Both barrels?" demanded the nimrod. "I gave him the whole gun!"

THE APPRENTICE

The quack was selling an elixir which he declared would make men live to a great age.

"Look at me!" he shouted. "Hale and hearty and I'm over 300 years old!"

"Is he really that old?" a listener asked the man's assistant.

"Really, I can't say," replied the assistant. "I've only worked for him for 100 years."

Personal Question

The doctor was questioning the new nurse about her latest patient. "Have you kept a chart of his progress?"

The nurse blushingly replied, "No, but I can show you my diary."

GOLF BALL AND GEIGER COUNTER

More and more privileges are being taken from us. Scientists are about to make it impossible to lose a golf ball. In Akron, Ohio, a rubber corporation has turned out a radioactive ball which "talks" amid the weeds, dead leaves and tall grass. The supplemental equipment is a miniature Geiger counter to which the pellet says, "Here I am—a little to the right of that bush!" The nonloseable golf ball will soon be put on public sale. It makes us sad. We could always lose golf balls without trouble. In fact we were for years high-stand man in our club for unrecovered ones. It was our only golfing distinction. And now science steps in to make us spend more time in the fairways!

Between six and seven million golf balls are lost every year, the rubber company says. (That's an understatement. The average foursome loses that many in one summer season.) The radioactive golf ball will cost no more, but the Geiger counter will set you back about $25. This $25 will, it is pointed out, keep you from losing at least $100 worth of balls.

We shall fight it with every hook at our command. The lost golf ball has been the backbone of golf for most players. It kept conceit down. The hope of someday keeping in a fairway lured on the duffer year after year. And it was important in character tests.

Nothing gave you a better line on a competitor than his conduct in the rough. It was then, as he thrashed in the underbrush, that you could assay his true virtues or lack of 'em. Here the demon in him came out. Here his footwork revealed the touch of larceny in him. Here you could tell whether he was a gentleman or a heel, man of honor or cross-country crook. But it was part and parcel of the ancient Scotch game. Down with the radioactive golf ball! Having one of the things in our pocket could throw us off form some more. We have always longed to be a hot golfer, but not scientifically ablaze. Golf instructors of America, arise! These things will kill your business. Where will you get any easy dough with the duffers having no real trouble?

Once the nonloseable golf ball is on the links there will come the shot to the pin by radar, the nonswerving putt and the electronic backswing.

Somebody will invent a club that buzzes or flashes a red light when gripped wrong or taken back out of the arc. (Flash! Mr. Elmer Twitchell, famous scientist, engineer, pinochle shark and stamp collector, just announced that he has perfected an electronic device for use in locker rooms during postmortems. It is a sensitive instrument hidden in the ceiling. When any player starts lying about his game it whistles. Nice little gadget to have in the home, too.)

The chances that the report and warning will be read by the judges and politicians who keep the drunken operators in possession of their licenses are remote.

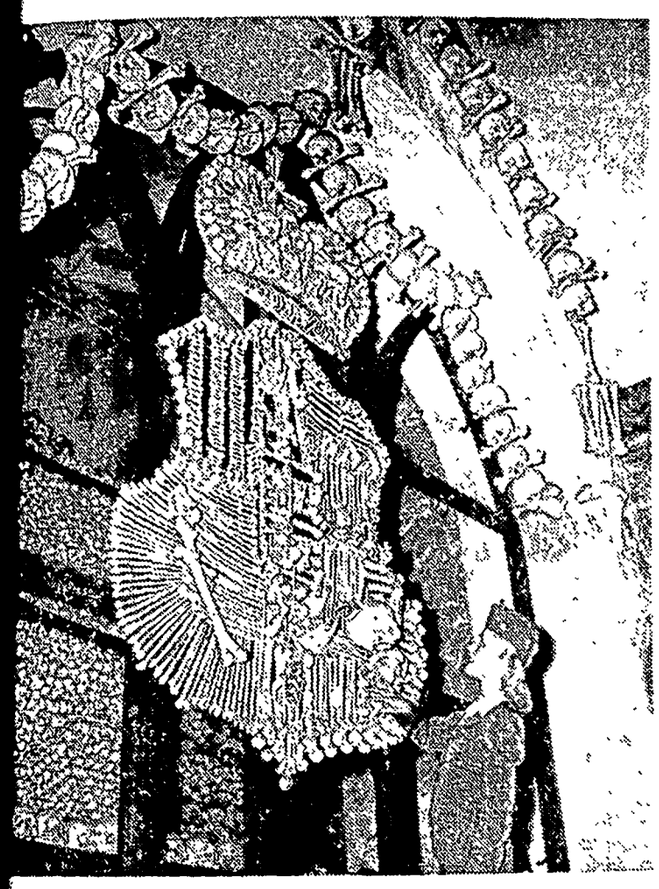
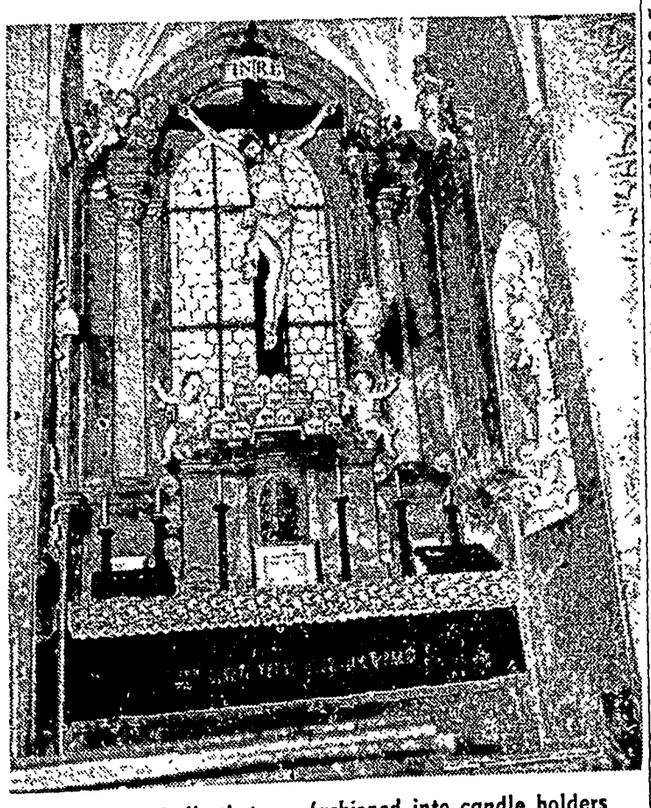
CHURCH OF BONES



weekly Picture story

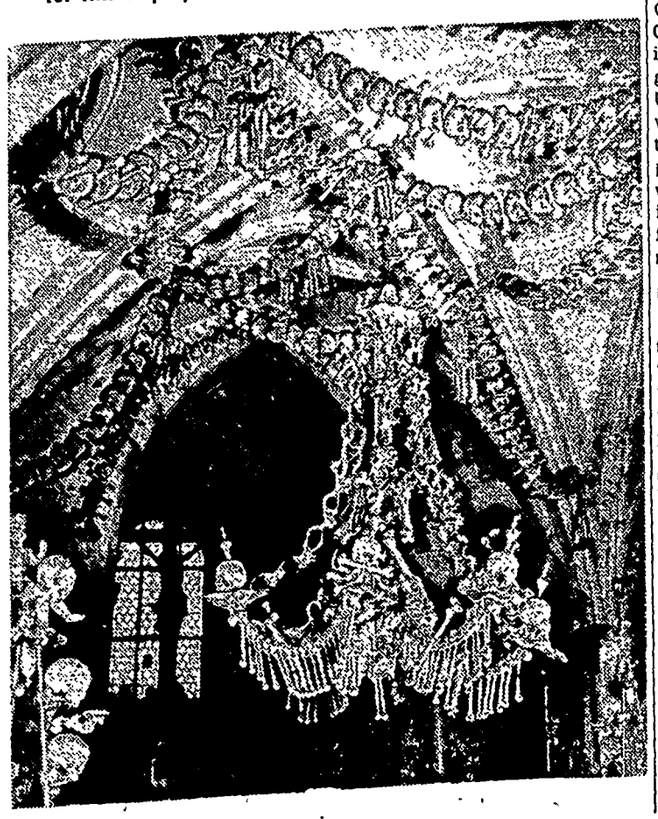
● Pan American hostess Marcella Vocelova (left) looks at this intricate shield belonging to the house of Count Schwarzenberg whose family has taken care of the church for generations. How and why the bones were put into the church varies with the storyteller. Built in 1280 when a traveler brought earth from Jerusalem for its altar, the church and its yard became a very popular cemetery. Everyone wanted to be buried in its hallowed ground. The 10,000 bones came from the bodies in the cemetery.

● This eerie scene (right) startles and stops the tourist in his track. On entering the church he sees first a row of gleaming human skulls lining the top of the altar beneath the figure of Christ. Skulls stare from the niches on the sides where they have been fitted into lamps. Church instruments include a chalice made of bones.



● Other skulls that are fashioned into candle holders and monstrance bear sword marks, and some still contain bits of teeth. Miss Vocelova (left) inspects some of the altar instruments. The caretaker shows the visitor this display with a noticeable lack of enthusiasm.

● The chandelier (right) is an inspiration of horror and causes more visitors to retreat than anything else. Strings of skulls form shadows on the ceiling. And when the candles in this grotesque chandelier are lit, the skulls give an uncanny impression that they are participating in the ceremony. One account reports this display was conceived and arranged by a blind monk.



UNITED NATIONS

UN Korean Action Is Collective Security Move for World Peace

What the League of Nations was never able to accomplish the United Nations has done: undertaken collective security for peace. For the first time in history there is international collective action—in Korea, and it is under the aegis of the United Nations.

The United States is acting in Korea as a member of the United Nations and because of United Nations action, dramatically taken within 18 hours after Secretary-General Trygve Lie first made his before-dawn calls to delegates and secretariat personnel to get on the job that Sunday, June 25.

Ambassador Warren R. Austin, Chief United States delegate to the United Nations who introduced the historic resolution calling for United Nations police action in Korea.

The American Association for the United Nations points to the temptation on the part of some to speak of the Korean conflict in terms of a United States rather than a United Nations action. It is an effort on the part of the UN to stop a clear-cut case of aggression by the North Korean government on the Republic of Korea. It is an effort which has received the support of more than 40 nations of the world. It is an effort under the United Nations blue and white flag and under a commander appointed through the UN.

The UN Security Council asked the U. S. to appoint a chief of the forces fighting under the UN flag. Gen. Douglas MacArthur has been appointed. The Council also asked for periodic reports from the U. S. As a U. S. soldier, he is responsible to the Commander-in-Chief, President Truman, at the same time that as commander for UN forces, he is responsible to the UN Security Council too.

Ambassador Warren R. Austin, chief U. S. delegate to the UN, has indicated that the efforts for international action "may well have been a turning point in man's struggle for means to unite his strength against aggressors, to rally effective defense for the principles of peace."

The independence of Korea has been a United Nations matter since September 17, 1947. Korea, formerly a part of the Japanese Empire, was surrendered to the Allies at the end of World War II, that area north of the 38th parallel to Russian troops and that, south of the 38th parallel, to the troops of the U. S.

UN Problem Since '47

There followed the setting up of a commission, of U. S. and Russian representatives, to look into the matter and make recommendations, in consultation with Korean representatives, for forming a Korean government. The commission, after several attempts, was deadlocked on all major issues of the problem. In August of 1947, the U. S. proposed that the Korean situation be referred to the four signers of the agreement reached at Moscow (China had subsequently endorsed this agreement). China and Great Britain agreed; Russia objected, so the U. S. submitted the Korean problem to the United Nations General Assembly in September 1947.

There was prolonged discussion in the Assembly of the question, and one proposal after another was submitted on the matter of holding elections and withdrawing troops from both the Southern and Northern sections. Basically, Russia wanted Korean representatives to sit in on the Assembly discussions. The United States maintained that consultations should take place in Korea itself as only an election, observed by a UN commission, could prove who the elected representatives of Korea would be. Finally, the U. S. argued that elections should be held before discussion of withdrawal of troops was undertaken as the Soviet had suggested. The U. S. view was upheld by a majority. Russia then refused to participate in the work of the UN Commission established to facilitate the elections and withdrawal of occupation troops.

After months of preparation, the UN commission supervised an election in South Korea on May 10, 1948. Meanwhile, a Democratic People's Republic of Korea had been set up in Northern Korea and was recognized by the Soviet Union in October 1948. The Government of the Republic of Korea (South) was recognized by the UN General Assembly as the only legitimate government of Korea. This government was recognized by the United States in January 1949, as well as by France, Great Britain, the Philippines and others, and applied for membership in the UN. It was rejected because while the vote in the Security Council was 9 to 2 in favor, the veto of Russia—a permanent member—obtained.

Unification Unsuccessful

Here it might be well to point out that even if Russia had been attending the Council meetings after the invasion of South Korea, the veto would not necessarily have paralyzed UN action. The General Assembly — in which there is no veto—could have been called into special session and member nations could have taken steps toward collective international action much as has been done. The United Nations Charter provides for collective action in Article 51, which makes possible individual or collective self-defense against armed attack.

After the Korean elections, the UN General Assembly renewed its Commission in Korea to try to bring about unification, observe withdrawal of troops and be available for consultation as the Koreans needed it in solidifying their government. The Commission was not successful in its efforts, and was not able to go north of the 38th parallel to make observations. It was able, however, to report removal of U. S. occupation forces from Southern Korea on June 29, 1949, and it was renewed, with stronger powers by the General Assembly in October 1949. The Commission was therefore on the scene and operating as it could in the turmoil and uncertainties of a neophyte nation—divided by two ideologies — when the attack came. It verified the fact that North Korea had committed an act of aggression.

United Effort

Within 18 hours after Ambassador Gross (Ernest Gross, deputy U. S. representative to UN) called Trygve Lie in the middle of the night to request a meeting of the Security Council, the United Nations had acted. It was this resolution (of the UN) which enabled President Truman to make his historic decisions.

"The events that have followed have been the most inspiring I have witnessed in my career as the Representative of the United States at the United Nations. If proof ever were needed of the vitality of the United Nations, this situation has provided it. If proof ever were needed of the strength of United States support for United Nations principles, this situation has provided that also.

"But perhaps most significant of all has been the manner in which the vast majority of the member nations have rallied to the call of the Security Council for assistance to the Republic of Korea. The Organization of American States, speaking for 21 nations, adopted by acclamation a resolution endorsing the action of the Security Council. Many of the Latin-American states have buttressed this collective expression of their solidarity with individual messages of support.

"India and Pakistan, the largest free nations in Asia, have endorsed the action taken by the United Nations. Moving evidence of the particular concern of the smaller nations for the success of United Nations action against aggression has come from Thailand. Unable to contribute armed forces, Thailand has expressed its willingness to provide foodstuffs, such as rice.

"The nations which have announced their support for the action now under way in Korea under the aegis of the United Nations, have forcefully expressed their conviction that this issue is not between two power blocs, but between an aggressor and the United Nations. This magnificent collective response is the world's best hope that peace will be restored and maintained."

MacArthur Heads United Nations Forces

UN Secretary-General Trygve Lie has sent to General Douglas MacArthur, via the U. S. government, the UN Nylon flag which Dr. Ralph Bunche flew over his headquarters during the Palestine conflict. Mr. Lie asked Ambassador Austin to bring it back to him when Gen. MacArthur was through using it, as Dr. Bunche had done.

By this action the United Nations has proclaimed to the world its determination to end aggression and that the military action in Korea is a UN undertaking.

Injured By 2x4

As some cattle were being prepared for auction at a sales barn, one of the steers charged into the chute, knocking loose a 2x4 brace. The timber fell on Herman Rohwer, O'Brien county resident, and gave him a fatal skull fracture. Mr. Rohwer was visiting his son in Minnesota, where the accident occurred.

Bumblebee

When a bumblebee invaded his automobile, J. E. Heyer of near Manchester ran his car into the side of a bridge. His wife, a passenger, required treatment for bruises and shock.

Archers Meet

At Chariton, an archery club is functioning, with a dozen or more Chariton men turning out every Sunday afternoon to compete in this ancient sport.

Drinks Fuel Oil

Two year old Jimmy Vigars, of near Eldora, investigated the contents of a tank of fuel oil in the farmyard of his home. He turned the spigot and drank some of the oil. The doctor pumped him out and the lad has recovered.

One of Iowa's most famous collections is the Matt Kickels gun collection at Iowa Falls. A Topeka dealer has recently issued a 22-page brochure describing in detail the 1300 guns which comprise the collection.

Floating Brooder House

While trying to save 500 baby chicks, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hassman got a short downstream ride in a brooder house. A flash flood swept the house from its foundations with the Hassmans still inside. For Warm Summer Days— MOLDED SALADS ARE TOPS

Have you tried cool appetizing salads for those hot summer lunches? A few new tricks are all you need to encourage your family to eat those fresh fruits and vegetables that are so important to your daily food plan.

On hot summer days you want something cool and appetizing for your family, so why not try a molded salad?

"Summer salads are easy to prepare for it's just a matter of using all those fresh fruits and vegetables in new interesting combinations," says Mrs. B. Mildred Smith, Iowa State College foods and nutrition specialist.

Molded salads make good meals come easier, too. You can use raw foods, simple foods and even leftovers to make them. In salads even leftovers become food to be eaten instead of "scraps" to be snubbed. Molded salads give you a chance to prepare the salad in advance, too.

Use Wide Varieties

Many of your fruits, vegetables, meats, fish, poultry, and even egg salad mixtures can go into plain gelatin or aspic and you have an entirely new salad. Salads used for main dishes use a protein or some type of energy food along with the crisp colorful fruits and vegetables because they occupy the chief place in your meal. Main dish salads are a basic part of your daily food plan so they should fill in many of the essential vitamins and minerals that make our meals healthful.

Foods don't lose their crisp freshness in gelatin as they do when they are exposed to drying refrigerator air. In gelatin salads the foods are kept fresh and bright in color.

Prepare the gelatin and let it partially set. Then add the desired salad mixture. The food will be mixed evenly through the gelatin that way—it won't sink to the bottom.

To have neatly unmolded salads, you may do one of two things. First, rinse the mold with cold water before you pour the gelatin into it. When it is set, dip the mold into hot (not boiling) water. Then turn the salad out and serve. Or you may oil the mold with salad oil before the gelatin mixture is poured in. Then run a knife around the upper edge and turn the mold upside down. Give it a quick shake and the molded salad is ready to serve. If salad greens will add to the appearance and flavor of your salad, use them with our salads. Greens are not always necessary.

Add A Garnish

Many salads need a garnish to set off their beauty and to add interest in color, texture and cold plates. Hot weather is not may be eaten so they should be a pleasant addition to the salad.

Keep the foods for cold salads cold and serve molded salads on cold plates. Hot weather is not a friend of molded salads. When you unmold your salads place them back in the refrigerator to harden before serving. Then serve at the last minute.

Good salad making is three-fourths imagination—once you know the rules. Simple salads are best. Use colors and flavors that go together. Select a dressing that suits the salad. Do not over-mix salads. Cut foods into pieces large enough that you can tell what they are; small enough to handle with ease. Choose the serving dish that best sets off the salad.

Above all, say the nutrition specialist, be an artist at contriving new salads. Make use of your artistic ability and imagination when you make tempting summer salads. Vary the way you make and serve them to suit your artistic eye.

Night Out

Two year old Arnold Bries, Jr., of near Millville, enjoyed a night out recently. He strayed from his home and was the object of an evening search by about fifteen persons. The big search party started in again at daybreak and found the boy, fast asleep on a clump of hay, about 5:30 a. m.

Trucks Crash

At Emmetsburg, John Thompson escaped unhurt when a gasoline tankwagon he was driving was hit almost broadside by a gravel truck. The tanker rolled completely over, coming up on its wheels. There was no fire.

Accidents Take Arms

Two Iowans lost arms in accidents last week. At New Sharon, Raymond Clark accidently shot off his right hand with a gun and the arm was amputated just below the elbow. At Strawberry Point, Jerome Pugh reached into a hay-baler, slipped and his arm was caught in the rollers.

Received Broken Vertebrae

While diving and swimming in a sand-pit, Paul Carter of Sidney dived too deep into shallow water and received a broken vertebrae in his neck. At first he thought only his shoulder was injured but he lost the use of the left arm and an x-ray revealed the extent of his injury. He will wear a neck-brace for the next six months.

Pledged $40,000

At Britt, James and Ross Kent, bachlor brothers, pledged a total of $40,000 to the Hancock county Memorial hospital. The pledged gift is one-third of the total amount, $125,000 needed to supplement a $100,000 bond issue voted by the county. The brothers have been residents of the county since 1892.

Anniversary Clock

Mrs. Henry Scheer of Humbolt recently received an "anniversary" clock from her daughter, who now lives in Germany. The clock is so-called because it requires winding only once a year and is a standard item of manufacture there.

Unhurt By Fall

James Hopkins of Earling received only minor injuries recently when the 19-ton bulldozer he was driving plunged off a 20 foot embankment. Hopkins jumped as the machine took the plunge and wound up wedged between the big machine and the embankment. It took two bull-dozers and a drag line two days to pull the machine from the ravine.

High Priced Firecracker

It cost 22-year old Bill Sangwin, Cherokee, $50 to toss a firecracker last week. Police said Sangwin tossed the cracker out of a hotel window and it struck a woman pedestrian on the leg, burning her when it exploded. The explosive missed the two babies she was pushing in a perambulator.

Power Line

Pilot Paul Bowman of LeMars misjudged an REA powerline while spraying corn by air one day last week. The line caught on one of the metal wheel-pants and snapped, without damaging the plane.

Hospitalized By Burns

Ten year old Dennis Herzberg of Clarinda was hospitalized last week while watching a mechanic fix a tractor. A spark-plug had been removed and when the engine started, Dennis was sprayed with blazing gasoline. His condition is satisfactory.

Bees String 2 Year Old

Allen Whicher, two year old West Union lad, upset two beehives while playing at his grandparents' home near there recently. He received between 300 and 400 bee-stings. In rescuing him, his grandparents and mother were also badly stung.

Rustlers

Mr. and Mrs. Emmert of near Reinbeck were the victims of cattle thieves recently. While they were away from home, thieves stole three calves and hauled them away.

Porker

George Mortensen, Elk Horn farmer, marked a pig last week that weighed 990 pounds; ten short of being half-a-ton. Sale price at the dock was seven cents a pound.

IF WAR CONDITIONS CONTINUE
Fuel Oil Will Be Shorter And Higher This Fall
BUY NOW AND PREPARE FOR THE HEATING SEASON!

Place your order now for fuel for fall and winter. Our suppliers tell us that short supplies of heating oils are definitely in the picture for next fall and winter . . and that prices will be higher. This is due to the fact that so many people all over the counry are converting from coal heat to oil. And at the same time a smaller proportion of crude oil is going into fuel oils. It all adds up to a smaller supply and a bigger demand.

This is not a scare story, but the facts as told by daily stories in the Chicago Journal of Commerce and other business papers.

Prices for fuel oils are going up every day along the Gulf Coast. This is contrary to normal for this time of year.

It will pay you to install additional farm storage now and to order all the fuel you can before fall. Protect yourself against price rises and insure yourself of a full supply.

A WORD TO THE WISE IS SUFFICIENT. Let your Tank-truck Salesman know what your needs will be and that way we can have enough fuel oil on hand to take care of our customers.

If you will fill your storage on the farm and at your home now then we will be able to fill our storage. That way we'll all be better prepared.

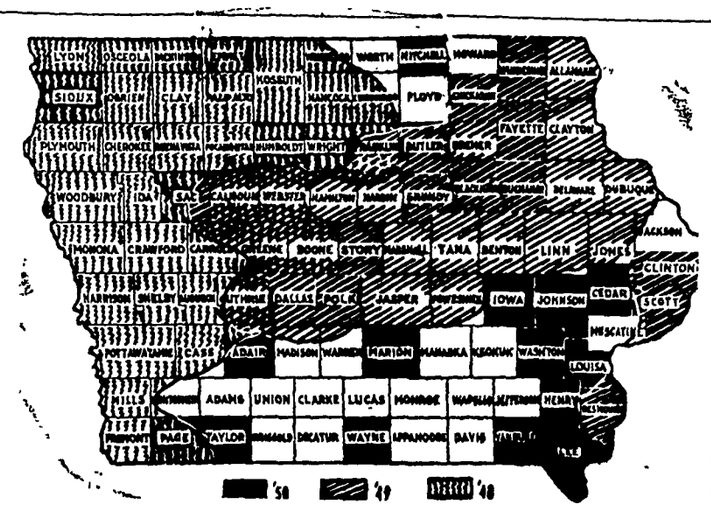
Snake-Bite

It doesn't happen very often in Iowa but Robert Streeter, of Farley, is undergoing treatment at a Dubuque hospital for snake-bite.



POLIO MAY STRIKE HARDER IN IOWA THIS YEAR IN NEW AREAS

Polio is likely to hit harder in Iowa this year in areas that have had few cases in the past several years, says Dr. Ralph H. Heeren, director of the division of preventable diseases of the Iowa State Department of Health.

The map shows where the most cases occurred in 1948 and 1949 and the counties where it has already appeared in 1950.

Most of the 1950 cases are occurring in the southeast section of the state where poliomelitis rates have been lowest recently —1948 and 1949—and where no epidemic levels have appeared since 1939 and 1940, reports Dr. Heeren.

Statewide agencies interested in any phase of polio work, including the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc., and the Iowa State Department of Health, have combined efforts this year for assistance in fighting polio.

The permanent committee formed is headed by Walter L. Bierrin M.D., state commissioner of health. Other officiers are Dr. Heeren, vice chairman; and John V. McCarthy, of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc., secretary. Committees are on nursing, hospital, rehabilitation and the medical care,

A two-day workshop for nurses on polio care was conducted this year in the southeast district of Iowa at Burlington. A week's course of training was provided at the University of Iowa for supervisory nurses from hospitals that treat polio. Other training courses are also planned,

Since we have no specific preventive procedure for poliomyelitis, such as vaccination or immunization, more indirect methods of attack should be used, Dr. Heeren says.

The doctor points out that we have managed to conquer most of the cases of disease spread by discharges of the intestinal tract, such as typhoid fever. But we have not yet been able to control effectively, spread of diseases transmitted by discharges from the upper respiratory tract—the lungs, throat and mouth. Common colds, chickenpox, mumps, influenza, all virus diseases spread by infection from the nose and throat, are as common as ever.

The virus of poliomyelitis is believed to be spread by discharges from both the intestinal and the upper respiratory tracts. Control of polio, therefore, must be attacked through principles of personal hygiene.

Anyone may carry the infection or develop polio. For every known case there are dozens of mild undiagnosed cases and still more healthy "carriers." It is possible to spread the disease by poor habits of cleanliness.

The term "infantile paralysis" is misleading. Last year the age range of Iowa cases was from one month to 73 years with one-half of the cases in persons over 10 years of age.

Avery Sunbeams Met at Lowenberg Home July 14th

The Avery Sunbeams first July meeting was held at the home of Lois Lowenberg. Plans were made for the all-day meeting to be held at the home of Lillian Wille on July 14. Plans were also begun for the local and county achievement show.

JoAnn Burgess and Marlene Blumer gave a team demonstration on Placing a Picture on a Mat.

Judy Brede gave a report on District Camp. Harriet Ostendorf reported on the State Conservation Camp and Lois Lowenberg told about her experiences at the state Convention at Ames.

RABIES CASES REPORTED ARE ON INCREASE

An increasing number of rabies cases in wild animals and dogs have been reported in Iowa with the past few weeks, Two recent cases in eastern Iowa cattle were caused by bites from infected skunks.

Rabid civet cats, foxes and squirrels have also attacked livestock in increasing number this year, says Dr. John Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College. Rigid control in dogs has curbed the danger from this source somewhat, but it's hard to use immunization practices in wild animals.

Beware of strange-acting wild animals, dogs or cats, Dr. Herrick warns. The disease they carry is deadly, and if the treatment of bites is neglected, certain death will result. Saliva from the rabid animal inoculates victims through wounds made by the bite and the saliva carries a destructive virus.

Farmers have cause to suspicion wild animals that linger near farm buildings or livestock. Cattle and horses can develop the disease and after they're infected may chase moving objects, appear excited, fall down, attack buildings, and finally show parglysis and die.

Persons who have petted or been bitten by a rabid animal should consult a physician immediately. It takes about two weeks for symptoms to show up and then it may be too late for treatment.

Dr. Herrick advises penning up animals that show signs of the disease so they can be diagnosed by a veterinarian. That is especially important if those animals have attacked someone. An examination of the brain is made to identify rabies, so suspicious animals that are killed should be shot through the body to keep from damaging the brain.

Pigeons Race For Home

700 homing pigeons were liberated by the Railway Express agent at Sheldon recently. Participants in a race staged by a pigeon flying club in Milwaukee, the birds were released at Sheldon at 5:00 a. m. and arrived at their home lofts in about seven hours. Distance from Sheldon to Milwaukee is 400 miles.

No Fish

Jimmy and Ronald Williams, 11 and 17, are cured of fishing trips. At least temporarily. On a recent excursion, unknown to their parents, they tramped seven miles, got lost, cold and scared and spent the night in a ditch. A night-long search for the youngsters ended at 4 a. m. when they were found asleep in the ditch.

Water Heater Blew

A water heater in the basement of the Ed. Chizek home at Traer blew up last week, damaging the kitchen floor and ripping the cupboards from the walls of the kitchen. No one was hurt, although Mrs. Chizek, feeding her baby, was standing just a few feet from where the cupboards landed.

Baseballs

Guttenberg folks say hailstones, which fell near there recently were as large as baseballs. The stones were ice-clear and measured up to three inches in diameter. A "20-year roof" on the Ben Meyer farm, installed last year, fell short of its expectancy by 19 years when the big stones got through with it.

Lost Eye

Not many Iowans get hurt with firecrackers since the toy explosives were banned by the Iowa legislature a dozen years ago. But at Armstrong, 16-year old Buddy Anderson, lost an eye last week when a firecracker exploded near him and blew a piece of glass into his eye.

58th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Kuhens, Fayette, observed their 58th anniversary recently. They were married in 1892.

Closed The Shows

The Radcliffe firemen's celebration drew a good crowd recently, but the "midway" attractions were fewer in number than anticipated. 15 of the 24 concessions were closed by the sheriff a few hours after the celebration opened, for violation of the gambling laws.

Their Number Is Legion

The number of civilian employees on the Federal Government's payroll increased from 563,805 in December to 1,981,156 in December 1949. Total annual salaries and wages paid to these Federal employees have soared from $1 billion in 1932 to over $6½ billion today.

Settled Debt

Last spring, four LeMars Youths staged a mimic war, using county bull-dozers as tanks. Last week their families made a final settlement with the board of supervisors; $402.65 for wear and tear on the bull-dozers during the brief but lively battle.

Good Swarm Of Bees

At high noon recently, a big swarm of bees descended on Louis Knudson's popcorn stand at Iowa Falls. Mr. Knudson had very few customers; in fact, none whatever, until Paul and Albert Kulis arrived and took the bees to their apiary west of Iowa Falls. No one got stung.

It's Time Again To—

CAN PEACHES

Beautifully canned peaches for year-round use are a delight to any homemaker. Sound, firm and table-ripe fruit will assure you of better looking and better quality canned peaches.

Naarrow Escape

Taylor Flynn, Keota farmer, narrowly escaped drowning recently when a 3-inch rain caused a flash flood in Crooked Creek. He was riding a pony when trapped in the swirling waters. Unable to swim, he saved himself by grabbing the limb of a tree. The pony swam ashore. Passersby threw Mr. Flynn a rope and he managed to get ashore.

It's time once again to start canning peaches. However, the peach season won't be as good this year as it was last season, reports B. Mildred Smith, Iowa State College foods and nutrition specialist. She says the crop this year will be about three-fourths of what it was last year. Canned peaches are a big help in planning meals during the winter because there are so many interesting ways of fixing peaches.

Here are some simple rules to follow when canning peaches. Choose peaches that are sound, firm and table-ripe. Remember that the canned product will be no better than the fresh food. A bit of decay or over-ripe fruit may spoil the whole batch.

When canning peaches, look beyond the pink blush to see that the ground color of the peach is yellow or white, not an unripe greenish tint A bushel of peaches yields about 18 to 24 home-canned quarts.

Raw-Pack or Hot-Pack

Either the raw-pack method or the hot-pack method can be used for canning peaches. Hot packing gives more room in each jar, while raw-packing gives firmer, somewhat better looking peaches.

Before canning, wash the peaches carefully. Dip in boiling water to loosen skins, then quickly in cold water to keep them from darkening. To prevent darkening during preparation, drop peaches into water containing 1 tablespoon of salt and 1 tablespoon of vinegar to 2 quarts of water as they are peeled. Drain and rinse just before heating or packing cold

For the raw-pack method, fill each jar to within ½ inch of the top. Pour a boiling sirup of 1 cup of water or peach juice to ½ to 1 cup of sugar over the peaches. Work out air bubbles with a knife blade. Process in a water bath for 35 minutes for quarts and 25 minutes for pint jars.

To can peaches by the hot-pack method, add ¼ cup of sugar for each pound of fruit Heat to boiling and pack hot Process in the boiling water bath for 20 minutes—both pints and quarts. If less juicy peaches are used, drop them into the same sirup as is used for raw-pack method and heat Pack the fruit hot and cover with boiling juice or sirup.

Try New Uses

Peaches have a wide variety of uses in your winter meals. Why not try some new peach dishes for those "What am I going to have?" meals. Peach-cottage cheese salad is a simple as well as nutritious salad With a big dinner you want a simple salad that doesn't take long to fix and one that can make your meal more attractive and colorful. Peach upside-down cake or peach custards make delicious simple desserts for your lunches.

Peach ice cream sounds like a summer dessert, but with canned peaches within your reach it can be all-year-round favorite. Put your home-canned peaches to good use during the winter months.

Firecracker

Harry Carlson, young Linn Grove lad, spent a few days in the hospital recently when a home-made firecracker exploded.

COMBAT STABLE FLIES BY USING REPELLENT

Iowa cows now may be seen standing in the shade, on the crests of hills where there's a breeze and in water in an effort to get away from stable flies, observes Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College extension entomologist.

And, he says most of them are finding these measures are not very effective.

Stable flies bite on the legs or undersides of livestock, and don't remain on an animal long enough to be affected by lindane or methoxychlor. This means repellents are necessary if trouble from the flies is to be kept down.

Gunderson suggests that buyers of repellents read the label to make sure the contents contain pyreehrin and an "activator" for the pyrethrin.

Although most stable flies remain outside of barns and rest on fences and outer walls of buildings, spray applied inside buildings is an aid in control. For dairy barn spray the entomologist recommends lindane or methoxychlor. DDT gives good results inside other livestock buildings and gives effective control when applied to outside barn walls and fences where stable flies rest.

Since these flies breed in manure piles, old stack bottoms, around feed bunks and in the feedlot, Gunderson suggests to haul out all manure and old stack bottoms and applying borax at the rate of an ounce per square foot of ground in areas where stable flies might breed.

Pep Up Waning Appetites With

TASTE-TEMPTING FOODS

Attractive, well-planned menus will keep the family interested in food even in July. Vary the long list of plentiful protein and salad with special breads and other "extras" and the hot- weather appetite problem is solved.

If you're healthy and budget-wise you're relying on combinations of hearty protein foods and fresh fruit and vegetable salads for summertime meals.

Those foods are tempting in themselves during warm weather. But to make sure the family goes on eating, even when the temperature soars, it will pay to give some special attention to setting a pretty table and "dressing up" the foods you serve.

It doesn't take much more work to make twists or cinnamon rolls out of your biscuit dough than to make plain-ordinary buns, Jewel Graham, Iowa State College nutritionists, has pointed out. It isn't much trouble either to add a red cherry or parsley sprig garnish to salad or casserole dish. Give your imagination a free reign, and you'll find yourself arranging fruit-and-cheese plates in interesting new ways, serving cottage cheese in cantaloup halves, fish or chicken salad or even cole slaw in tomato flowerets. And you'll often make egg-nog, milk shakes and tempting fruit drinks.

Main Dish Standbys

The plentiful-foods list for July features chicken, eggs, frozen fish and all kinds of dairy products. These are the foods to "bank on" to supply the heartiness fruit and vegetable salads called for. Cottage cheese and wedges of American and process cheese are especially good companions for fresh fruits whether you serve them as dessert or as main-course salad foods.

Cheese sauce perks up cooked vegetables, makes a substantial dinner main dish or hot deviled eggs, forms the basis for many a casserole dish. Team cheese with eggs often. Add the cheese to omelets, perhaps in sauce with peas or other vegetables to top it off, use it in main-dish custards or add it to scrambled eggs. On a plate with deviled eggs serve wedges of cheese or strips of ham or ham curls.

Cottage cheese is actually concentrated skimmilk, Miss Graham points out, so it's packed with the minerals and vitamins we need in the summer. It can be added to scrambled eggs, just after the eggs are set, to serve on toast. Or surround a mound of it with fruits for a luncheon salad.

Remember that marinated fish is a "natural" for summertime salads. Another way to serve it, with generous quota of food essentials, is in golden-brown patties. Mix the flaked fish with crackers and egg to help it set, roll the patties in cracker crumbs and cook in a small amount of fat at a very low temperature.

As for chicken, you'll be serving it cold with cold cuts, pressed or creamed and in salad, as well as deep-fat or pan-fried. Young, tender birds may be broiled, "smothered" or barbecued. Plan on barbecued chicken when you have plenty of time just before dinner to prepare it. First, cook it partially, then dip it into barbecue sauce and broil, basting during the cooking.

Extras

Hearty sandwiches—of peanut butter, egg, cheese or fish—are a good choice to round out a summertime meal. Don't forget that nuts are a good source of protein. Make honey nut bread with whole wheat flour, or serve hot nutbreads with honey. Serve nuts with your salads, too, peanut butter salad dressing, grated cheese as salad garnish.

SIDE-DRESSING OF CORN BEST DONE IN JUNE

It's a good idea to have side-dressing of corn done by the time the second cultivation is finished, H. B. Cheney, extension agronomist at Iowa State College, reminds Iowa farmers who plan to correct nitrogen deficiencies in growing corn this year.

Although good results have been reported from side-dressing as late as the middle of July when there's plenty of rain, he thinks it's advisable to get the job done in June. Often poor use is made of nitrogen applied at the last cultivation in years when rainfall is low.

Tests have shown that response to nitrogen has been especially good on second-year corn ground that hasn't received applications of manure or has not been managed especially well in the past. Land on which timothy or bromegrass without legumes has been plowed under for corn and which has received little manure is another place where response has been good.

On light-colored and sandy soils of eastern Iowa and on western Iowa soils, profitable results have been obtained from 40 to 60 pounds per acre of elemental nitrogen, which is the equivalent of 120 to 180 pounds of ammonium nitrate. However, 20 to 30 pounds of nitrogen have been more profitable than higher rates on most Iowa soils with less serious nitrogen deficiencies.

When the fertilizer is applied by side-dressing adjust the rate to fit the stand—poor stands need less fertilizer, and heavy stands more.

Side-dressing is the only method that still can be used to apply nitrogen for this year's crop, the agronomist points out.

REPUBLICAN REPORT
By Gerald Bogan, Publicity Director

(The material contained herein does not necessarily conform to the editorial policy of this newspaper.)

MARSHALLING FOR VICTORY

Iowa Republicans are marshalling their forces for victory in November following the most successful "stockholders meeting" in a decade at the state convention last week.

Some 3,000 wildly cheering delegates gave vocal endorsements to Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper, Gov. William S. Beardsley, our eight congressmen and other state officials, gave evidence that they are in a fighting mood and adopted a positive program to offer the Iowa electorate.

There are few negative words to be found in the Republican platform. It is a positive program, the development of which started at the grass roots in the county conventions and was culminated in the unanimous approval of the state convention delegates. Most of the resolutions originated in county conventions, written by rank and file Republicans. They followed the recent suggestions by Republican leaders that there be sound, constructive thinking in the platform-writing.

The GOP, the Great Opportunity Party, the part of "a sound and sensible economical government" pledged its ceaseless effort to the election of all Republicans in November.

There are a few things the Republicans are against. They are definitely opposed to the present national administration's foreign policy which "sowed to the wind" at Teheran, Potsdam and Yalta, and now our soldiers are reaping the whirlwind of gross diplomatic stupidity. Our boys are paying for tragic shortsightedness and unpreparedness on the soggy slopes of Korea.

The platform offers a positive farm program to the Iowa farmers. Unlike the opposition it does mention the Brannan Plan, and it offers as an alternative a plan drawn up by 35 dirt farmers who formed the Iowa Republican Farm Policy Council. Within those recommendations the Republican Party believes it is possible to "maintain our liberties and our free society; achieve full distribution and constructive utilization of complete production; conserve our water resources; maintain a balanced national budget and have a stabilized and prosperous farm economy."

That's the kind of a farm program we believe the Iowa farmers want; not a pie-in-the-sky devise which promises everything but the kitchen sink to everybody but doesn't promise the taxpayer anything but higher taxes.

Here, briefly, are the other planks in the platform: we are not opposed to the union shop, provided the individual worker is protected against arbitrary expulsion from the union and subsequent loss of his job by the mere whim or opinion of any union officer or by pressure or intimidation from any fellow employee who may happen to disagree with him. State aid to schools should be used to equalize educational opportunity and equalize the cost of education among taxpayers. The platform also endorses completion of county school reorganization surveys but pledged the party to "defend the right of self-determination."

It specifically opposes national compulsory health insurance; favored adequate assistance to the aged and blind; pledged support to development of plans for a constitutional convention, if the voters approve, to assure the actions of the convention will be constructive and adapted to present day needs; urged elimination of waste in government; urged distribution of the tax burden upon a sound and equitable basis; said we support equality of opportunity for all and oppose discrimination on race, creed or color; favored modernizing of the primary road system and commended the present state administration which has provided almost twice as much money for an integrated highway system in 1951 as in 1949; committed the party to a continued program in the development of an overall conservation program of natural resources.

Governor Beardsley made it perfectly clear that Democrat charges hurled with such reckless abandon against the administration will not go unchallenged. They complained that the state had built up a 103 million dollar surplus. Said it was bad to save up a little money for a rainy day and by inference said if they were in control they'd run the state business as they run the federal government which is in the red and has had to resort to deficit spending every year for 18 years. But Iowa Republican administrations have been able to maintain a balanced budget and build up a surplus without increasing any taxes or without any new taxes. Is that bad business?

Senator Hickenlooper, who observed his 54th birthday and was given a giant cake which was sent to the Arlington Orphans Home, said the nation will win the struggle in Korea "through the heroic sacrifice of our men in the field, but someone should be called to account for our inability at the outset, and for the lack of effective fighting force."

The issues are clear but now, and the Republican Party will take its positive program, its harmonious working organization and a full list of competent, able and proven candidates to the electorate to prove that Republican Government is Good Government for All The People.

PRITCHARDS CRITICALLY INJURED IN COLLISION AT DES MOINES

"Bud" Prichard of Garner and his brother John Pritchard and son of Britt were all critically injured in a head-on auto collision near the rubber plant at the north edge of Des Moines at noon Thursday.

As the Pritchards were driving south, a car following close to a truck driving north suddenly went around the truck directly into the path of the Pritchards car and struck them head-on. All of the Pritchards and the driver of the other car were taken to the Mercy hospital in Des Moines where all were reported in a critical condition for severeal days.

John Pritchard, driver, suffered internal injuries; his son had a fractured ankle, knee and arm and severe cuts on his wrist and hand; "Bud" Pritchard suffered facial fractures as he was hurled from the back seat into the dashboard. He had fractured cheek bones and five jaw fractures.

Reports as we go to press are that all are apparently out of danger and will recover.

Pack an Easily Carried Lunch Box
(See Recipes Below)

Have a Picnic!

PACK YOURSELF a basket of fun and good eating with a well planned, easily carried picnic lunch if you plan to trek out-of-doors to have your meal.

Many will tell you that picnic lunches don't satisfy because they're better sounding than they are eating. Others tell you they always forget the salt, pepper, forks or napkins, while still others maintain that something always spills or is too bulky to carry easily.

If you take as much care planning the picnic lunch as you do a meal at home, it can be not only good but well balanced so that it doesn't leave you uncomfortable. With modern aids, you can pack many things in lightweight containers that are easy to carry and spill proof, too.

It's not necessary to forget anything if you have a basket or hamper that's fitted with table accessories such as complete table settings. Keep salt, pepper and sugar in the basket, and you won't forget them. Make a list of the menu and check off each item as you pack, and this will eliminate forgetting other essentials.

SANDWICHES ARE favorites of every picnic lunch. Butter the bread thoroughly so that the filling does not soak through. Wrap each sandwich carefully in waxed paper so it doesn't dry, and you'll enjoy them. Here are some excellent fillings:

Banana-Pineapple Special

- 1 banana
- 1-2 tablespoons real mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice

- ¼ cup soft butter
- 6 lettuce leaves

Combine chicken, celery, green pepper, salad dressing and salt. Cut rolls in half lengthwise and spread with butter. Spread chicken salad on lower half of rolls. Top with lettuce leaf, then cover with roll top.

These ham and egg roll-ups are sandwich like, but require no bread. They make excellent nibbling on a picnic:

Ham and Egg Roll-Ups
(Makes 3)

- 2 slices Swiss or American cheese
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- 3 tablespoons real mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon mustard-with-horseradish
- Dash of worcestershire sauce

THEY WHO LIKE hot food on the picnic spot will be interested to know that small size cans, eight-ounce size, are available now for the first time, of food favorites.

To make a balanced meal, plan to have a tossed salad which can be carried in a jar or a lightweight, unbreakable bowl that comes fitted with a cover. As dessert you might pack some fresh fruit and simple cakes, baked in paper cups, with a baked on frosting that won't get messy in transport.

HERE IS A SALAD ideal for the picnic:

Tossed Garden Salad
(Serves 4)

- 2 cucumbers, sliced
- 10 radishes, sliced
- ⅓ cup sliced green onions
- 1 bunch watercress or other greens, separated
- ½ cup chopped celery
- ½ cup shredded raw carrots
- ½ cup shredded cabbage
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- French dressing

Toss vegetables together in a bowl with the salt and French dressing. If desired, the bowl may be rubbed with a split clove of garlic.

LYNN SAYS:
These Picnic Tips Make Eating Fun

Next supper picnic you have, bring hot soup for a first course. It will carry safely in your thermos. You will find that hot cream soup is very welcome, especially if the other dishes are cold salads and sandwiches.

Layer cakes are not easy to carry to picnics. Bake the cake in an oblong pan, frost, and carry in the same pan.

Cooling drinks are much in demand as picnic fare. Mix together some apricot nectar and pineapple juice with gingerale and ice cubes and place in the thermos. The beverage will be deliciously cold and refreshing, as well as ready to serve.

Chill whole melons thoroughly before taking to the picnic, and wrap in several layers of newspaper with ice. Place in dishpan or bucket for easy transport to the picnic grounds.

Laws Are Rules People Make So They May Live in Harmony

This is the fourth of a series of ten articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

THE THIRD promise of a good citizen: I will respect and obey the laws. I will assist public officials in preventing crime and the courts in giving evidence.

Laws are rules people make so they can live together without stepping on each other's toes.

The simplest law of all, perhaps, is the traffic light. When it is green it's supposed to protect you against the other fellow. When it is red it's supposed to protect the other person from you.

Ours is a government of laws—not men.

Our constitution guarantees that our laws may be made in one way, and one way only, by the people, through their elected representatives—not by one man, or a few men, or by any appointed group.

No man in this country is so big that he is above the law, and none so insignificant that he cannot look to the law for protection.

A good citizen cooperates with the law. He assists public agents in preventing crime, and the courts in giving evidence.

A good citizen does not evade the law. He does not say, "I know somebody who can fix my ticket."

Laws necessarily change with needs of the times A good citizen's attitude toward a law which he regards as unfair, unreasonable and out of step with the times is that of working to get it changed—but obeying it while it is on the books.

There is the letter of the law—and the spirit of the law.

You cannot make men good by laws, and the hope of law and order is grounded in the reverence of a majority of people for justice, truth and goodness. But, in the final analysis, a law has teeth in it. Using federal offenses as an example, one great historian says,

"If you refuse long enough to make out a correct income tax return and refuse to obey an order to appear in court, you will get a touch of government power. Three or four husky fellows will take you by the scruff of the neck and the seat of the pants and hustle you into a police van motored by the power of internal combustion."

To guard against hasty and ill-advised action or the concentration of powers in any one man or body of men, a system of checks and balances is provided by the federal constitution. Of these:

It would take six years completely to replace the elected branches of the federal government composed exclusively of members of one party by the members of another.

This is due to the fact that: The President is elected for four years; the members of the house of representatives are elected every two years, and one-third of the senators are elected every two years but for a six-year term.

Laws passed either by the senate or by the house of representatives must be approved by a majority of the other body.

The President can veto laws enacted by congress, and his veto can be overridden only by a two-thirds vote of each house.

The courts have the right to interpret laws passed by congress and to review the legality of acts of officers of the government charged with the administration. In many cases the courts have held acts of congress invalid as being in conflict with a provision of the constitution.

The senate has the power to review and reject Presidential appointments of diplomatic, judicial, and certain other officers of the government, as well as the power to approve or reject treaties with foreign governments.

The house of representatives has the power to impeach and the senate the place of trial and to remove from office all civil officers of the United States including even the President.

Star Dust
STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

NANCY OLSON'S career so far has been one of those amazing Hollywood success stories; a talent scout saw her in a play at the University of California, two years ago; she had a screen test the next day, a Paramount contract the day after that. One month later she was co-starring with Randolph Scott in 20th Century-Fox's "Canadian Pacific." She had a fine role in "Sunset Boulevard," her second film, so perfectly suited to her that she wore her own clothes. "Union Station" is her third. But it hasn't all been just luck. Young Nancy has both beauty and talent, and has worked hard in college dramatic courses to get experience.

Sen. Alexander Wiley, of the special senate committee investigating interstate crime, held a screening of Columbia's "711 Ocean Drive" for Sen. Kefauver and the other members. The film, starring Edmond O'Brien and Joanne Dru, exposes the techniques and methods used by horse racing wire services to disseminate their illegal information throughout the country.

Matt McHugh was cast as a hard-boiled sheriff in "Return of the Frontiersman" because he looks more like a cowboy than most cowboys do. But Mat, born and raised on New York's Tenth Avenue, had never mounted a horse or carried a gun before the picture started. The brother of Frank McHugh, he appears in support of Gordon MacRae, Rory Calhoun, Julie London and Jack Holt.

THE FICTION CORNER

TABLES TURNED

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

FLIRTING was second nature with Deborah Bellamy. No one would have guessed, after one glance at her gay, laughing face, after one look into her mocking, tantalizing eyes, that inwardly she was afraid. Afraid that sometime some one of her victims was going to turn the tables. That is to say, she knew that one day she was going to fall in love with one of the men with whom she flirted. And that, she knew, would be the end. The end to all her gay, reckless happiness She never dreamed—that this man would prove to be a cowboy, named Lon Fairweather.

She found herself listening to Lon's love-making a little more soberly than was her custom.

Deborah had joined a party who planned a month's vacation at a dude ranch in Wyoming Lon was the foreman He was tall, fair, handsome. After one look into his sober blue eyes, Deborah began to lay her snares

Lon was different, but he was also human. Hence he succumbed to her wiles, just as had the others. The night he told Deborah of his love they were seated on a high boulder overlooking a hemmed-in lake.

Something about the beauty and grandeur of the scene stirred Deborah's soul. She found herself listening to Lon's love-making more soberly than was her custom.

"Oh, Lon," she said a little breathlessly, "Not now . . ."

She pushed him away and ran up the path toward the ranch house. Once back in her room she faced herself in the mirror and laughed.

In the days that followed Lon persisted in occupying her thoughts. Some what in desperation she cast about for escape And then a plan came to mind. She'd ask him to come to New York. She'd get him on home ground, compare him with the sort of life she was used to.

The idea seemed a good one and strangely enough Lon agreed to come—in the fall.

FALL CAME, and she planned a party. She invited all those who had been at the Double O Bar that summer.

Lon arrived in due time and called at Deborah's apartment. She was a little taken aback at the ease and grace with which he wore his smart new tuxedo, and in spite of herself she thrilled when he swept her into his arms.

The dinner was set for 8. At 7:30 the guests began to arrive. Lon was surprised when he saw that the men wore chaps and high-heeled boots; that the women were garbed in divided riding skirts and gay-colored blouses.

A butler came to the door and yelled: "Come and get it, cowboy!"

Deborah felt a little uneasy as Lon escorted her to her seat. Her uneasiness grew as he looked slightly puzzled upon discovering there was no silverware at his place save a broad-bladed knife. He hesitated, watching in amazement as the other guests picked up their knives, and with suppressed chuckles began to scoop up peas and shove them into their mouths. He watched as they poured coffee from their cups and drank from their saucers.

"I understand," he said, looking directly at Deborah. "And I regret I can't appreciate the humor of the thing. You see," he added, "we westerners have had it drilled into us by you easterners, that we're crude and have no manners. "But," he paused and made a little, perfunctory bow toward Deborah. "Now I know something else; know that whatever other manners you folks might have you don't know the meaning of hospitality."

And with this he carefully placed his napkin on the table, ushed back his chair and strode from the room.

"Lon! Lon!" she called. "Please come back. It was all my fault. I'm sorry. Please!"

But Lon was already through the door and halfway down the stairs.

Above, on the landing Deborah stood as if dazed. There was a terrible gnawing sensation inside of her, a great, desolate, miserable feeling. She knew then that Lon Fairweather had been the man she was afraid of meeting.

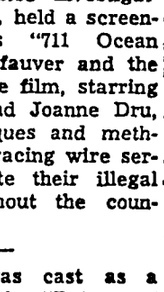
Television Versus IQ—It Can Be Made Cultural Medium

By BILLY ROSE

As an old blab merchant, I seldom pay much attention to the other fellow's speeches, and when I do it's generally to take umbrage rather than notice.

This week, however, I'd like to turn coat and tables on myself and do some hefty hollering about a speech on the future of television recently delivered by Dr. Millard Faught, an economist, at the University Club of Chicago. I happened to pop-eye a copy of it the other day, and while I haven't the space to give you the whole 4,000 words, here's a bit of the cream off the top . . .

To begin with, Dr. Faught axioms that TV can be used for a lot of things besides selling eyewash, mouthwash and hogwash, and insists that its full potentialities will never be realized if we allow it to be taken over lock, stock and antenna by the hucksters. In his opinion, the new dingus can do an unprecedented job for us in a dozen esthetic fields providing, of course, that a method can be devised whereby someone besides the advertiser foots part of the bill.



Billy Rose

The gimmick he suggests is a television box office operating on a pay-as-you-see-it basis, and the one he specifically mentions in his speech—Phonevision—is due to be tested in Chicago this fall with the blessings of the F.C.C.

LEAVING ELECTRONIC double-talk out of it, Phonevision, which was recently demonstrated for me, is simply this: a system whereby 99 per cent of an image is telecast free of charge, but shows up on the home screen as so much hash. To unscramble the picture one picks up the phone and asks the operator to pipe in the missing 1 per cent through a gadget on his set hooked up to his telephone line.

At the end of the month, the charge for this service is included in his phone bill, and the gross take divvied betwen the television station, the creator of the program, and the phone company.

According to Dr. Faught, Phonevision—or some equivalent device—will make it possible to collect millions of dollars in a single evening for, let us say, the Red Cross by putting on one nationwide benefit video show It will enable our sick-unto-dearth Hollywood studios to quintuple their audiences and double their grosses, and also make possible 10-million-dollar gates for championship fights and World Series games. But, opines the good doctor, its most eye-bugging impact will be on education.

By bringing the classroom into the home, it will be possible for 100,000 students simultaneously to take the same beginners' course in Spanish, or child care, or interior decorating, whereas the average class on campus today consists of from 25 to 50 students.

YOU-SEE revenue from these home extension courses would provide the monies for new university buildings, laboratories, scholarships and teachers' salaries, and once and for all our colleges could stop passing the hat. Education, the doc goes on to say, is our best bet to stand off totalitarianism, despite which it's probably the most obsoletely merchandized comodity in our society.

The economist stresses that he has no quarrel with the advertisers, but maintains that if they're the only source of revenue, TV is a cinch to wind up the same sort of cultural pigmy that radio is.

The living room, he argues, is probably the room farthest removed from the marketplace, and if Joe Jones and his missus want something in it besides cornflake and Cuticura commercials, they'll have to contribute the pennies to make it possible. The government could probably be pressured into doing it for them, but who with an IQ above zero, asks Dr. Faught, wants political appointees messing with our educational processes and cultural preferences?

I particularly like the last line of his speech: "Never in the history of the communicative arts was there a greater premium on foresight."

"Dress Money"
If you wanted to buy a dress in the China of ancient B. C., you were out of luck. You fished in your purse and could find a coin shaped like the human body. That was the Chinese "dress money," and other early Chinese coins were shaped like the things they would purchase.

e Williams Goal

ed Williams has apparently ed both eyes on the Babe Ruth me-run mark of 60

Ted sensed the fact that 1950 as about as good a season as ny other with the ball at least iving a good imitation of jack abbit in action.

Ted also remembered that he isn't getting any younger. He will be 32 years old in October, which isn't venerable, but which also isn't too youthful.

In other years Ted has mixed his home-run hitting with more attention to mere base hits. This season he is really giving it the full treatment at a time where as Ford Frick says — "Even the pitchers are trying for home runs."

Williams will have plenty in the way of competition the rest of the way from Rosen, Kiner, Dropo, Stephens, Campanella, Snider and a few others, including DiMaggio and Easter. But from the way long Ted is taking his cut at the ball, he is the one more likely to reach the goal, if anyone does.

Ralph Kiner is leading the National league and he is sure to pick up his pace later. As a rule he falls into the groove after July Fourth. A year ago he hit 20 home runs the last 30 days of the season. The same output in 1950 might just push Kiner over the top. He is the one drawing factor the Pirates have left for the season.

It might interest Joe McCarthy to know that no manager ever left the scene with a better press than the departing Red Sox leader drew around the circuit.

Maybe a manager who wins nine pennants and seven world series doesn't need too many boosts.

What's With Baseball?

It has become pretty evident that something has been shaken loose from the baseball we all knew as it is now played in the two big leagues and the leading minors.

Either an extra charge of TNT has been inserted in the ball or an extra zip has been removed from pitching arms, something is wrong —to break the news mildly.

We have the Red Sox scoring 20 runs against the Browns in one game and a day later the Red Sox piling up 29 runs against the same team. Then the Cleveland Indians pile up 14 runs in the first inning against Mr. Mack's disintegrating Athletics who have hit the soapy chute at record speed.

Is this baseball or cricket? Scores ranging from 12 to 16 runs are common. Few pitchers ever complete seven innings.

The pitching can't be that bad.

The war has been over five years. So the war can't be used as an alibi for so much inferior playing all over both leagues.

Fur Take Dwindles

The annual fur take in the United States is decreasing while the population of wild fur animals are increasing, according to findings of the federal fish and wildlife service. In a report of these findings, Frank G. Ashbrook said:

"Warehouses are bulging with raccoon, opossum, skunk, fox and coyote furs," Ashbrook says in his introduction. "These are the 'unwanted furs'—according to the trade designation. A considerable number of raw furs are only worth 25 cents or less per pelt on the market, and in some states local raw fur receiving houses are not buying certain species of long-haired furs

"Some ideas advanced to build up the market for these long-haired furs include shearing, clipping and dyeing to make a 'new and exotic' product. Already stylists have shown crimson and green fur coats. Experiments in the production of fancy leathers from unwanted skins also continue apace. Suede shoes, gloves, 'chamois', billfolds and unique bookbindings are only a few of the products manufacturers hope to make out of such skins as raccoon, opossum and coyote."

Some operators of warehouses that are full of cheap raccoon skins have recently expressed the hope that "Dan'l Boone" caps of raccoon fur—with tails flying out behind—would become a style hit again with teenagers, skiers and others, says Ashbrook. A revival of the old "Joe College" raccoon skin coats, though, is not looked for. The labor involved in making a coat is expensive.

It Takes Planning

Thousands of children and even adults in our larger cities have never known the thrill of a mountain stream cascading its white waters over the polished rocks. They have never pitched a tent in primitive surroundings where it seems no white man has ever stood before. They have never been chilled by the piercing cry of the wolf, or lulled to sleep by the yapping cry of the coyotes.

It has never been their lot to be wrapped in the solitude of towering mountains in the silence "you almost can hear." But if they have thought of it, in their hearts dreamed of it, and have yearned for it with a longing that only realization can dispel, it is up to the men and women of this and succeeding generations to so protect these things that they will always be held in trust for those who come behind us.

Some day, if not they, at least their children's children may behold and enjoy these raptures of nature but only if the areas are properly conserved. How their dream through the many years would be shattered if its realization found only a dustbowl, a forest of stumps, dry creekbeds, and the bones of wild animals bleaching in the sun.

It is, therefore, of the utmost importance that the people employ good wardens, skilled foremen, and faithful caretakers. They must be trained in business and science and tutored by men of practical experience for the great task that is theirs. They must be men and women who love the work and have the courage to take a firm stand against transgressors.

Hook In Water

One of the most obvious truths in angling is that you "can't catch fish unless your hook is in the water." However, too many fishermen spend half their time rushing madly from pool to pool and for the most part have only exercise for their pains.

This doesn't mean, either, that the angler should sit in one spot, frowning worms or dunking flies for hours on end. The logical technique is to cover the waters of a likely-looking pool as thoroughly as possible, then move on to the next

Remember, too, that when you're fishing for trout that are visible to you, you are also visible to them Be sure your bait is in position where one or more of such fish can see it. Then leave it long enough for the fish to make up his mind whether or not he wants it.

Never go any closer than necessary to present the bait; stay out of range of the fish's vision as much as possible and remain motionless. Such tactics often enable one person to catch fish in a pool where other fishermen aren't doing so well.

Use Air Mattress

The air mattress you use in your sleeping bag can be utilized when traveling the waterways about camp. Leave it inflated and place in the bottom of your boat. Tie your tackle and duffle to it. In case of a splash or a blow, it will keep these off the bottom of the boat and out of the water, should you slip a little. In case of an upset it will serve as a life preserver

When time comes for sleep again your mattress is still inflated.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Idle 'Chitchat Is Social Contact

By Lawrence Gould

Is "chitchat" a waste of time?

Answer: Not always, at any rate. There's a type of intellectual snob who feels it is beneath his dignity to talk to the elevator man about the weather or to exchange polite nothings at a party. But these often are the only practical ways of making human contacts and letting our neighbors know we are aware of their existence. Saying, "Nice day, isn't it?" to someone who has heard it twenty times already may save him the hurt of feeling that you don't regard him as important enough to be worthy of your notice.

Can a wife help her husband "succeed"?

Answer: Yes, but not all husbands need the same kind of help. A man who grew up depending on his mother to plan his life for him might need prodding, if not nagging to spur him to do his best work and stand up for his rights, while one who at heart resented and rebelled against parental domination may (at least, unconsciously) resolve to "show his independence" by being a failure if he feels his wife is trying to "make him" succeed. But to any normal man a home where he is loved and happy will be a real and effective "inspiration."

Are "anxiety" and "insecurity" the same?

Answer: Not as psychiatrists use the words, writes Dr Siegfried Fischer in the American Journal of Psychotherapy. "Insecurity" is an habitual state of mind which influences every act and feeling, while "anxiety" is an acute reaction of intolerable tension which occurs only in specific situations. For instance, a person who is chronically unsure of himself (insecure) might be thrown into a state of anxiety if called upon to face an audience. Both emotions have their origin in childhood and both are characteristics of neurosis.

The Emotions and Skin Diseases

By Dr. James W. Barton

WE ARE FAMILIAR with the effect of the emotions upon certain organs of the body—rapid beating of the heart, rapid breathing and stomach upsets. Recently we have learned that attacks of asthma are brought on by the emotions. However, many of us are not prepared to agree with the statement that certain skin disturbances and diseases can be caused by the emotions.

As we think of the matter, however, we must admit that if fright can cause the hair to stand on end, the skin to become clammy and cold sometimes, and turn red at other times, why then cannot the emotions cause or aggravate skin ailments by affecting the nerves and blood supply of the part?

In "General Practice Clinics," Dr. A. H. Gottesman, Beverly Hills, California, states that dermatologists (skin specialists) are in general agreement that the emotions and skin changes are often related but controversy exists as to the nature of the relationship. "Do certain types of skin diseases owe their origin to disturbances of the emotional sphere?" they ask. "Or are emotional factors without any significance in skin diseases?"

Dr. Gottesman and his co-workers at Menninger clinic believe that overconcern with the question of whether the emotions are the underlying cause really interferes with the prompt treatment of the skin disease That the relationship exists, to some extent, must be admitted and treatment should be given with this thought in mind Four or five methods of treatment are then available: (1) Treatment of the skin disease according to symptoms present disregarding the emotional condition of the patient. (2) Combined skin and psychiatric treatment by the skin specialist. (3) Combined treatment by the skin specialist and psychiatrist working together. (4) Treatment by psychiatrist alone.

HEALTH NOTES

While infection is the commonest cause of pain in the shoulder and arm, pressure on the nerves of shoulder and arm is the next most frequent cause.

Tuberculosis experts have been so successful that some tuberculosis hospitals are being closed because there are not enough patients to justify them

Because physicians are able to give relief to asthmatics in most cases, it is well that these patients should know this and consult their physicians.

When emotional disturbances cause skin reactions, it is because of some frustration in the life of the patient which makes him more allergic to various substances.

God Give Us Men!

Lesson for August 6, 1950

THERE ARE WAYS of saying "No" without using that short and ugly word. A writer in the Christian Century has pointed out three of these. One is to say, "This is not the time . . ." Another is to say, "I agree with you in principle, but . . ." and the third is to say, "I am with you—but don't quote me!" What we need nowadays is men who are willing to stand up and be quoted, quoted for good and against evil. All men are "against sin" in general; it takes a braver man to be against it in particular.

Dr. Foreman

In a large town in Kentucky recently the grand jury indicted the whole police force. In the course of the jury's report they said they had heard a good deal of testimony about rotten places and practices in and around town, but most of those who had come before the grand jury had said, in effect, "Don't quote me." It is hard to make any indictment stick if people who know damaging facts are not willing to come out in broad daylight and testify. So abuses go on and on, all because every one is too shy to point an accusing finger.

Man of Courage

WE NEED more men like the prophet Elijah. God providentially removed from him all the usual temptations to keep his mouth shut. He had no investments to protect—all he had he wore on his back, and that was not much. No family depended on him. He did not represent any institution. He could speak his mind—he could speak God's mind—without worrying about the effect it might have on investors, or his family, or some institution. Of course Elijah had Elijah to look after; but for himself he was not afraid in the least. Lone figure though he was, he stood out againset lies and exploitation in varied forms. He stood out against popular opinion, and that is not easy for any normal man.

So many thousand votes or voices must be right we think. But Elijah did not think so. He knew that "one man with God is a majority." He stood out against official opposition; this was more dangerous still. The crowd's favor or dislike comes and goes, the crowd soon forgets; but a tyrant like Ahab (and still more like Jezebel) neither forgives nor forgets a man who has stood up to contradict and condemn him.

Then Elijah stood out against the most difficult enemy of all; organized religious leadership, that is, the false prophets. Even in the Christian era that organized church has sometimes taken the wrong side of some important questions and persecuted men who were on the side of right. But church tyranny is at least as bad as any other kind, and it takes a brave man to face it.

In Our Time

THANK GOD for all the Elijahs! Every generation has seen a few, and we have them in our time. They have not all had the spectacular success of the original prophet of Carmel, but they are here all the same.

In public life one thinks of those senators—and your state is fortunate if it has even one who stands up for persons against profits, for the advantage of all against benefits for a few, true representatives of the people as against invested privilege.

In church life we need more men like that pastor down in Alabama who was recently "fired" because he would not take his stewards' advice and use more "tact" in his sermons against sin in general and drinking in particular. It takes courage to do such things. And Elijahs are needed in the business and professional worlds, not only in the pulpit.

Is Liquor a Sacred Cow?

THE LIQUOR traffic alone, to name but one public evil, is doing our fellow-citizens a vast amount of damage. What other business makes necessary wards in hospitals to cure its customers?

But how few men will stand up and be quoted for the facts! Newspapers will editorialize against gambling when they won't against liquor; gambling doesn't advertise but liquor does. Count the big newspapers or magazines which for the benefit of their readers are willing to go without the income which liquor advertising produces.

Ernest Jean Hopper, 219 Russell St., Covington, Kentucky, is 10 years old and in the fourth grade and her mother can't get over the change in Ernest Jean's disposition since she has been taking HADACOL. Being in the right disposition to attend school is as important as having the proper books.

Here is Ernest Jean's own statement: "I have been taking HADACOL for sometime. My Daddy took HADACOL and it really helped him. Then Mother started me taking HADACOL. Before Mother started me taking HADACOL I was underweight, nervous, and I didn't want to eat at all. Mother says that since I have been taking HADACOL I have an entirely different disposition. I know I sleep much better and enjoy my food and now Mother lets me listen to all the mystery programs I want to and I don't get a bit nervous. Daddy says HADACOL has helped us so much that he is never going to let us be without HADACOL."

HADACOL Is Wonderful

and there are countless thousands of folks all over the country to prove it. HADACOL can help you, too, if you will just give it a chance. If remarkable HADACOL doesn't help you, your money will be refunded.

If you suffer from stomach distress, nervousness, insomnia, constipation, aches and pains of neuritis, or a general run-down condition, caused by a deficiency of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Niacin, and Iron, let HADACOL help you.

You Owe It To Yourself

. . . to give HADACOL a chance. Refuse substitutes. Don't let anyone tell you something else is "just as good." Insist on the genuine HADACOL. No risk involved . . . because HADACOL is sold only on a strict money-back guarantee. You'll feel great with the first few bottles you take or your money back. Trial size, only $1.25. Large Family or Hospital size, $3.50.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.—Adv.

FORMER METHODIST MINISTER DIES

THE REV. F. C. GRIEWE

Funeral services for the Rev. Frederick Carl Griewe, 75, was held Saturday at 1:30 p. m. at the home and at 2 p. m. at the Garner Methodist Church. Burial was made in Ell township cemetery at Klemme. Mr. F. C. Griewe died at a hospital in Mason City Wednedsay evening following a heart attack the day before.

Frederick Carl, son of Henry and Mary Griewe was born in Liberty township near Garner July 11, 1875. The son of pioneer parents, he was introduced early in life to privation and hard labor. He received his education in the rural schools and Charles City college at Charles City.

On November 16, 1899, he was married to Matilda Anna Sampson of Colesburg, Deleware county. To this union 3 children were born, one son, Silas, and daughters, Opal and Dorothy, who with their mother, survive.

After their marriage the Griewes settled on a farm in Liberty township where they lived until ill health forced Mr. Griewe to move his family to Klemme.

Mr. Griewe was active in the Methodist church and entered the ministery on a trial basis in the fall of 1910 when he was admitted to the Northwest Iowa German conference. He was accepted in full membership in 1912 and ordained; deacon in 1912; elder in 1914. He served pastorates at Basswood-Richland, in Illinois; Lansing, Rudd, Reinbeck. He was transferred to the Upper Iowa conference in 1922 and served at Center Point, Whitten, Masonville, Laurel-Gilman.

In 1936 because of a nervous breakdown he was forced to move to a small farm near Walker and after 4 years regained his health and returned to the ministery serving Aredale as a supply pastor for 4 years. In 1944 he retired from the ministry and moved to a new home previously built in Garner. After his retirement he served in various churches as a vacancy pastor and his period of service covered 30 years.

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Story of a man who likes to be seen both going and coming, though chances are he will end up by going in one direction only - out. This man of peculiar habits is said to be functioning on the country roads around a southeast Iowa city. This is the report on him.

He has spent much time and patience adjusting the brakes on his hot-rod type car. Safety conscious? No, just unconscious. For the adjustment he has made is such that when the brakes are applied sharply at a good speed, the car jumps so far to the left that it ends up almost broadside to the road.

With his car so equipped, it is the young man's simple pleasure to go driving on the country roads until he comes upon another car going in the same direction.

He trails the car closely for a time, then passes and remains just ahead until a hill or sharp curve comes up.

Dropping over the hill or out of sight around the curve, he slams on his crazy brakes, the car jumps and skids broadside to the left, turning almost completely around in the road.

A second later when the following car comes in sight, the young man is driving back on the way he came. The people in the other car are properly mysified and our young man swells with some kind of misguided joy.

If this driver is killed or injured, it is a price he should not be too suprised to pay for his little game.

PAUL HENDERSON SUMMARIZES RESULTS OF HANCOCK COUNTY SOIL TESTS

Hancock County farmers now can get an idea of the need for soil testing and closer management from a summary of sample results already returned, reports County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

During the 2 years from March 1, 1948 to March 1, 1950, 1232 samples have been sent to the Iowa State College testing laboratories by Hancock Countians. These samples were some of the more than 50,000 from all parts of the state that were processed at the laboratories during this period.

Out of those sent in from Hancock County, 37.6 percent were neutral or alkaline while 24.5 percent needed from 3 to 4½ tons.

Of the samples sent in from Hancock County that didn't contain an excess of lime, approximately 71 percent were low or very low in phosphorus. High phosphorus soils made up 4.1 percent of this classification, while the remainder were medium or medium high in phosphorus, Henderson says.

In summing up Hancock County's tests for potash, Henderson says that 52.6 percent of the soils tested without excess lime or very low in potash. On the other hand, only 5.4 percent of these were high in potash, and the rest ranged between these classifications.

While this summary give a representative overall picture of Hancock County's soil, Henderson cautions against using it as a guide for soil management or fertilizer applications on any one farm. There's always the chance that a field or area may be in the small percentage that isn't typical.

The only sound basis for making fertilizer or management recommendations is an actual soil test, the county extension director concludes. Drop in Henderson's office and talk over your soil problems.

HIGHWAY PATROLMAN TALKED ON SAFETY ORGANIZATION HERE

At the public meeting held Friday evening at the Fire Station, a Mason City Highway Patrolman explained the purpose of the State-Wide Safety Council being set up by organizing counties and communities in an endeavor to cut down on highway, farm, home and school accidents.

The Klemme Auxiliary ladies are sponsoring the local organization and were getting orders for safety posters Monday.

It is planned that beginning August 17th, and throughout the year, publicity will be given by the newspapers, radio and posters calling the attention of the people to the safety project for that particular week.

With the entire state participating it is hoped that accidents can be cut down, that laws can be better enforced and that the Legislature can be persuaded to establish automobile checking stations throughout the state.

REFRIGERATION UNIT WILL DRY OUT BASEMENT

There's a way to change wet basements into dry, livable rooms that can be used for anything from a dining room to a recreation parlor.

Refrigeration units are now on the market that circulate and dry air. When one of these units is set up in a basement it circulates and cools wet air, causing moisture to condense out. The air can't hold as much moisture after it's cooled, and a continual air drying movement keeps basement walls dry.

The condensation unit is priced at around $150 at the present time, but it can mean an extra story on a house, says H. H. Beaty, Iowa State College agriculture. Basements that are usually damp can be dried out enough for most any use, with the new unit sapping out the moisture.

Open windows in the summer are responsible for most wet basements, Beaty notes. Home owners open windows in an effort to dry out basements, but the warm incoming air meets cool walls and condensation starts. The engineer recommends keeping basement windows shut tight, except during cool, dry days. Cool air coming through the windows won't condense, and this type of air will remove basement dampness in a day or two.

ACHIEVEMENT SHOW WILL BEGIN AUGUST 14TH

The Hancock County 4-H club Girls Exhibits will be open to the public Monday evening, August 14th from 7 to 9 p. m. during the Annual Achievement Show at the Garner High School Auditorium.

The girls 4-H clubs will exhibit their Home Furnishing Projects made by members during the year.

WATCH FOR WORM SIGNS IN PIGS—TREAT THEM

It's worming time now in Iowa hog yards if pigs show roundworm symptoms, reports Dr. D. B. Radloff, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

He says to look for unthriftiness and coughing in pigs as well as vomiting, pot bellies, rough hair-coats or thumps. These are danger signals and a good worming may mean the difference between profit and loss in the swine enterprise.

Sodium fluoride mixed 1 lb. to 99 pounds of ground feed is recommended for roundworms. Radloff suggests spreading the ground feed out in a thin layer on a concrete floor and then sprinkling the pound of chemical over the top. Mix it up with a shovel and it's ready for the feeder. The use of a mixing mill also is a very good way to mix ground feed and sodium flouride.

Pigs will eat less ground feed when it's treated, but if they are accustomed to the feed and their ration has been cut down the night before, they'll eat enough to do the job, the veterinarian says. After the treated feed has been before the hogs 24 hours, it should be sacked and put away for the next worming.

There's another mixture for pigs that's more palatable and still does a satisfactory job. It consists of mixing 1 pound of sodium fluoride to 199 pounds of ground feed. This should be taken away after 48 hours in the feeders.

Radloff cautions to follow the direction and to mix sodium fluoride carefully. Careless use of the chemical as a hog wormer resulted in losses to some farmers this spring.

Let 'Em Fish It!

Young boys and girls can have lots of fun fishing in a farm pond. Many youngsters wish that they had a pond nearby in which they could fish. Some know of ponds in their vicinity but are afraid to inquire of the owners whether or not they would be permitted to fish. If you are an owner of a pond, you should encourage boys and girls to fish in it.

This is as true for young folks as it is for adults. You may not know that it is next to impossible for you to "fish out" your pond. Your pond is more apt to be underfished than over-fished Why not invite neighborhood youngsters, groups of Boy or Girl Scouts 4-H, F.F.A., F.H.A., or any of the many clubs or church groups which are organized for youth? You need not fear that a gang of kids are going to ruin a pond. They might clutter up the grounds a little but I am sure that if you have an appreciation for the habits and ways of boys and girls you will be able to clean up after them when you know that they have thoroughly enjoyed themselves in catching fish in your pond. These young ones may learn more than you ever could realize of what conservation is; and they will learn much about the management of fish in ponds when they have the opportunity of fishing, or merely visiting a pond from time to time.

Many ponds lie idle at various times throughout the year. Why not invite people to come over the hill to fish in your pond?

A child is far better off out at some pond fishng than were he to be free to "run on his own" somewhere where he does not have something to keep him occupied Fishing has meant much to many people since ancient times and it will ever be a great value to those to come, in so far as it is a wholesome type of recreation builds perhaps not only better bodies but better characters.

Star Stuff

The sun and the stars have much to do with the laying out the lines and boundaries of these United States. The Ephemeris 1950, a recent publication of the Department of Interior, Bureau of Land Management, is the guiding star for cadastral engineers who have been surveying the public lands and setting the boundaries of this country since the days of George Washington

This publication, in its 41st edition, provides astronomical data on the sun, Polaris and other selected stars The Ephemeris is not a popular publication, and it is not offered for free distribution. The Government Printing Office sells the scientific pamphlet for 20 cents.

"Surveyors and navigators all over the world use this type of star guide to determine meridians, positions and thereby chart their courses," Dr. Marion Clawson, Director of the Bureau of Land Management, said.

The book, an annual publication of the Bureau of Land Management, is the authoritative source of data necessary in surveying public lands.

Snowy Owls

A large number of snowy owls, rare visitors from the arctic, have been reported in the vicinity of Washington in greater abundance than at any time since 1926-27. In the capital, the welcome visitors breakfast and supper on starlings, says the U S fish and wildlife service, and in the country they are equally welcome because they eat quantities of small rodents.

These large white birds nest on the Alaska and Canadian tundra. Some of them migrate southward as far as the northern United States nearly every winter On very rare occasions they penetrate as far south as California, Louisiana, and Georgia Unlike most owls the snowy owl is diurnal.

Legal Duck Kill

The legal duck kill for the United States is estimated at 18 5 million by the fish and wildlife service, the figure being based on an analysis of data gathered from bag checks and post season hunter contacts The Pacific flyway had 21 per cent of the hunters and 23 per cent of the kill; central flyway, 24 per cent of the hunters and 18 per cent of the kill; Mississippi flyway, 42 per cent of the hunters and 46 per cent of the kill.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

American Troops Taking Beating In Korea; Mobilization of U. S. Manpower and Industry Forecast

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

KOREA:
GI's Take Beating

As the Korean battle went into the fourth week it became apparent to every American that U.S. troops were taking a beating.

They were outnumbered; tanks were inferior and too few; guns and bazookas could not pierce the 12-inch armor of the Russian made tanks. They were pinned to foxholes by tanks, artillery and mortars; overwhelmed by massed infantry, sniped at from the sides and rear by infiltrating columns.

Taejon, provisional capital of South Korea, was abandoned after the Kum river line was broken by thousands of fanatical Communists who charged American positions without regard to casualties. They overran first aid stations, killing patients and chaplains, and for every one the Americans killed, ten took his place.

American forces began a slow withdrawal which appeared would halt some 35 miles southeast of Taejon where a range of hills offered a natural defense position. Whether or not they held this position would depend upon reinforcements and the continued flow of guns, tanks, and ammunition.

No matter how optimistic a view an observer was inclined to take, the situation appeared serious. As has often been the case in the past, Americans greatly underrated North Korea's military strength and fighting determination. Facts of the situation indicated: North Korea had 10 to 15 divisions 100,000 to 250,000 men, with replacements handy from the armies of Communist China when needed. At least 200 tanks, with replacements also available from Russia, and almost unlimited supplies behind the lines in Siberia and in Manchuria.

United States would need eight full divisions, perhaps 250,000 men. The inadequate supply of tanks and heavy artillery in the Pacific would have to be remedied.

The one bright spot in the picture was the work of the U.S. air force which had knocked out tanks, bombed and strafed troop concentrations and supply lines, and driven the North Korean planes from the air.

But military observers pointed out that air power will greatly increase the chances of victory, but the Korean war, as has been the case in all wars, will be won by the soldier who fights through mud and rain and cold and heat. The foot soldier has not been replaced with push-button warfare, as yet.

McCARTHY:
Called a Liar

Senator Joseph McCarthy, who has had more front-page publicity in the American press than any one man in a number of years, has made the front pages again, but not to his liking.

The senator, still screaming charges of communism in the state department, was called a liar by three Democratic members of senate investigating subcommittee.

Reporting their conclusions from four-month inquiry, they attacked the Wisconsin Republican in terms of harshness rarely used in the state's history. They accused him of conscious falsehood and of serving the interests of the Communists by raising baseless suspicion among the people of the country.

They cleared every person McCarthy accused of being a Communist.

The Republican members of the committee, Senators Hickenlooper and Lodge, declined to sign the report.

The Democrat members termed McCarthy's charges "a fraud and a hoax perpetrated on the senate of the United States and the American people."

Their report said, in part:

"They (McCarthy's charges) represent perhaps the most nefarious campaign of half truths and untruth in the history of this republic. For the first time in our history we have seen the totalitarian technique of the big lie employed on a sustained basis.

"The result has been to confuse and divide the American people, at a time when they should be standing in their unity, to a degree far beyond the hopes of the Communists themselves, whose stock in trade is confusion and division."

SOVIET UNION:
Olive Branch

Although no official announcement has been made, it is believed in many quarters the Soviet Union has offered terms for settling the Korean war. It is a bloody and wilful branch the Russians are holding out to the United Nations.

Under the sugar coating of diplomatic language is penetrated, it is believed Russia would be willing to call off the affair after China is seated in the United Nations.

Korea Commander

Lt. General Walton H. Walker, a tank expert from Texas and commander of the Eighth Army, has been named to the top command post in Korea. Walker gained fame as commander of the 20th corps in Patton's Third Army.

MOBILIZATION: Is It Near?

Many observers are wondering if complete mobilization of this country's manpower and industrial strength is in prospect for the near future. Some believe it is, unless the world situation takes a sudden and unexpected turn for the better.

Within a matter of hours after this writing, President Truman was expected to go before congress and outline for the American people steps deemed urgent to cope with the Korean war. He was also scheduled to speak over a nation-wide radio hookup and tell Americans just where we stand.

One official predicted the President would:

1. Request new military funds or contract authorizations totaling $5,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000.

2. Propose legislation authorizing 160,000 more men for the army above the present legal limit of 837,000 and 60,000 more for the Navy, which now cannot exceed 666,882. An increase may also be ordered for the 502,000-man air force.

HOME FRONT:
Controls Likely

Observers on the home front are predicting limited controls to back up an intensified military campaign in Korea.

At this writing the controls had not been asked for, but observers pointed out that anti-inflationary action was becoming more urgent with each day. They predicted President Truman would ask for them within a very short time.

A request for higher taxes, to cover an expected jump in military spending, was held to be inevitable.

Government officials were predicting privately that President Truman would ask congress:

1. Power to allocate—by voluntary means, or more drastic measures if necessary—steel and a few other basic metals.

2. Authority to put quantity ceilings on the production of automobiles, television and radio sets and other civilian products consuming large quantities of metal, so that the demands of these industries will not interfere with arms production or create a "gray market" in prices.

3. Restoration of consumer credit controls. By tightening up on easy-payment credit for automobiles and other consumer goods, it is hoped that some of boom-level buying demand may be removed from the market.

LABOR:
Mobilization Urged

At least one labor leader, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has demanded all-out preparedness for any eventuality, including mobolization of labor.

"We find ourselves facing a situation with the implication of a third world war . . . . If war is localized now, we know it is only a question of time until the inevitable happens. Only adequate preparedness can safeguard us," Green said.

He added: "We cannot send our soldier to the fighting front without training equipment and regular supplies . . . . We must provide quick transportation which will increase mobility . . . . There will be no side lines secure from bombing . . . . There must be mobilization of labor."

Electoral College

In what observers believe to be one of the strangest line-ups in modern political history, the house killed, 210 to 134, the proposal that would have made a presidential election more nearly reflect the popular vote.

The senate approved the constitutional amendment last spring. The measure needed a two thirds vote. Had it passed, it would have needed approval by states.

ECONOMY:
Profits and Prices

As the Korean war roared into its fourth week much of the news was being made on the home front in the form of profits and prices.

Government agencies announced after-tax profits of American manufacturing firms as a whole were nearly five percent higher in the first quarter of 1950 than in the fourth quarter of 1949.

At the same time the prices of foods, especially meat and coffee, took an upward swing that made many consumers catch their breaths.

At least one congressman, Representative Klein of New York, demanded an investigation of high living costs and profiteering. He went so far as to charge bakers and dairies with "soaking the consumer without conscience."

"Meat prices are threatening to turn this country into a nation of vegetarians and ruin the cattle raising states," he said.

Also on the economic front, the Federal Reserve Board said preliminary figures show that industrial production reached a new postwar peak in June.

Production was estimated at about one percent higher than the previous postwar peak of October-November, 1948, and 17 percent above the level of June, 1949.

Some highlights on the net profits report:

1. After-tax profits were $100,000,000 higher in first-quarter 1950 than the preceding quarter, but unchanged from the 1949 first-quarter mark of $2,400,000,000.

2. The rate of return on stockholders' equity was 12 percent in first-quarter 1950 against 11.6 in last year's fourth quarter and 12.8 in its first-quarter.

3. Dividend payments to stockholders totaled $1,000,000,000 against $1,700,000,000 in last year's fourth quarter and $900,000,000 in first-quarter 1949.

4. Profits per dollar of sales rose to 6.2 cents from 6 in last year's fourth quarter and 6.1 in its first quarter.

5. Setasides for federal - income taxes amounted to $1,500,000,000 in both the 1950 and 1949 first in fourth-quarter 1949.

EDUCATION:
No One Flunks

A new trend in education—100 percent promotion of pupils in the lower grades—is reported by educators.

Educators won't come right out and say no one flunks any more in the lower grades on the ground that some elementary pupils still need the threat of failing to spur them on, but it's true that fewer are flunking.

The new trend seems to be based on four points:

1. Little is learned by repeating.

2. Failure merely discourages and does not aid pupils.

3. There is no reliable way of determining failures.

4. Real failures cannot do the work, no matter how often they repeat.

This is a long jump from the days of reading, writing and arithmetic and the rule of the hickory stick. The educators sum up their report:

"Nonpromotion is an admission of an inadequate school program and has no place in a school where children are motivated properly and work to the level of their capacities.

"What is looked on as a pupil failure may be a teacher, supervisor, or administrator failure."

Into Battle

The realities of the Korean war were impressed on Americans in every walk of life as this country's soldier went into action in Korea. Scenes like the one above were grim reminders to Americans that the foot soldier is still the workhorse of war. A group of U.S. soldiers above are nearing the front.

HENRY WALLACE:
What Now, Little Man?

Henry Wallace, who calls himself a progressive but who has been the darling of the Communist press since his visit to Russia, now finds himself consigned to the ranks of Wall Street buccaneers by the Daily Worker.

Observers are wondering what will be the next utterance of this muddled thinker who was once the Vice-President of the United States and greatly liked?

SPORTSCOPE By JOE MAHONEY

Doctor Views Heredity in Sports

By GRANTLAND RICE

JOHN PARTRIDGE, the veteran race horse trainer and one of the smartest, was discussing a new angle concerning heredity in sport.

"Years ago," he said, "I spent some time at the Mayo's in Rochester, Minn. There I discovered to my surprise that Dr. Mayo was a turf lover as well as an occasional horse player.

"I spend most of my time," Dr. Mayo said, "with the sick and the dying The thoroughbred is my only outside outlet."

"It was then," Grantland Rice John Partridge said, "that we began discussing various angles on heredity among competitors

"I've discovered one thing," Dr. Mayo said then. "That is that athletic mothers rarely give birth to athletic children. I mean the ones that come to me. They are so muscularly developed that apparently they need too many things to carry their own system. I have checked back as far as I could and have discovered that most fine athletes come from mothers who were not athletes—not in any way. I mean the Cobbs, the Ruths, the Dempseys, the Hagens. Most of them were rather frail.

"'For that matter,' Dr. Mayo said, "not many fine athletes on the male side breeds sons or daughters who are good at athletic games. Out of a long list of children from these famous athletes I've discovered very few who ever amounted to much as competitors in sport.'

"This got me to thinking recently about this subject," Partridge said. "So I began looking into the horse angle. I discovered from a long review that very few good running mares ever gave the racing game either good colts or good fillies.

"Here's a list." The veteran trainer took out a record book and the figures were there to prove his statement. Most of the good ones came from well-bred mares, but not good racing mares.

"A Man O'War can be the sire of many great racing horses," John said. "But it doesn't work that way for mares who can win races It must be for the same reason Dr. Mayo discovered or dug up a few years ago. One would think that an athletic father and mother would produce an athletic prodigy. Only they don't. Or at least rarely. Apparently heredity on the athletic field doesn't run that way."

It is a subject that could stand a bit more study.

The Younger Stars

What has become of the younger golf stars? Where are such kids from the past as Bobby Jones, Francis Ouimet, Chick Evans, Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Johnny Goodman, Bob Gardner?

In the recent P.G.A. the last 16 left averaged around 36 years of age. Cary Middlecoff and Jack Burke are about the only new names that have sprung up lately. The P.G.A. apparently wants no youth in its major tournament which frequently leads to such results as we had at Columbus with two old-timers left.

It was nice to see two instructors fighting out the last round with the tournament stars beaten out. but someone in golf should start encouraging a few young fellows.

On the amateur side, they turn pro when they can make part of a living at the game.

Golf has always had one major trouble. It is too expensive for too many people. The price of golf balls has risen. The price of clubs is up. Caddies cost you $2 or more a round now against 75 cents and a dollar a few years back. There are few caddies from the younger crop watching crack veterans play as Sarazen, Hagen and others did.

Jerry Travers was a kid phenom at 15, Bobby Jones shot a 70 when he was 12. At 14 he reached the last eight in the amateur championship.

I saw Chick Evans shooting in the low 70's when he was 16. Francis Ouiment was scoring 70 or 71 when he was 18.

Golf was then a young man's game. It is still a young man's game but not many kids today have the money or the zest for hard work needed.

The Total Base Record

Recently Bobby Doerr of the Red Sox contributed two home runs, a triple and a single in one game.

Back in the 90's, Bobby Lowe of Boston and Ed Delehanty of Philadelphia each hit four home runs and a single in one game. This is a matter of 17 total bases and it still stands.

Lou Gehrig, one afternoon in Philadelphia, came the closest to cracking this mark. Lou hit four homers and at his last time at bat smashed out a long fly ball.

Babe Ruth was never able to approach the 17-total-base collection for one game. Neither was Jimmy Foxx nor Hank Greenberg. Ted Willliams hasn't been close.

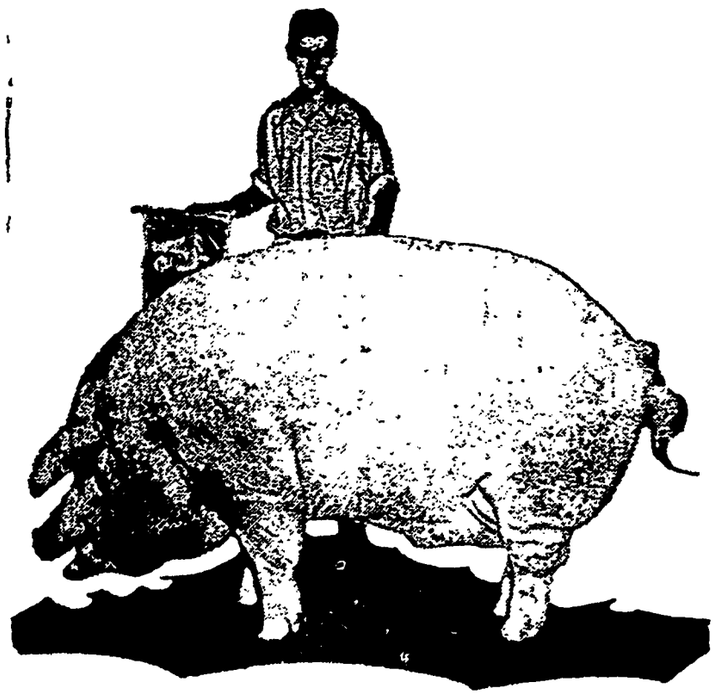
Show Prize Stock at State Fair



Des Moines, Ia., Special: The national stock show which opens Aug. 25 at the Iowa Mid-Century State Fair, is already breaking records, officials announced this week. Cash prizes, over $100,000, are the largest ever offered. Entries of prize horses, cattle, swine and sheep are expected to top the 7,000 head which set a new record at the fair here last season. COWS NEED EXTRA FEED DURING HOT WEATHER

Hot August weather makes dairy cows think of comfort instead of eating, and that's one of the reasons milk production drops sharply at this time of year.

Not only is it too hot for cows to eat comfortably out in the pasture, but bluegrass aren't much more than an exercise lot during August, says Robert Fincham, extension dairy specialist at Iowa State College. He urges dairymen to give their cows additional hand-outs in the yard they can enjoy their feed in the shade.

Farmers who have put up grass silage this year are now in a position to keep up milk production The silage along with grain feeding furnishes nutrients that are lacking in dry, hard pasture grass. Another good thing about grass silage, Fincham points out, is that no more protein supplement is needed than was required when milk cows were on good grass pasture. Dairy cows on poor pasture or being fed dry feed to keep up production need more protein supplement.

Milk contains 87½ percent water, and production will drop if water isn't near the place where cows are resting or grazing. Some Iowa farmers have found that it pays to haul water out to the pasture if the water tank isn't handy.

Finchman reminds dairymen to make sure there's plenty of loose salt and steamed bonemeal before the cows at all times.

Europe is named for the goddess Europa.

TIME TO CHANGE FLY KILLER NOW

Lindane Better Than DDT In Summer Season

Continued sanitation practices and use of lindane form the team Iowans can rely on to keep down flies during hot weather.

Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College, recommends that folks who have been using DDT for fly control switch to Lindane during hot weather. DDT works best in the cooler weather of early summer. Chlordane, another chemical fly killer, does good work during hot weather but is broken down by sunlight more rapidly than either DDT or lindane.

Lindane possesses residual action and gives a faster knockdown than DDT, according to Gunderson. It works better than the other two chemicals in hot weather and lasts 3 to 6 weeks indoors.

Spray It On

Lindane may be applied as a one-fourth percent or one-half percent spray at the rate of 1 gallon per 1,000 square feet of surface. For painting window screens, Gunderson suggests a 1 percent mixture in oil.

While lindane can be relied on to kill flies that appear in spite of sanitation measures taken, Gunderson emphasizes that keeping fly breeding places cleaned up is the backbone of the whole fly control effort regardless of chemicals used.

Garbage disposal, compost, livestock pens and feeding areas, and outdoor toilets are places to watch closely to keep down fly breeding. Gunderson says that garbage should be stored in tight metal containers set above the ground either on concrete or on a wood platform. The can should be washed out once a week.

Cover Breeding Places

He suggests composting all grass clippings and garden waste in a hole 2 feet deep. Cover it with a layer of packed earth and put a piece of tar paper over that.

Sprinkling borax on the ground under livestock pens and feeding areas, and keeping manure hauled out once a week will keep fly breeding down in these areas.

Fly-tight outdoor toilets built or remodeled according to plans prepared by the Iowa Department of Health are recommended by Gunderson. He also suggests applying borax on the contents of the pit each day.

Atom-Powered Plane Has Supersonic Speeds Still in Production

[illegible] OHIO — Development of [illegible] atom-powered airplane able to circle the globe at supersonic speeds, is in progress and a date for its test flight is in the offing.

Andrew Alitinsky, chief engineer of the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic center has said that work on the plane is on a definite timetable.

The plane will be of larger dimensions than current bombers, it was said, but will resemble present supersoning models in appearance.

Speaking before the institute of aeronautical sciences, the 36-year old scientist said the main obstacle to overcome will be the shielding against lethal nuclear radiation within weight limits imposed by aircraft. However, he said the tremendous weight of gasoline in conventional aircraft affords a good margin for the shielding job, since fuel weight will be negligible in an atomic-powered plane.

"A pound of uranium has about two million times as much energy as a pound of gasoline." Kalitinsky said, "and that's what excites scientists, since present supersonic planes use fuel so fast and can carry so little that the X-1 rocket craft, for example, can only fly three minutes."

Kalitinsky said there still remain many complicated problems in the application of atomic energy to aircraft, but "these problems do not look insurmountable."

The development of the atomic-powered aircraft is a joint undertaking of the atomic energy commission, the national advisory committee for aeronautics and the air force and navy.

Angered Burglar Sets Fire When Safe Empty

CINCINNATI --A burglar, angered because he couldn't crack a safe in the Queen City Laundry here, set fire to the place and left a note telling why.

The note, found in the laundry office, said:

"Next time leave some money around. See what you had to pay for not having money handy for a poor feller. Your poor safe—So sorry. Haw, haw, haw."

Fire Marshal Joseph Devine said kerosene had been spilled over office furniture to start the fire. A watchman in a next-door warehouse saw the blaze, however, and damage was limited to $200

Atom Bombing Survivors Appear Now Out of Danger

WASHINGTON —After more than five years, survivors of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki appear to be out of danger. Very few of the dreaded delayed effects have appeared, according to reports to the atomic energy commission.

A thorough study of the blood picture of the survivors was made last year. There was a slight decrease from normal in both red blood cells and various types of white cells, but this was not sufficient to affect general health. Almost the same picture obtained in the Japanese city of Kure, which suffered no atomic bombardment.

A good many babies have been born in both A-bombed cities since 1945. There were predictions that children of the bomb victims would show a high percentage of deformity. This has not been the case.

There was only one significant positive finding reported by a team of doctors headed by Dr. David Cogan of Harvard university. They detected 10 cases of cataracts of the eyes which were undoubtedly due to radiation. Accepting those examined as a fair sample, it is predicted that about 6 per cent of all those within 1,000 yards of the center of the explosion eventually will develop such cataracts, which lead to blindness.

"Otherwise," says the report, "those surviving the acute effects of radiation can expect a reasonably normal life."

It is stressed, however, that it may still be too early to make this prediction with complete assurance. There is reason to suppose that there will be a somewhat greater amount of leukemia, the incurable "blood cancer," as the years go by.

Russia Named Beneficiary In Will of Late New Yorker

NEW YORK.—New Yorker Laird Shields Goldsborough has bequeathed "certain articles of special rarity" to the Russian government. Shields, a former foreign affairs editor of Time magazine, jumped or fell to his death from his office on the ninth floor of 9 Rockefeller plaza.

In his will, he named the Russian government an alternative legatee to the contents of a safe deposit box, described only as "certain articles of special rarity."

The Elizabethan club of Yale university, the Metropolitan museum of art, the British museum in London and the Hermitage museum of Leningrad, in turn, have the chance to take the articles.

If none accepts, Goldsborough's will directed that "said articles be given to the de facto government for the time being in Russia, to have and to hold to its own use and benefit absolutely and forever."

Service Gives German Women Will to Live

NUREMBERG, GERMANY.—Hundreds of German women, exhausted and depressed by 10 years of war, poverty and uncertainty have found strength to go on living with the help of the Bavarian Mothers Service.

This 15-year-old independent voluntary agency of the Evangelical church of Germany, headed by Dr Antonie Nopitsch, is helping about 4,000 women a year to find themselves again. It operates seven "rest homes" where a woman can have a two-week spiritual retreat from the struggle against poverty and trouble.

One of the rest homes and also a Bible school and the headquarters of the service, overlooks the green farmlands of Stein, near here. There a mother can find a soft bed, quietness, spiritual help and friends. It is a complete change of surroundings.

Unable to Sleep

Some mothers who come to Stein and to the other rest homes have been sleeping on straw mattresses and chairs for so long in crowded rooms in Bavarian villages that they cannot sleep on soft beds the first few nights.

"It's like heaven," explained one woman. "It's like a fairy story here. It's all light and bright and there is plenty of room and big windows.

"Everyone is so friendly—I feel I am loved again."

The small, tired mother spoke with tears in her eyes. She gazed at the pictures on the walls of the dining room, longingly. Her face was lined, but she smiled occasionally as she told of her life in the last few years as a refugee.

Her husband was the manager of a distillery in upper Silesia, now a Russian occupied territory. They had three children. He joined the German army in January, 1945, and was taken prisoner by the Russians. He was sent back to her in October, 1946, ill and depressed. He died a year later.

She and many other women in the village, in the same plight, fled with their children by wagon across the border into the Bavarian forest. They live in peasant houses and villages. Some day they would like to go back home "when the Russians are gone."

Many Can't Get Jobs

They cannot get jobs because of current unemployment. There are about 100,000 such mothers in the area served by the Bavarian Mothers' service. They are allowed about $12 a month from the government, in an economy where a pair of shoes costs $8.

"Nobody wants them," said Dr Nopitsch. "It is worst for those women whose husbands return from Russian camps.

"The man returns, exhausted, without energy, ideas or initiative. He is always thinking about his comrades who were left behind in camp. He is hardened. He does his own sewing. He has been away for so many years that the children don't recognize him as their father.

"Imagine what this does to his wife, who has grown old with the cares and worries of trying to make ends meet. Difficulties arise and the neighbors gossip. There are seven million more women than men in Germany, so that the men are encircled by women.

Policemen Sell Blood To Help Fellow Officer

ST. PAUL, MINN.—St. Paul policemen are doing something unique for a unique fellow officer, Alfred E. (Big Al) Jakobson.

Jakobson had one of his lungs removed recently in Rochester, Minn. His officer friends made a deal with the Rochester hospital which billed Jakobson for $800. The hospital agreed to take their blood at $25 a pint and apply it to Jakobson's bill.

Four officers went to Rochester, contributed a pint of blood apiece and knocked $100 off the bill. Other officers are planning to follow suit.

Big Al—he's 6 foot 7—is a familiar figure in the St. Paul loop, where he has been a traffic officer most of the time since 1929.

Always eager to help tourists, Jakobson produced, at his own expense, pocket sized maps of the Twin Cities and handed them to confused visitors.

Then Big Al developed another idea, after night motorists almost clipped him a couple of times.

He sewed reflecting green material on the palm side of his right mitten, and red on the back.

At night he'd halt traffic with a wave of the red, then wave them on by turning and opening his hand.

But more unique among policemen was Jakobson's refusal of a promotion to detective.

Big Al had a good reason. He was studying law nights. If he took the detective rank he'd have to quit his studies to serve a night shift now and then.

He kept his patrolman's rank, worked days and studied nights, right up to the time he became ill.

Just before he got sick he passed an examination for the rank of detective lieutenant. He was certified to that position, but never has had a chance to work at it.

New Method Shows Heart Ills Before Danger Point Nears

ST. LOUIS.— A new means of disclosing heart ailments before they reach the deadly stage is saving many lives, according to Sumner T. Pike, acting chairman of the atomic energy commission. Pike said the method was developed only recently in an atom-radiation study.

"A little piece of research that had no connection with atomic energy has produced what looks like the most highly important discovery in the history of heart disease," Pike said.

He explained that University of California scientists were studying the effect of radiation on the blood of rabbits when they noticed that certain molecules in the blood meant incipient hardening of the arteries.

Pike said the telltale molecules now can be separated from other constituents of the blood by whirling a blood sample around in a centrifuge.

"When the heart trouble is detected in its incipient stage, it can speedily be corrected by dieting," Pike added.

He said after the test was found to work with rabbits, it was tried on 104 "cardiac humans" and 103 responded to the diagnosis.

"This means a complete, definite diagnosis of the principal group of heart diseases with better than 98 per cent accuracy," Pike asserted.

Rookie Cop Creating Crimes for Fun of It

SAN DIEGO.—A rookie policeman who told authorities he "got a bang" out of hearing sirens was accused of creating crimes and finally shooting himself to add realism to a phony bandit scare.

Stanton G. Miller, 28, a marine corps war veteran, was quoted by Sheriff Bert Strand as admitting that while he wore a patrolman's uniform at suburban El Cajon:

He set a haystack afire and started two brush fires.

Made false robbery and burglary reports.

And last night shot himself in the calf of his left leg, and reported he was wounded by one of four men in a car he had stopped for a traffic violation.

Miller was jailed, charged with making false reports—a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum jail term of six months and $500 fine.

Cripples Once 'Hopeless' Show Handicap Triumphs

WASHINGTON. — Some "hopeless" cripples showed why there's plenty of room for any handicapped person to have hope.

A man with one leg ran a creditable 60-yard dash.

A man with only two stumps for legs, and with no control over either stump, not only walked, but also climbed a stair.

A man who had put on the second of his two artificial legs recently walked jauntily across the room.

All this was part of a demonstration at the national Conference on workmen's compensation and rehabilitation.

It illustrated a change that has come over the thinking on the proper treatment for cripples. In the old days a man with no legs, for example, was taught a job in which he needed no legs.

Now the theory is to give him legs and teach him to stand.

Dr. Henry H. Kessler, West Orange, N. J., and Dr. Josephine J. Buchanan, Fishersville, Va., showed what hard work and patience on the part of both the patients and the doctors can do.

Charles Cook, 30, Keen Mountain, Va., hurt his back in a mine accident in 1943. Paralyzed from the hips down, he couldn't walk for five years.

Then the United Mine Workers welfare fund paid for an operation and for instruction at the Fishersville Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation center.

"Charlie fell down in the hotel today," Dr. Buchanan said, "and everyone rushed to pick him up. 'Leave him alone,' I said, 'Charlie can get up by himself.'"

Charlie got up by himself.

Nabbed Bank Robber Has Long-Time Record

ST. LOUIS, MO.—A 62-year-old man captured by a woman bank teller has been involved in bank thefts amounting to more than a million dollars, the federal bureau of investigation reported.

William R. Evans was charged with larceny of a bank. Miss Audrey Lorenzen, a blond bank teller, captured him with the help of a passerby. She chased Evans through downtown streets after more than $1,500 was taken from her bank.

FBI agent Gerald B. Norris called Evans a notorious "stick man"—one who puts chewing gum or sticky paper on the end of a stick to help grab money in tellers' cages.

Norris said that Evans has a criminal record dating back to 1907, including involvement in a $590,000 bond theft from the Bank of Manhattan in 1936.

Evans denied the St. Louis theft. He suffered a heart attack following the chase.

TO IMPROVE McINTOSH PARK AT CLEAR LAKE

A contemplated $20,000 improvement program for McIntosh Woods State park on the north shore of Clear Lake was approved Saturday morning at a meeting of the Iowa conservation commission at Hotel Hanford. The commission will request release of funds for the program from the state interium committee.

Three new parking areas, one east and two west of the existing road in the park, will be provided to accommodate 104 autos. It is possible that a 4th area will be constructed to add parking space for an additional 40 vehicles. At present only 2 small parking areas are available.

A new well will be drilled at the edge of the northernmost picnic area and two toilet buildings will be erected near the proposed 60 car parking area in the extreme northwest corner of the 60-acre park.

The natural sand beach on the east side of the point will be improved and new dressing booths for swimmers will be erected above this beach.

Plans also include a new gateway to the area from highway 18 with entrance portals on each side of the existing road.

Goldfish originated in China.

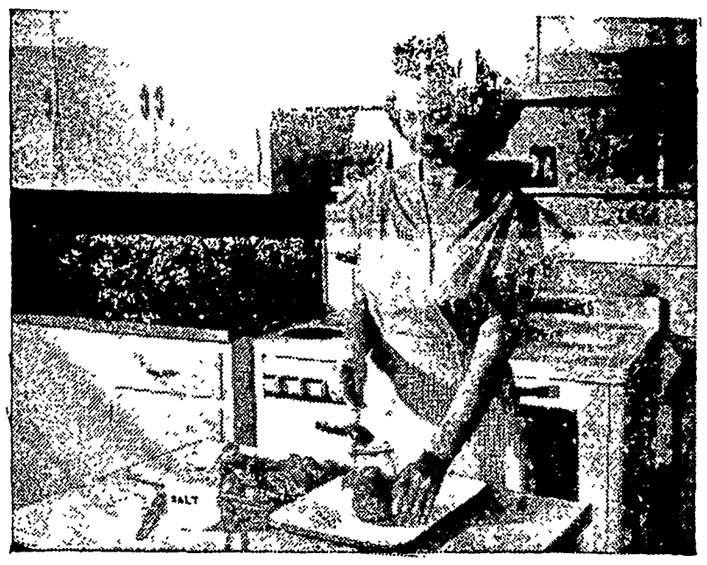
It's Time To—

CAN TOMATOES



Those garden-fresh rosy-ripe tomatoes are here again. Pick them early, can them quickly and use top-quality tomatoes to get the best results and to avoid spoilage.

Winter is just around the corner, so now is the time to can those bright red tomatoes. Next winter you'll be rewarded with a variety of healthful, appetizing dishes for everyday or company meals.

Tomatoes are quick and easy to can once you know the canning rules. Follow the rules very closely and your results will be satisfying. If you forget the rules you may lose much time and money.

Tomatoes may be canned by either the hot or raw pack method. Those canned by the hot pack method allow more tomatoes to go in each jar, but the raw pack hold their color and shape better. There is very little difference in the flavor of tomatoes canned either way.

Tomatoes, as well as other foods, do not improve after they are canned Start with ripe, firm tomatoes that have no bad spots.

Two Methods Used

For the hot pack method, wash tomatoes, then scald and cool for easier peeling. Cut out the stem and quarter. Stir as the tomatoes are brought to a boil. Pack them hot and process in a water bath for ten minutes.

The washing and peeling procedure is the same for the raw pack method as it was for the hot pack method. However, you may pack the tomatoes either quartered or whole. Fill hot, clean jars one at a time with the raw tomatoes, pressing gently to fill the spaces. Fill to ½ inch of the top of the jar with hot tomato juice. Do not add water. Add ½ teaspoon of salt to pint jars; 1 teaspoon to quarts.

It is important to always remove air bubbles by running a knife around the inside of the jar. For an airtight seal, make sure the rim of the jar is clean before sealing.

Place jars in a water bath of hot, not boiling, water. Then add boiling water to cover the jar 1 or 2 inches, but do not pour it directly on the jars, as they may break. Water bath canners should have a tight lid and a rack so the water can circulate.

When processing raw pack tomatoes in pint jars by the water bath method, process for 35 minutes; inquart jars for 45 minutes.

Caps should be completely sealed as soon as the processing is completed. Keep the jars away from any draft and cool right side up. On the following day test for leaks by tipping the jar carefully.

Freeze Tomato Juice

Why not try to freeze some tomato juice for future winter use? To freeze tomato juice select vine-ripened tomatoes of good color. Avoid any fermented or molded fruit. Either red or yellow tomatoes make attractive juice.

Wash and cut tomatoes, removing any defective spots. Simmer until soft. Do not boil. Strain, add 1 teaspoon salt per quart juice. Cool quickly.

Package in plastic bags, glass jars or metal containers. Leave one-tenth the height of the containers or three-quarers inch head space. Freeze for later use.

OAK FUNGUS DISEASE GETS WORSE IN IOWA

Oak wilt is a serious fungus disease that's been in Iowa for several years and is getting worse, observes Paul Hoffman, Iowa State College plant pathologist.

When the wilt attacks red oaks, usually in early June, tree tops turn brown as though seared with fire. Destruction creeps downward and within 30 to 60 days, usually by this time in summer, trees are dead.

The kill takes longer in white oak, and frequently the disease attacks scattered branches throughout the tree, instead of starting at the top.

To fight the wilt, Hoffman says to prune off the diseased branches 6 feet behind the point of visible symptoms. This destroys some of the healthy wood and has given only slight control in infected white oaks, but it's the only measure yet devised to combat the disease. Pruning doesn't help red oaks.

Hoffman advises burning of all diseased, dead wood stumps as a further control measure. Part of Hoffman's present research project is to discover how the wilt is transmitted.

GOOD CITIZEN

Taxes You Kick About Paying Finance Your Conveniences

This is the fifth of a series of ten articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

THE FOURTH promise of a good citizen· I will pay my taxes understandingly (if not cheerfully).

Yes, it's human nature to squirm when the government (even though it's your government) strikes at your pocketbook nerve through taxation.

But it's also human nature to demand the conveniences, improvements and protection that you want for your family, your community and your country.

What paves the street in front of your house and throws a network of smooth highways across the country?

What keeps police cars cruising the streets, and maintains an army, a navy, an airforce and the F.B.I.?

What supports the farmer's friend, the county agent, and sends consuls and ambassadors to protect our citizens and interests in foreign lands?

THE ANSWER, obviously, is taxes —the tried and proved method of everybody chipping in to provide the things which all of us need and none of us can pay for by himself.

The weather forecast you read in the paper or get on the radio is made possible by a tax-supported organization.

Your tax money and the other fellow's protect the purity of the water you drink and insure full weight and wholesomeness in the food you buy. Taxes make possible the public schools, the public libraries, the public parks, the public fire department and the public everything from the street light on the corner to the lighthouse at sea.

Every hour of the day and night your safety, your health, your security and your valuables are protected by public servants paid for by your taxes

Taxes represent the cost of our government doing business. They are determined by the people we elect to office. We give these people the right to do a lot of things with our money but hold them accountable to us

If we feel they are spending it unwisely or too freely we can "turn the rascals out."

"In this world," wrote Benjamin Franklin, "nothing is certain but death and taxes" But isn't our method of taxation with representation an improvement over the confiscatory system of the dictator who sees what you have and takes as much as he wants?

Taxes are levied by four levels of government — federal, state, county and municipal. To become law, a tax must be voted upon and passed by the elected representatives of the people.

There are three general tax classifications·

A HIDDEN TAX—A hidden tax is one which is not apparent to the eye, and is usually part of anything you buy. For example, the price of a loaf of bread includes all the taxes which have been imposed from the time it is raw wheat until it reaches you.

A DIRECT TAX—A direct tax is one directly paid by the person on whom the ultimate tax burden falls. In other words, there is no middle man between you and the government. Examples are property, income, and inheritance taxes.

AN INDIRECT TAX—An indirect tax is one which is paid by someone other than the person who will finally pay it. In other words, it is a tax which is passed on to someone else. The manufacturer of an imported product pays the customs duty, and indirect tax because he will pass this on to the consumer by increasing the price of the product.

TWO OF the most important bodies which the public may come into contact in relation to taxation are the tax commissions and the tax court of the United States.

Tax commissions are state fiscal bodies, consisting usually of three appointive or elective members, which supervises local tax officials, assesses public utility and other property, collects most taxes not collected locally.

If you consider your tax assessment unfair you may appeal to a tax reviewing board.

The federal government knows mistakes can be made in the taxes claimed from you. That's why we have the United States Tax Court. You can contest before that court, before you pay, certain taxes which the commissioner of internal revenue claims you owe.

From the decisions of the tax court you may appeal to a higher court.

THE FICTION CORNER

ANNETTE PASSES OUT

By Richard H. Wilkinson

IN SEPTEMBER Bill decided he wasn't in love. He told himself it had been a summer romance. He regretted it. He couldn't walk out and leave Annette flat. He had to offer some sort of explanation.

The wind whipped in their faces as the roadster sped through the night. Annette snuggled contentedly at his shoulder.

3-Minute Fiction

He swung the roadster off the highway. They bumped along a wagon road, presently emerging into a clearing. Bill stopped. Toward the north the horizon was illuminated by a dull glow. Lights from the town.

Bill turned. Annette said: "Oh, Bill, I'm so glad we came out here. It was here you first told me you loved me. Remember?"

"Sure. I remember."

"Say it now. Bill. Say you love me!"

Bill had intended to say just the opposite. Without knowing why, he pitied her. He spoke, but what he said was: "Of course I love you. You know that." It was as if she impelled him to say it.

"Kiss me, Bill. Kiss me and say it again."

He kissed her, repeating the words, cursing himself for doing so.

Why did she have to cling to him so?

He got a grip on himself. He formed the words in his mind.

"Bill, I've got a surprise for you."

"Surprise?"

"I'm going back to Belfast with you," Annette said. "I've got a job there for the winter."

"I'm going back to Belfast with you. I've got a job there for the winter. We'll be together all winter, Bill, Isn't it grand!"

Lord! Now he was in for it. He hadn't expected that. Well, he'd have to be blunt, cruel. He'd have to tell her once and for all.

"BILL!" There was terror in her tone. He turned quickly. She was looking away from him toward the horizon where the dull glow had been. The dull glow he had thought to be town lights had developed into astonishing brilliance.

"Fire! The whole ridge is ablaze. Say, we'd better get going!"

He jammed his foot down on the starter. The motor whirred, and that was all. Bill swore, yanking out the choke. There was a sputtering whine, a cough, silence

Bill opened the roadster's door. "Come on! Engine's dead. We'll have to run for it."

He yanked her out of the car, started running along the wagon road, dragging her behind him. He hadn't realized that fire could be like this. The speed of its approach amazed him.

"Bill! Wait! You're going too fast."

Bill turned just as she fell forward. He knelt beside her. "Try and get up. We've got to keep going. It's our only chance."

Pitifully she tried, sank to the ground, moaning softly. He stooped and lifted her in his arms

"Bill, don't! You can't! Go on and leave me There's no use in both of us—"

He went on blindly. Behind him now he could hear the crackle of flames. The road ahead was alight from the brilliance of the fire. It required no effort to move.

Then suddenly, ahead, he saw the main highway. There were lights there. The lights from automobiles and trucks.

Bill lay sprawled in the back seat of a joggling touring car. He opened his eyes and saw Annette. Behind her the sky was dull red.

"Bill, why did you do it? Why didn't you leave me there when—when you knew——"

He said: "Say, what do you take me for? Leave behind the girl I love!"

"Oh, Bill, I've known for a month you didn't. I wouldn't let myself believe I was losing you. I wouldn't give you the chance to tell the truth."

Bill swallowed. So that was it? So that was the reason she had—Suddenly he lifted her in his arms "Annette," he whispered, "say you love me. Say it, and kiss me, darling."

MIRROR Of Your MIND

'How Are You?' Is Just Polite

By Lawrence Gould

Should you take "How are you?" literally?

Answer: As a rule, No. When the average person asks about your health, he's merely being "polite" and you'll surprise and annoy him if you go into details about how you are feeling. Of course, if you've been ill and it is a friend who asks you, that's another matter. But even so, telling someone that you feel bad when there's nothing he can do about it does you no good and makes him needlessly uncomfortable. Keep your aches and pains to yourself even with your family, unless it is necessary to explain why you are not your usual self.

Is it easier to be childish than to be adult?

Answer: Yes. And one proof is that as our mental powers decline in old age, we tend to revert to childish ways of thinking Psychologists Wayne Dennis and Betty Mallinger report that seventy-five per cent of inmates of homes for the aged gave answers to test questions which showed a less realistic view of life than would be normal for children of twelve to fourteen. To face and accept life as it is, while worth the effort, requires the full use of all our mental powers, and when these decline, we become children again.

Are there different ways of reading?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. Emmett Albert Betts, Director of Temple University Reading Clinic, Philadelphia. In a well-balanced reading program, a child should be taught to "skim" material at high speed to locate ideas: to "read rapidly" to get a general impression of an author's meaning, and to do "study-type reading" to think problems through and organize ideas. The old-fashioned notion that you should read every word of every type of reading matter both makes you waste time and may discourage you from reading at all.

MICHAEL RABIN, 14-year-old violionist, will probably make August 10th a day to remember, when he makes his network debut on The Telephone Hour. Rodzinski, directing the Havana Philharmonic when Rabin made his world debut last April, said "He is marvelous, fantastic. He has a tremendous future!" Jascha Heifetz and other famed musicians have also advised and encouraged this young genius. Not that Michael thinks of himself as one; his bicycle is one of his most prized possessions, he likes to swim and collect stamps and play ping pong, looks forward to having a car. BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

Bing Bewitched, Bothered Over Meeting Met Problems

By BILLY ROSE

A New York paper recently carried the following dispatch from Paris:

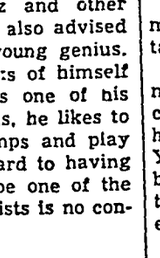
Rudolf Bing, new general manager of the Metropolitan Opera House, said today that he had come to Europe on the biggest talent search in operatic history.

Asked about the offer last year of Billy Rose, Broadway producer and columnist, to take over the Met and make it pay, Mr. Bing asked:

"Who's he?"

When reminded of Rose's identity, the impresario laughed and added:

"The problems of the Met will never be solved by Broadway methods."



Billy Rose

Judging from the above, it's evident that Mr. Bing has a sense of humor and, as Groucho Marx once said, if there's anything I like in a man or an opera director it's a sense of humor. But on the off-chance that some folks may have missed the hilarious overtones of Rudy's remarks, perhaps I ought to translate them and let everybody in on the joke.

FIRST OFF, our Viennese friend wants us to know that he's in Europe on what he modestly calls "the biggest talent search in operatic history." An admirable undertaking, but seeing as how the Herr Direktor recently put Kirsten Flagstadt on the Met payroll, the natural question is whether the talent he's looking for is in the [illegible] or treason department.

case this country for talent before taking his eyes and eardrums to the Continent. After all, when a gent with threadbare spats is imported to boss our No. 1 opera house and handed plenty of steak and salary for so doing, it would seem the part of good public relations for him to first give the home talent a careful look-listen.

It may very well be that the larynxes in Filadelfia, Germany, are superior to those in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, but you can't prove it by Marian Anderson.

Next we come to Rudy's side-splitting "Who dat?" when asked about me. When you come right down to it, there's no reason why Mr. B. should ever have heard hiss or hosannah of an American proter of a century in the entertainment business.

After all, it wasn't until recently that this Dapper Danubian had either time or incentive to keep up with theatrical news According to the record, he has spent a good deal of his adult life as amanuensis and assistant to various assistants, but nowhere do I find any mention of his having produced so much as a necktie—although, come to think of it, he did sell a few of [illegible] clerked in a London

ACTUALLY, UNLESS he suffers from a slapsy - lapsey memory, Brother Bing was only kidding when he said, "Who dat?" The fact is that he's made two tries in recent years to strike up a nodding acquaintance with me—both of which left me nodding. Once in London and once in New York, he did his darnedest to fast-talk me into backing some party venture he was fronting for, and each time I shooed him off with the polite explanation that my policy was, "Neither a borrower nor a sucker be"

There is, of course, an outside chance that this joker no longer remembers trying to put the bite on me — in which event we're even because I didn't know who he was when the Met announced his appointment.

For a long time, I thought the Bing in question was Herman Bing, the baggy-pantsed Dutch comedian —who else would hire Flagstadt and fire Melchior? Who else would substitute the grunt-and-groan German operas for the melodic Italian ones?

The final jest is rollicking Rudy's statement that "the problems of the Met will never be solved by Broadway methods." Mebbe so, but it seems to me that this carpy contention doesn't quite jibe with his much publicized efforts to sign Garson Kanin, Margaret Webster, Danny Kaye and Oscar Hammerstein II. If any of these Times Square tots ever set foot or adenoids in La Scala, then I'm a monkey's uncle and Mr. Bing is an

Adding to the Working Life Span

By Dr. James W. Barton

BECAUSE THE AVERAGE LIFE expectancy has increased almost 20 years—from 47 to 66—since the beginning of the century, there are more elderly men and women than any other single age group. This great increase in the number of elderly persons has brought problems of health and security to every community.

While security is very important to everybody, there are other points to be considered, such as the working span; that is how long the elderly man and woman is able to work or allowed to work.

Because of the great number of the aged and the problems they present to the community and themselves, medical journals, magazines and even newspapers are now paying heed to the elderly.

In the Journal of Gerontology, Dr. E. C. Clague shows that while life expectancy has been steadily increasing in recent decades, there have been no corresponding gains in the working life span. Modern industry and occupational trends have had the effect of not lengthening the working life span; in fact if anything, they tend to shorten it, because there has been no increase in the kind of work elderly men and women are able to do.

"A program for extension of working life is needed as an alternative to a steady increase in the period of old age dependency and in the corresponding economic burden," Dr. Clague writes.

During the depression period we are told that the British workers preferred to work for 30 shillings rather than remain idle and collect 25 shillings a week from the government. The same applies to the elderly, who greatly dislike the thought that employers consider them unfit for work when they reach a certain age.

To keep elderly people happy, employment for which they are fit should be provided by the community. Dr. Clague states that "this will require concerted community action.

Mrs. Poling says life [illegible] is like it used to be years ago... "that is, of course, since I've been taking HADACOL." She can't get over what a difference HADACOL has made in her outlook on life.

Mrs. Poling says: "Three months ago a good friend of mine told me about HADACOL—she knew I had much stomach distress I have had. Any type of food that was fried or that had acid in it I just couldn't eat. It affected my sleep, too. In fact, I couldn't have been in a worse condition. When I ate what I wanted to, I felt miserable and when I didn't eat these things—I didn't feel well. I ate a proper diet and still felt bad. Then when I started taking HADACOL I felt better immediately. I've got a bottle in the house now—and will continue to keep HADACOL on hand now on. I have told many people about HADACOL—and they all thank me for telling them about HADACOL. They all have received wonderful results from HADACOL like I have. International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

SCRIPTURE: Ezra 7; 8:15-36; Nehemiah 8-9.
DEVOTION READING: Psalm 119: 97-112.

He Loved Teaching

Lesson for August 13, 1950

WHAT WOULD you do if you had a million dollars? Several thousand school teachers were asked that question a few years ago. Seventy-five per cent of them gave the same answer: "I'd resign." They weren't real teachers, they were only hired help. The other twenty-five per cent were the real teachers. A great university teacher, Palmer of Harvard, wrote that he had the perfect job. Believe it or not, he said, "Harvard actually pays me for doing what—if I could afford it—I would gladly pay Harvard to let me do."

Dr. Foreman

No Finished Product

THE REAL thing about teaching is that you are dealing with people, young people, growing people. In every other line of business, whatever you turn out begins to depreciate almost as soon as it leaves the factory.

It doesn't take long for butter to get rancid, or bread stale. A cold-storage egg is a feeble imitation of a fresh one. A car that has changed hands once, even if it has run less than 1,000 miles, is already a "used" car on its way to the junk-pile.

But the products of the teacher's classroom are by no means "finished" products when they leave it, even if it is a finishing school. If the teacher's work has been done well, the product will go on improving for years, instead of running down.

Three Aims

PROFESSOR EZRA, of Babylon and Jerusalem, was one of history's most famous teachers. We note (Ezra 7:10) the same three aims in Ezra's life that you would expect to find in all good teachers.

First of all, he "prepared his heart" to do what he did. The "heart" is the Bible expression for character, for life as a whole. No one can be a truly good teacher who has a bad character.

Now Ezra prepared his heart to do three things The first was to "seek the law of the Lord." What a teacher teaches may be as important as who his pupils are; and Ezra's "subject" was the law which God had given his people—part of what we now call the Old Testament. Nowadays this is called research, but a simple word for it is just study A lazy teacher is a poor one A good teacher will spend more time studying than any of the pupils do—and will learn more, too. In fact, the best way to learn anything, including the Bible, is to try to teach it for a while.

Second, Ezra prepared his heart to do the law. The old sneer, "He who can, does; he who cannot, teaches," is true of poor teachers, not of the good ones. Particularly not true of Bible teachers. The aim of Bible teaching, from Moses' time till now, is always practical. "Truth is in order to goodness," as the Presbyterians say. One who has not tried out the Bible ideals in daily living will never do for a Bible teacher.

And third, Ezra set out to "teach in Israel." Your research scholar may or may not make a good teacher. The good teacher is not bored by teaching as some researchers are. He loves it. He is happiest at it.

Take Yourself, for Example

NOW LET US see how this comes out in your own home Sunday school. If yours is like most Sunday schools, the main trouble with it is that they can't find enough good teachers, enough people who really want to know about God's word themselves, who live and love to help others know it.

The Rev. H. M. Lewis of Texas has said in his essay, The Dividends of Teaching:

"When you begin to teach you will realize that at last you have found a purpose for your religion . . . Teaching gives a motive, the highest motive, for all acts of religion and for all pursuit of knowledge—'For their sakes.' Every Christian has the missionary obligation and is by virtue of his profession of faith, a missionary,—'Go, teach all nations.' Make your particular nation young America and your special opportunity systematic work in the Church school. Once you believe that you must be a teacher because you are a Christian . . . you will have heard your life's call."

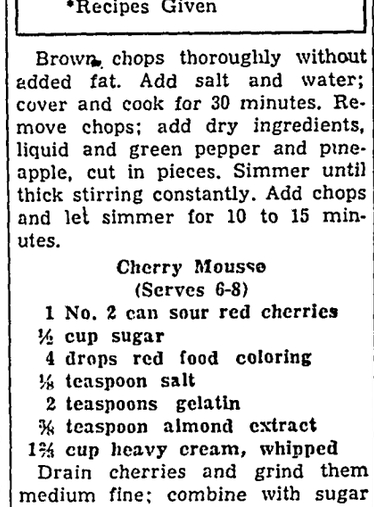
LYNN SAYS:
Put Wild greens to Use

As Cooked or Raw Vegetables

Wild greens can be useful as a vegetable. They're cooked like other greens and are delicious.

Strong-flavored wild greens are better when parboiled for two or three minutes in lots of water. Drain and cook as for other greens.

For cooking greens, use lightly, salted boiling water, and cook until leaves just wilt and greens are tender. Season and serve.



This cherry mousse made in a mold is a cool invitation to lazy summertime appetites. Made of smooth, whipped cream and sprinkled throughout with tempting bits of tart red cherries, this dessert is bound to please.

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU
*Oven Fried Chicken
Cranberry Sauce
Mashed Potatoes
Cream Gravy
Sliced Cucumber-Tomato Salad
Carrot Sticks
Radishes
Celery
*Coconut Ice Cream Balls
Chocolate Cup Cakes
Beverage
*Recipes Given

Brown chops thoroughly without added fat. Add salt and water; cover and cook for 30 minutes. Remove chops; add dry ingredients, liquid and green pepper and pineapple, cut in pieces. Simmer until thick stirring constantly. Add chops and let simmer for 10 to 15 minutes.

Cherry Mousse
(Serves 6-8)

1 No. 2 can sour red cherries
½ cup sugar
4 drops red food coloring
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons gelatin
⅜ teaspoon almond extract
1⅔ cup heavy cream, whipped

Drain cherries and grind them medium fine; combine with sugar and food coloring. Heat to boiling and cook one minute. Remove from heat and add salt. Soften gelatin in one tablespoon of juice, dipped from ground cherries, then stir into hot cherry mixture until gelatin is dissolved. Chill until cherry mixture is thick, then fold in whipped cream lightly but thoroughly. Turn immediately into cold refrigerator tray and freeze at lowest temperature until firm. Return to normal temperature to let mousse mellow.

Menu III

Chilled Apricot Nectar
Sea Food Salad in Tomato Cups
Potato Chips Pickle Fans
Coconut Ice Cream Balls

How to prepare: Chill apricot nectar and all salad ingredients overnight. Ice cream balls may be made in advance if they can be frozen in refrigerator.

Coconut Ice Cream Balls
(Makes 12)

2 cups moist coconut
3 pints vanilla ice cream
Food coloring (red, yellow or green)

Place coconut in glass jar and add whatever color food coloring is desired. Cap jar and shake vigorously until color is distributed evenly on coconut. Scoop ice cream into balls, two inches in diameter. Roll in coconut until well coated. Place in freezing tray or freezer until serving time.

Seafood Salad
(Serves 6)

1 can tuna fish, crabmeat, shrimp
2 tablespoons French dressing
1 cup diced celery
½ cup diced cucumber
2 tablespoons chopped radishes
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup mayonnaise
Salt and pepper to taste

Flake tuna fish and shrimp; remove black line from shrimp. Mix all seafood together and add French dressing. Marinate for 15 minutes. Add remaining ingredients and toss lightly.

If the wild green hunt does not yield much, you might try combining several different kinds to give enough for a vegetable.

Wild greens will wilt quickly. Plan to use them as rapidly as possible to get them at their best, and for their vitamins and minerals too.

Discard wilted and damaged leaves, and cut off roots when you prepare them for use. Lift out of water several times to dislodge all dirt.

GOV. WM. BEARDSLEY PRO-CLAIMS DRIVE RIGHT CAMPAIGN IN IOWA

The Iowa safety congress drive to save 14 lives on the state's highways in to two-week period was opened today by Governor William Beardsley who proclaimed a Drive Right campaign to begin in Iowa at noon, August 22, and to continue until noon, September 5.

At the same time, stop signs carrying safety posters appeared all over Hancock County and the state as the safety congress brought its safety poster service into action against accidents.

Posters placed in the stop signs today - the first in a 52-week series - highlight the Drive Right campaign and carry the illustrated message, "Keep Temptation Chained."

The message refers to the "temptations" to speed, to drink and drive, to let attention wander while driving and to be less than cautious at railroad crossings.

Aimed at saving a day on the highways, progress of the Drive Right campaign will be gauged by comparison with an average traffic accident record for the past two years in Iowa and in separate counties.

In the two weeks corresponding to August 22 through Sept. 5, an average of 27 persons have been killed and 795 injured in 1,657 Iowa traffic accidents in each of the past two years.

While the Drive Right campaign will be a state-wide safe driving effort, it will be sponsored on the county level by civic groups in cooperation with the Iowa safety congress.

Drive Right projects now being planned or carried out in many counties include:

The flying of a white flag in county seat towns from noon, August 22, until noon, September 5. A black strip will be added to the flag for each traffic death in the county during the campaign; a smaller red strip will be added for each traffic injury.

(Drivers will be asked to "help keep the flag white" by resisting all "temptation" to drive recklessly during the campaign period.

County road surveys to spot hazards and remove tall weeds from intersections.

A voluntary car inspection drive sponsored by the congress throughout the state in cooperation with the highway patrol and the Iowa automobile dealers association.

Highway billboard posters placed at points of entry along the Iowa boundries to warn in-coming motorists of the Drive Right campaign.

Distribution of 200,000 Drive Right folders and of thousands of bumper posters bearing the campaign slogan, "Two Weeks to Live."

The next two safety posters issued by the safety congress to its subscribers will also emphasize the Drive Right campaign and help direct the attention of drivers toward the saving of 14 lives on the state's highways between August 22 and September 5th.

Meeting For Rural Teachers August 21nd

Chas S. Whitney, County Supt. has sent out letters asking that all persons who expect to teach in the Hancock County rural schools during the 1950-51 school year meet in the Courtroom at Garner on Monday, August 21 at 9:00 a. m. for the pre-school institute for teachers.

Since some schools have not been reported as closed, or the name of the teacher has not been sent to us, may we ask you to contact persons whom you know to be teaching in the county to remind them of the meeting.

IOWA STATE DEPT. OF HEALTH REPORT

Just ten years ago Iowa led the nation with the dubious honor of having one-seventh of all the smallpox cases in the United States. Dr. Madelene M. Donnelly, director of the division of maternal and child health of the Iowa State Department of Health, says that this can happen again if parents do not have their children vaccinated now.

Many Iowans were vaccinated against smallpox from 10 to 12 years ago. This protection has lost its value without booster shots, and according to Dr. Donnelly, this state is "ripe" for another widespread smallpox epidemic, costing thousands of dollars in illness and deaths.

Smallpox is a needless disgrace because it is one of the few disaeses which can be prevented entirely, says Dr. Donnelly.

Although there have been immunization programs in several parts of the state, studies show that too fany parents are not protecting their children with immunizations. Whooping cough, diptheria, tetanus (lock jaw) and smallpox can be prevented by immunizations given by the family physician. These should all be started in the first year of life, states Dr. Donnelly.

This protection, however, does not last a life time. Booster shots should be given before entering school, and at regular intervals later as the doctor prescribes.

The cost of immunizing a child against these four diseases, whooping cough, diptheria, tetanus and smallpox, is not much compared to the cost of sickness or death, adds Dr. Donnelly. It is the responsibility of parents to see that their children are safe.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Maybe things are getting worse. If minor signs mean anything, how are these for indications of what may be developing in the way of driver attitude:

Up in north Iowa, a three-ton stone piller standing in a private drive has just been knocked down for the sixth time by an automobile which bounced off the highway. No damage to the stone reported.

In north-central Iowa, a man and wife were taking their ease one evening in deck chairs on the lawn before their home. They had to jump and run when a car came roaring over the curb, cut through the lawn and crushed both chairs.

When the highway patrol stopped a 19-year-old speedster recently, he told the officers, "I was trying to kill myself." The young man said he was mad at his mother.

A young hitchhiker, picked up by an elderly Iowa driver recently, became discontented with the conservative speed the driver employed. "Is this all the faster you ever drive?" he asked. When he got an affirmative answer, the hitchhiker asked to be let out. "I'd rather walk," he said.

And to reverse an old story, another hitchhiker picked up by two men was slugged, robbed and dumped back on the highway only a few hundred yards from where he had flagged the ride.

Maybe things are getting worse.

LEAF SPOT DISEASE HITS IOWA ALFALFA

Damage Reported From All Region Of State

Iowa farmers are bombarding pathologists at Iowa State College with letters asking about leaf spots on their alfalfa. The fungus disease, called common leaf spot, is causing widespread damage in most alfalfa throughout Iowa this year, says A. F. Sherf, extension pathologist at the college.

The fungi attack center of plants, mostly on young alfalfa, hitting it after the nurse crop has been taken off. Rank stands of alfalfa in low, poorly drained areas seem to be most susceptible to the brown spots that destroy leaf surfaces, causing leaves to turn yellow and frequently to drop off.

Winter Damage Possible

When part of the leaves are destroyed during the summer, there is danger of winter damage. If the attack is severe, growth will be slowed during the following spring because the first, rapid, spring growth is fed by plant food that has been stored the previous fall.

None of the present varieties of alfalfa seem to be resistant to common leaf spot, the pathologist observes. The only way to fight it is to cut the crop as soon as possible, unless it is being saved for seed harvest. The fungus attack usually continues to get worse as plants grow taller and more dense.

Research aimed at developing a spray to combat the disease has been stepped up this year, Sherf reports, but results of the various spray applications used in the tests have not yet been determined. The comparative results of both ground and air spraying are being studied.

CLARK LACKORE HEADS CO. FARM BUREAU RESOLUTION COMMITTEE

Farmers of Hancock County will soon be in the process of polling the opinion of rural people of each township. Last year the poll taken of the "Grass Roots" thinking of all Farm Bureau members of the state was the largest poll taken in the State of Iowa.

"The resolutions passed in each township annual meeting" said Paul Shurts, county fieldman, "are studied by the county Resolutions Committee and are presented at the annual Hancock County Farm Bureau meeting which will be held in October. After the approval of the resolutions by the majority of the membership at the annual meeting, they became law of the county Farm Bureau."

The voting delegate, Gilbert Guenther of Erin Township, forwards a copy of the resolutions to the state Farm Bureau resolutions committee, who are also farmers, and is instructed by the local county to vote for, and aggressively work to incorporate these opinions into the Iowa Farm Bureau resolutions. These resolutions in turn become the law of the Iowa Federation and form a unified goal for all farm people.

The Hancock County resolutions committe consists of the following: Clark Lackore, Chm., Ell township; Jerry Psotka, Liberty; Sanford Rogeness, Crystal; Victor Loebig, Boone; Clarence Bird, Bingham; V. A. Cook, Avery; Albent Claude Concord; N. S. Brear, Concord; Mrs. Verne Grau, Garfield; Mrs. Jack Osterkamp, Boone; Mrs. Kenneth Olson, Ellington; and county president Gilbert Guenther, Erin Township.

The township annual meetings are set up and scheduled as follows; September 12—Amsterdam; September 13th—Boone, Crystal, Erin, and Twin Lake; September 19th—Madison; Sept. 20th—Avery, Garfield and Magor; September 21st—Britt and Ell; September 27th—Bingham, Concord, Ellington and Liberty; September 28th, Orthel.

One member of the county resolutions committe and one person from the county office will be in attendance at each township annual meeting.

Iowa State Fair First Day Aug. 25 For Boys & Girls

WEEKLY REPORT FROM CAPITOL HILL

By Senator Guy M. Gillette

Our Agriculture Subcommittee studying price spreads in farm commodities held its final open hearing last week on the dairy industry and formally announced its intention to accelerate its inquiry into price rises resulting from the war in Korea.

As I told the hearing last Thursday, Congressional mail shows that the public is demanding all-out control on the food prices. This demand, of course, is prompted by the sight of panicky people rushing to stock up on products they believe will be in short supply, but even more by the sight of retail prices being marked up on goods actually on the shelves of the stores. I pointed out that hoarding is a vicious practice, but it is only part of the cause of the present upward price spiral. Profiteers have taken advantage of the situation just as much as or more than the hoarder.

Bread, for example, is now an item that can well be hoarded, yet retail price per loaf have gone up from 1c to 3c a loaf. Likewise, fresh milk, an unlikely item for hoarding, has risen a cent or more a quart. These economically unjustifiable price rises suggest to me that certain food processors are, in effect, baiting Congress as if to dare us to impose price controls.

Pointing out that throughout the country efforts have been made to persuade consumers not to hoard, through the use, for example, of stickers to be signed by persons pledging themselves to refrain from hoarding, I offered the suggestion that the processors, wholesalers and retailers in the food business also take a pledge not to profiteer. The text I proposed to the food trades reads as follows:

"This firm belongs to the "We Will Not Profiteer Club." This firm is American—Our country is in danger—We realize that profiteering help only the enemy—We realize the profiteering is unfair to our fighting men and their families and unfair to those on fixed incomes, pensions, etc.—We realize that profiteering will bring about rigid controls including price-fixing and burdensome rationing procedure—We realize that profiteering will in the end only raise the general level of prices—We realize that profiteering is a form of extortion and unfair to our customers, our supplies and the public generally—Finally, we realize that profiteering is un-American. Therefore, we pledge that we will continue to process, wholesale and retail our products at not grater markup than that which was followed prior to the beginning of hostilities in Korea."

$62,048,602 COLLECTED IN ROAD USE TAX

Des Moines—The Iowa Good Roads association reported that $62,048,602 was collected for the new road use tax fund during the first fiscal year of its operation ended June 30th.

The figures were supplied to the association by State Treasurer John Grimes. The 1949 legislature enacted new legislation under which some highway taxes were increased and all highway revenue was placed in a road use tax fund to finance a 20-year, billion dollar road building program.

Under the law the $62,048,602 collected in the first fiscal year will be distributed as follows: State primary roads (42 per-cent) $26,060,412; secondary roads (35 per cent) $21,717,010; farm to market roads, $5,584,374 or 9 per cent on an area basis and $3,722,916 or 6 per cent on an equalization basis; municipal roads and streets (8 per cent) $4,963,888.

The money for municipal roads and streets will be distributed on a population basis. The Association said that under the 1940 census, the latest official information available, each city and town should receive approximately $3.12 per capita. When the official 1950 census figures become available they will be used in making apportionments among cities and towns, the association said.

The highway revenue during the fiscal year came from the following sources: gasoline tax, $27,125,746; motor vehicle registrations, $24,361,322; use tax on motor vehicles, $5,325,703; sales taxes $4,731,084; motor carrier compensation tax, $504,745.

Toy Guns Release Boy's Impulses

By Lawrence Gould

Does it hurt small boys to play with toy pistols?

Answer: Not unless they will be able to get—or make—real ones when they're older, and not then if they are properly trained in the use of fire-arms. Every small boy has "aggressive" impulses which it's better for him to release in play than to "bottle up" altogether. Even "killing" in play means no more to a small boy than "eliminating" an opponent in a golf or tennis tournament (itself a symbolic battle) does to his father. Fighting is not all of life, but a boy's fighting instincts should not be entirely smothered.

Can a guilty conscience make a man hate his wife?

Answer: Certainly. Many a man has hated his wife because of the remorse he felt at having wronged her; he sees in her the embodiment of the pain his conscience makes him suffer. The last way to win or hold anyone's love is to make him ashamed of something that he has done to you—at best, the effect of this will be to make him want to get as far away from you as he can. If you can't "take" the way someone treats you, say so, but don't try to "shame" him

Do unconscious acts show your real attitudes?

Answer: Yes, writes E. T. Hall, Jr., in the International Journal of Opinion and Attitude Research. The way to learn the real attitude of someone you are interviewing is to notice such facts as whether he keeps you waiting, whether he remembers your name and the time of the appointment, how much annoyed he seems at being interrupted, and what "slips of the tongue," if any, he makes. This approach was found especially revealing in the case of politicians who tried to evade "taking a stand" on controversial issues.

Pain in the Neck Caused by Allergy

By Dr. James W. Barton

IN MANY CASES the cause of pain at back of neck, shoulder, and down the arm has been found to be rupture or hernia of the disk or cushion between two spinal bones in the neck. This rupture of a disk occurs most frequently in the lower end of the spine between the two large hip bones. In rupture of a disk at any part of the spinal column, operation to remove the disk is considered the best treatment, though some of the less severe cases are helped by a snug-fitting belt which must be worn for months and, in some cases, for years.

However, that all pain in the neck is not caused by a rupture of a disk in spinal column at the neck is pointed out by Dr. T. G. Randolph in Archives of Ear and Throat. He states that allergy, being sensitive to various substances, is the cause of many cases of nuchal (neck) myalgia (pain in muscles), that is, pain in muscles of neck. It is sometimes called posterior cervical myalgia. Certain foods and inhalants (house dust) were stated to be the cause of pain in back of neck in several cases. In many of these cases of pain in back of neck, physicians, because they can find no apparent cause for this pain—no ruptured disk or other injury, no arthritis due to infection—naurally think that nervousness or emotional disturbances cause the pain because of the tenseness with which these individuals hold all their nerves and muscles, including muscles of back of neck.

"Pulling, drawing, tightness and aching of the neck muscles are some of the most usually encountered symptoms observed in the course of performing individual food tests for the diagnosis of food allergy," he writes. "Technicians are trained to observe whether the patient stretches his neck as if his collar were too tight, as telltale evidence of the onset of such neck symptoms. As the patient stretches the neck and turns his head from side to side, he generally starts to rub or massage the back of his neck."

Eisenhower

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, president of Columbia University and a national defense consultant of President Truman, wears a quizzical expression as he is interviewed by newsmen. He does not see today's Korean fighting as necessarily the start of World War III, but insisted "we've got to win". He added, "If our forces in Korea are defeated the entire world will be thrown into another great war."

TRUMAN:

Report to Congress

President Truman in his message to congress on the Korean situation called for $10,000,000,000 down payment on a vast mobilization drive to win the war and combat any Red aggression elsewhere in the world.

He left no doubt in the minds of Americans, and the world in general, about the situation when he said:

"The free world has made it clear, through the United Nations, that lawless aggression will be met with force. This is the significance of Korea and it is a significance whose importance cannot be overlooked.

"I shall not attempt to predict the course of events. But I am sure that those who have it in their power to unleash or withhold acts of armed aggression must realize that new recourse to aggression in the world today might well strain to the breaking point the fabric of world peace.

"We will not flinch in the face of danger or difficulty."

He recommended anti-inflation controls, a swift stepping up of war production, additional huge sums to arm non-Communist nations and a sharp boost in taxes.

He authorized the calling of reservists and guardsmen, along with free use of the draft law to build up fighting units. Secretary of Defense Johnson was authorized to call units as needed.

A summary of the steps asked of congress:

Remove all statutory limits on size of the armed forces.

Provide $10,000,000,000 additional military funds; details to be supplied later.

Authorize a priorities-and-allocation system for materials for non-essential purposes; prevent inventory hoarding; authorize seizure of materials needed for the fighting effort.

Authorize government loans and loan guaranties to spur defense productions.

SECURITY:

Call F. B. I.

President Truman's statement asking all law-enforcement officers and amateur detectives to channel suspicious information regarding espionage, sabotage, and subversive activities to the F.B.I. has caused many Americans to wonder what is in store for the U. S.

The statement presumably was prompted by the Korean war. Truman stressed that all such inquiries "must be conducted in a comprehensive manner on a national basis, and all information carefully sifted out and correlated in order to avoid confusion"

Truman made no mention of Communists in his statement. Anyone with information should report in person to the nearest F B. I office, located in each of the nation's 51 major cities, or ask the telephone operator to connect them to the nearest office, an F B I. spokesman reported.

The spokesman emphasized the informant's identity would be kept confidential and he would not normally be brought face to face with the accused. He said anonymous letters are not welcome.

Unemployment

With nearly everything going up these days, it is astonishing to find anything going down very fast. There is one thing, however: the number of payments to the unemployed.

According to the labor department, between January and June there was a 30 per cent drop in the number of people drawing unemployment insurance benefits under state laws.

FOOD SUPPLY:

More Than Enough

As prices continued to climb, the government began a campaign of telling the American people there is more than enough food in this country and that hoarding is selfish and unnecessary.

President Truman stressed that point in a recent speech and the department of agriculture repeated it with a statement that the nation's food supply is so plentiful that price increases are unwarranted.

The department's report stated flatly that with high production prospects and large storage stocks, supplies of food for civilians in this country are expected to continue at the same high level as in past years.

"There has apparently been some speculative buying and price increases in food in recent weeks substantially similar to those occurring in 1939, which receded as soon as consumers realized that food supplies are adequate," the report said.

But the increases in prices, despite the report, caused a number of repercussions on the home front An immediate investigation into supply, demand and cost was indicated by some government sources. American housewives added their voice to the turmoil More than one retailer found his displays ignored and demands for price controls and even rationing were being heard in some quarters.

The government reported commodities on which stocks were high included dairy products, eggs, poultry and potatoes. Fruits and vegetables were termed ample Total meat output in 1950 probably will be slightly larger than last year, the report said.

Many believe any campaign the government might launch for voluntary rationing is doomed to failure.

AUTOMOBILES:

Production Drop

A spokesman for the automobile industry has predicted a sharp dip in the industry's production within the next five months.

Evidently many Americans have already figured the same way, because dealers throughout the country report a great jump in orders for new automobiles. In many localities waiting lists have already been formed.

The automobile industry does not need a big volume of war orders to curtail its civilian car and truck production. All that is needed is the diversion of large amounts of steel to arms output. Building automobiles also takes a lot of critical materials besides steel It requires copper, zinc, aluminum, lead and other such materials vital to aircraft and other war weapons.

As a result, estimates of this year's probable car and truck output were being revised downward. Before the Korean outbreak, industry sources agreed 1950 vehicle output would approximate 7,000,000 units, even with numerous shutdowns for new model change-overs.

Now most informed sources don't want to guess how many vehicles will be added in the rest of the year to the 4,255,373 built since January 1.

Landing

In a surprise move the First Cavalry Division of the U. S. Army made a beachhead landing near Pohang on the east coast of Korea. The landing was made without casualties or opposition.

SENATOR TAFT:

Pay as We Go

Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio, who has preached economy and a balanced budget to the Democratic administration for years, caused a mild wave of shock among many legislators when he proposed slapping taxes on everybody immediately to pay for the Korean war.

The senator said the Russian threat is clamping a "semi-military" condition on the U.S. at a "permanent" extra cost of $10 to $20 a billion a year

"Since this is not a temporary condition but one that may continue indefinitely, we should tax the people for the whole cost", said Taft. He observed the condition may last "perhaps 10 or 15 years".

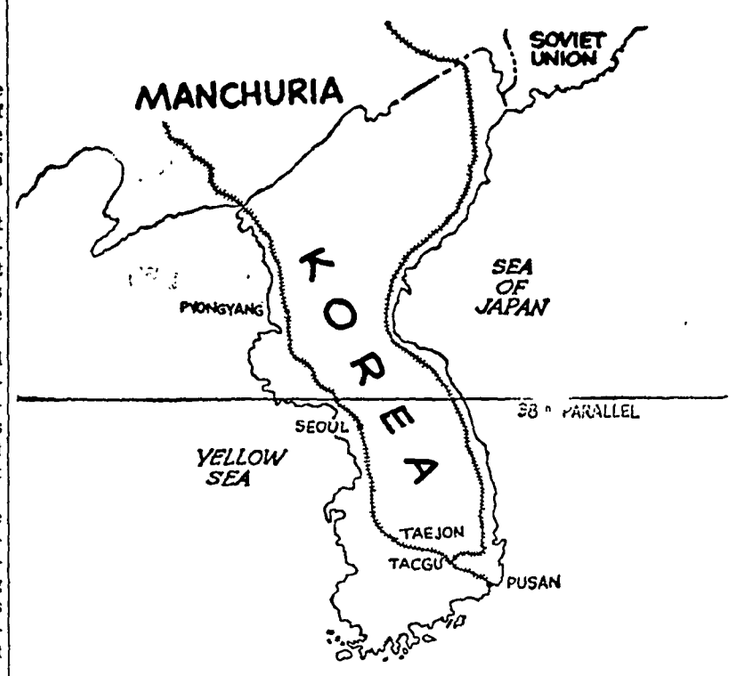
Many observers believe that pressure is building up on congress for quick and drastic tax boosts to carry the defense load.

LEOPOLD III:

Uneasy Return

Leopold III, King of the Belgians, returned to his throne after an absence of six years, but it was not a secure throne observers believed.

The king surrendered to the Nazis in 1944 and was held prisoner by them during World War II. He is unpopular with a large group because he did not resist the Germans to the last ditch in the early years of the war. Many do not like his wife who is a commoner.



Korea juts from Manchuria with one corner bordering the Soviet Union. Its total population is over 30 million people, with two-thirds of them living in South Korea below the 38th parallel.

△ △ △ △

LAND OF THE MORNING CALM

Korea Has Struggled for Unity And Independence for 50 Years

A great many people in the United States were very vague about the location of Korea until the recent outbreak of fighting in that little country that juts from Manchuria and the Soviet Union, not unlike Florida from the southern part of this country.

It is a rugged land of 30,000,000 people with mountain ranges comparable in height to the Appalachians covering virtually all the country. Granite hills up to 6,300 feet fold the terrains of the United States sponsored Republic of Korea —the Indiana-sized southern three-seventh of the peninsular land. They form a twisting network of valleys which invaders have always followed.

So completely do the rugged hills crease the country that rail and highway routes twist fantastically in connecting cities and towns.

Chief transportation artery of South Korea, for instance, is the double-tracked, standard-gauge railroad running diagonally from Haeju in the northwest on the violated 38th-parallel boundary through Seoul, Taejon, and Taegu to the southeastern port of Pusan. From Haeju to Pusan by way of the cities named is just about 290 air miles and 400 miles by rail.

Rice Main Crop

At some time in the past, nature's forces tilted the southward-pointing peninsula down on the west, or Yellow sea side, and up on the east, the coast of the Sea of Japan. As a result of this tilt, Korea, although it averages 150 miles in width, has its drainage divide only about 15 miles inland from the east coast.

The west coast has a partly submerged shore line marked by countless fjordlike bays and islands. Yellow Sea tides, fluctuating 25 feet and more, have created broad tidal mud flats.

The east coast on the other hand, has almost no islands and a straight, steep shore line. Mountains slope into the sea or from narrow sand beaches washed by clear water.

South Korea is the agricultural part of the peninsula as divided arbitrarily at the 38th parallel in 1945 as a Russo-American military expedient for the disarming of Japanese troops. Rice is grown on every flat space where irrigation is possible. Thatched farm houses and green terraces snuggle in every narrow valley between the endless lines of folded hills. Soybeans, hemp, wheat, barley, and vegetables are cultivated in dry fields.

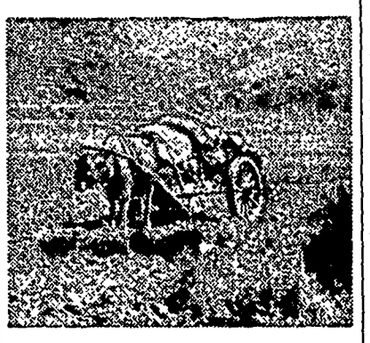
Throughout its modern history the ancient nation of Korea has been engaged in a tragic struggle for freedom, unity, and independence.

Japan annexed the country in 1910 and proceeded to exploit its resources thoroughly until the end of World War II. But for years prior to the annexation, Korea had been a pawn in the big power politics of Japan, China, and Russia.

Peace-seeking Korea ushered in its modern era by concluding an "open door" treaty with Japan in 1876. But Nipponese promises of independence were soon forgotten. The Sino-Japanese war of 1894-95 left Japan the dominant foreign power in Korea. This hold was consolidated by victory in the Russo-Japanese war a decade later, and the Koreans had no free government of their own until the elections held in 1948 under United Nations auspices.

Founded in 1122 B. C.

Old Korea's origins are obscure by time, but her people claim a history of more than 42 centuries. Korean legend celebrates a founder named Tan Gun, of superhuman origin, whose alleged tomb is still venerated. More credible are the historic references to a Chinese noble who emigrated to Korea in 1122 B. C., and founded a dynasty there that ruled the country for many centuries.



South Korea is the agricultural section of the country and many farmers still use the ancient means of transportation of their forefathers. A wagon and water buffalo haul the family's possessions.

Much of what we now know as Korea had attained a degree of unity and enjoyed an old culture at the time the Roman Empire flourished. In the 14th century the relatively-small peninsular country became known as the kingdom of "Chosen", a name often given Korea to this day.

Korea, after completing its treaty of 1876 with the Japanese, made similar "open door" agreements with a number of other powers, including the United States. But none served to protect Korea from aggression and exploitation.

Japan, after winning its war with Russia, made Korea a protectorate for a time until the annexation, when Korean properties were seized or expropriated.

Korean patriots penned their own declaration of independence in 1919. This touching and beautifully written document was presented to the Japanese with peaceful intent, but the signers were executed.

A provisional government in exile was formed. For many years this powerless government, under Dr. Syngman Rhee, campaigned for independence. In 1948 the Rhee government at Seoul was recognized by the United Nations, though the northern half of the country was under Russian domination.

Strange Customs

The Koreans have a number of customs which people of this country find amusing.

For instance, by long established custom, the Korean bridegroom stays with his bride three days in his father-in-law's house before returning with her to his own parents' house. Official manhood begins for the Korean only after marriage. Even if he is 70, a bachelor's opinion has little influence.

White is the traditional color of mourning in Korea. Since it is worn for three years for close relatives, Korean families are in mourning white much of the time.

Potential barrier to an invader's progress is the population of South Korea. It is now 20 million, three-fourths of them on farms. Despite the mountains that rule out cultivation of most of the area, that is more than twice the population of North Korea, and five times that of Indiana, comparatively a farming paradise.

Huge Hats Safeguard Against Plotting

The Koreans' traditional habit of wearing many and varied hats is said to have had its origin as a measure against plotting, according to the National Geographic Society. An ancient ruler, the legend goes, once concluded that men could not conspire if they could not put their heads together. Hence he required his subjects to wear such huge hats that whispered conversations could not be carried on.

Princess' Husband Climbing Ladder

Princess Elizabeth's husband has started out to work himself to the top of the ladder. Prince Philip won his first command in the British navy recently.

The admiralty announced the tall, handsome Philip would take charge of the anti-aircraft frigate Magpie in August.

Court circles predicted also that at about the same time he would be upped from lieutenant to lieutenant commander.

Philip, 29 next month, now is first lieutenant of the destroyer Chequers, based at Malta. He returned to active Naval duty last fall.

The 1,430-ton Magpie is manned by six officers and 186 men. She mounts four six-inch guns, eight two-pounders and several pompon anti-aircraft pieces.

Opening Dates For Pheasant And Quail Season Set

The 1950 open season on quail will begin November 1 at 8:30 a.m. The pheasant season will open November 11 at 12: noon. The Conservation Commission will announce bag limits, open counties and the length of the seasons after current population studies have been completed in September. The pheasant season will include only cock birds.

In announcing the opening days, Commission spokesmen explained biological study already completed defintely show shootable surpluses, but do not yet reveal total populations. Many people plan vacations during the open season, and we are announcing the opening dates so that vacations may be planned as far ahead as possible."

As a result of several different types of seasonal game counts, biologists are optimistic about pheasant populations and believe that quail populations are a least as high as a year ago. The key to the number of pheasants and quail available to hunters during the fall, however, hinges on the productivity of the nesting birds, and brool counts are underway at the present time to determine the average number of birds of both species each hen has brought off.

The commission believes that the pheasant season will be at last as liberal as in 1949, when 79 counties were open, 68 counties for 25 days and 11 for seven days.

REPUBLICAN REPORT ON THE FARM PLANK

The farm plank adopted by Iowa Republicans at their convention is attracting nationwide attention. National leaders as well as influential members of Congress already have voiced approval of the plank as the "start toward a workable long range farm program."

The Republican farm program was developed in the grass roots—not in a government agency or by a gang of economic planners. Iowa farmers wrote the program. They wrote it in a series of meeeings attended by some thirty honest-to-goodness farmers, who formed the Iowa Republican Farm Policy Council. They studied the problems and came up with a comprehensive report which was digested into a farm plank.

Main feature of the plank is a plan to take the farm program out of the political football field where it has been kicked around for 15 years with no thought of making it a long range program. It calls for creation of a bi-partisan agricultural board to set the farm policy rather than having the power vested in one man who may or may not be a farmer or a man with a farm background. It would use support methods best suited for the individual farm products but would provide such supports only in distress periods. That's what the group of 30 farmers believed Iowa farmers want: not pie-in-the-sky, but protection in case of great economic collapse. The program also calls for maximum soil conservation, administered on a local level. Such a program is necessary if our soil is to be maintained.

Two of the outstanding agricultural leaders in Congress have endorsed the program. Said Senator George Aiken of Vermont, who has helped write much farm legislation: "This resolution could provide a broad base as a foundation for an agricultural program." Rep. Clifford Hope of Kansas, who has joined Aiken in some farm bills said: "I think this is a fine resolution."

Farmers are looking for a long range farm program, one which will work equally as well in times of peace as in times of war. Up to now, the administration has used farm legislation as a political football, as a vote-getting plan rather than one based on what is good for all segments of the economy. The Republican platform in Iowa offers a plank that is sound, was written by farmers, would not require great regimentation or would be too costly. It is high time a sensible program was presented—and Iowa farmers have written it.

A GOOD START TO SCHOOL

Thousands of children throughout the country will soon be going off to school for the first time Great preparations have been made for this big event. Most of these youngsters have new clothes and some unfamiliar new tools, like pencil cases and note books.

Unfortunately, for some of these would-be pupils the most important part of the child's preparation for school life will be skipped This is the complete medical checkup which every child who is entering school should have.

To get the most out of his school attendance, the child should be in sound mental and physical condition. Many parents who mean well, but who neglect the child's pre-school medical checkup, may be sending that child off to school—into a strange, new life—with one or more serious handicaps.

Many of the imperfection of early childhood could be corrected if discovered early in the life of the child and treated promptly. Where the parents' budget would be strained by the extra expense of medical checkup, advantage should be taken of hospital or clinic facilities in the community.

Among the handicaps some children face are poor eyesight, impaired hearing, faulty posture, speech defects, injured hearts, nervous and behavior disorders, diseased tonsils, foot deformities, and malnutrition.

Any one of these "childhood deficiencies," if undetected and allowed to go unchecked, will not only impede educational progress, but frequently mean serious illness later in life.

In every classroom, of course, there are some children who take all the honors, and others who never win a single prize because they find studying and learning distasteful or difficult.

But there are many others who have poor school records simply because they cannot see the blackboard or hear what the teacher is saying, or they lose a great deal of time from school because of susceptibility to illness. In most of these cases, the physical impairments might have been found and promptly corrected by a pre-school medical examination, and school life could have been pleasanter and more fruitful for these unfortunate children from the very first grade.

Rabbit And Squirrel Season Hunting Dates Are Set

The hunting season for squirrels and rabbits opens September 15. The squirrel season will close November 15, the rabbit season January 31. Bag limit on both squirrels and rabbits is 6, and possession limit 12. Shooting hours on rabbits are set at 6:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. each day, with no shooting hour restrictions placed on squirrels.

Biological studies indicate very little change in squirrel populations from the 1949 season, with local fluctuations in rabbit counts with the over-all population little if any better than the previous year.

NEW EWES SHOULD BE WORMED AT ONCE

Western or native ewes coming onto Iowa farms for stocking purposes may have worms, so C. W. McDonald, extension sheep specialist at Iowa State College, urges immediate worming with phenothiazine. Then they will be ready for flushing and breeding.

The chemical controls round worms, common stomach worms and nodule worms. Phenothiazine won't control tape worms unless arsenic is added.

McDonald recommends treating each sheep individually rather than scattering the chemical over the feed, which might result in uneven doses among the sheep. Each sheep needs 1 ounce of phenothiazine with 1 to 3 ounces of water. A fatal pneumonia can result from drenching sheep when the nostrils are held higher than the eyes, causing the mixture to go into the lungs. Keep the sheep standing on all four feet and watch closely to see that the animal is swallowing, McDonald cautions.

IT DOES NOT CHANGE!

Human Nature does not change much in just ten years. When we were in the garage business there were always some that would need work done on Saturday night, probably not realizing that this would spoil Sunday forenoon. Very seldom would our ugly mug be facing the preacher Sunday morning. The situation still seems to be much that way. How would it be if we all got more of our mechanical work, grease jobs, welding etc. done earlier in the week or let it go until Monday? After all, it is quite possible that we really need to hear what the preacher has to say on Sunday. It would improve our disposition.

GOOD CITIZEN

Power to Declare War Invested In Congress of United States

This is the sixth of a series of ten articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

THE FIFTH promise of a good citizen: I will work for peace but will dutifully accept my responsibilities in time of war and will respect the Flag.

Probably the greatest of all powers is the power to declare war. In America this power is not given to any one man. It is not given to our generals and admirals. It is not given to the President and his cabinet. It is given only to our elected representatives — the congress of the United States. We have given the congress also the power, in time of war, to abridge some of our liberties for the common good.

The most fervent hope of every American heart is that the differences between nations may be settled without war.

Only a burning wrong can force us into another war.

Only a burning devotion to the principles of free government and to national unity and strength on the part of all the people can insure our victory over the forces of tyranny, if it is our destiny again to engage them.

In 1776 we won freedom; in 1812 we held freedom; in 1861 we preserved the union; in 1898 we strengthened freedom; in 1917 our freedom was threatened and saved; in 1941 again our freedom was attacked and saved.

THE OPENING words of The Crisis, written by Thomas Paine at the lowest tide of America's hope, December, 1776, perhaps of all that has been written expresses the true feeling of the sixth promise of a good citizen.

They say it was written upon a drumhead by the campfires of Washington's defeated and retreating army. By order of General Washington it was hastily printed in Philadelphia, rushed to the front and read aloud to the troops on Christmas night before the crossing of the Delaware and the attack on Trenton, which was the turning point of the Revolutionary War.

It reads:

"These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country; but he that stands it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph What we obtain too cheap, we esteem too lightly: 'tis dearness only that gives every thing its value. Heaven knows how to put a proper price upon its goods; and it would be strange indeed, if so celestial an article as freedom should not be highly rated."

AS STATED at the beginning, the right to declare war is invested in the congress of the United States by Article 1, Section 8 of the Constitution.

The congress shall have the power:

To declare war . . .

To raise and support armies . . .

To provide and maintain a navy . . .

To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces;

To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions;

To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining, the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States . . .

This article is Chapter 5 of the booklet "Good Citizen" produced by The American Heritage Foundation, sponsors of the freedom train. A complete book may be obtained by sending 25 cents to The American Heritage Foundation, 17 East 45th Street, New York, N. Y.

Hollywood gossips say that if Shirley Temple really means to marry Charles Black she should have pursuaded him to stay in the pineapple business, instead of switching to television. They point to all the marriages in which a woman star has married a business man, who moved over into some branch of her profession, whereupon the marriage hit the rocks.

THE FICTION CORNER

HARMONIOUS UNION

By Richard H. Wilkinson

IT WAS incredible that Tony and Leah Cranston should have quarreled over so small a thing. The neighbors would have been horrified, for the neighbors thought no two people were more ideally suited.

The neighbors were right, too. Tony and Leah were harmoniously united. They were deeply in love. There was perfect understanding between them.

3-Minute Fiction

Then one day Tony came home from work and went into the bedroom to freshen up for dinner and found two five dollar bills and some change lying on the bureau. He scooped up the money.

"Hey," he said good naturedly, "we can't afford this. I found this money lying on the bureau. It might have blown away. Don't be so forgetful!"

Leah smiled. "Oh, my!" she said. "Did I leave the change from the grocer there?"

A week later Tony discovered a dollar bill where it had been idly dropped on the living room table and forgotten.

"Listen, honey, you've got to be more careful. Money is pretty important to us right now."

"I'm sorry," said Leah, "but it's only a dollar."

"We can't afford to lose a dollar or even a part of a dollar," Tony said, smiling.

The next time—the time Tony discovered three dollars on the kitchen tables and one on the floor, where it had blown—he didn't smile.

"Good gosh, woman! Show a little more consideration, will you! If I hadn't noticed that dollar on the floor it would have been lost."

Tony and Leah Cranston were harmoniously united. The neighbors would have been horrified if they thought there was trouble between them.

"Darling," she said altogether too precisely, "I've never lost a penny of our money."

"How do you know?" asked Tony, a bit smugly.

"Because," said Leah, just as smugly, "I can account for every dime you've ever given me."

"Ha!" said Tony. "Let's see you!"

So Leah got a pencil and paper—and sat down and figured out her expenditures, to the last penny.

"Well," said Tony, "that doesn't mean you won't lose some if you continue to be careless. After it's gone—well, you've heard the crack about locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen."

"I've heard," said Leah icily, "a lot of cracks."

SUDDENLY it occurred to Tony that this was their first major crisis. Somehow he'd have to break Leah of her habit without a quarrel.

It was the next Saturday noon when he came home from work that Tony discovered three ones and a two-dollar bill on the bureau where it had been absently dropped by Leah while she rescued the roast from burning. Furtively Tony scooped up the money and stuck it in his pants pocket. Sooner or later Leah would discover it was missing. She'd become concerned. She'd ask him to help hunt. He'd make a pretense of hunting and then pretend to find the money where it had blown into the bathroom.

That afternoon Tony went playing golf. All the while he was gone, while he was in the locker room and on the course and later in the showers, he kept thinking of Leah hunting for the missing money.

He came home an hour earlier than he had planned. The moment he saw Leah's face he knew she had discovered the loss.

"Darling, I laid some money on the bureau. Have you seen it?"

"It must have blown off," said Tony. "Boy, I hope we can find it." His face wore a look of grave concern as he began hunting. "We can't afford to lose a cent," he kept saying.

Tony waited until Leah looked as though she were on the point of bursting into tears, remembering she had been saving for a new hat and knowing she couldn't have it unless they found the money. Then he ambled into the bathroom, and, chuckling to himself, reached into his pocket.

A startled look came to his face. He reached into his other pockets They were all empty.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

All This Ex-Boxer Wants Is Peace and Little Pinochle

By BILLY ROSE

One of the more off-colorful characters around Broadway these days is Kid Herman, ex-great of the prize ring, who runs the newsstand on the southwest corner of 42nd street and Times Square. The Kid, according to the record books, lost only once in 140 professional bouts and was one of the few men to beat Benny Leonard. What's more, he is reputed to have been as scrappy outside the ring as in during his black-and-blue period.

Today, a muscle-bound 56, he likes to think of himself as "a stick of sugar-coated Gandhi." "Me and the world has seen too much fightin'," he told me the other night. "All I want now is peace and a little pinochle."

While we were talking, as if on cue, a man rushing for the subway bumped into the ex-pug.

"Sorry, Mister," apologized Herman. "If I'd known you was comin' I'da baked a cake."

Billy Rose

The man's glare relaxed into a grin.

"I coulda flattened him with a punch," said the Kid, "but what would it prove? Ya never convince anybody by hittin' him. It's better to go along with people. F'rinstance, take the gink who runs the newsstand across the way —Patsy White. Used to be a great fighter. Had a string of 14 straight knockouts till he met up with me. I knocked him down 15 times in 10 rounds, but the first time Patsy heard me tellin' about it, he said it was only 14 times. So the next time I tell it, just to make him feel good, I said it was 14 times, but Patsy says, 'Who you kiddin'? It was 13.' Well, every time he hears me tellin' it he slices off another knockdown, so finally I says to [illegible] let's leave it this way. Mosta the time you was fightin' me from a horizontal position.' "

JUST THEN, as if he knew we were talking about him, Patsy waved from across the street and yelled, "How's it goin', Kid?"

"Come on over an' get yer name in the papers," Herman yelled back at him.

"In a minute," said Patsy. "Under the arch!"

"What does he mean, under the arch?" I asked.

"It's a private joke we got," said the Kid. "When we were kids we lived near the Brooklyn Bridge, and when we didn't want to do our fightin' where the cops could see us, we used to say, 'Meetcha under the arch,' and then go under the bridge and settle things fair and square. By the time I was 10, I musta slugged it out with every punk in the neighborhood — all except Patsy.

"Then a few years ago, after we both set up stands on Times Square, some bad blood comes up between me and Patsy for the first time. The way it happens, one day I order two bundles of papers instead of one, and when the truck delivers them they forget to drop off the regular one for Patsy. So naturally he thinks one of my two bundles is for him, but when he comes over to get it I tell him it's mine. Well, one word leads to another, so finally I says, 'Under the arch.'

" 'That's fer me,' says Patsy, so we pile in a cab and drive downtown.

"MY WIND AIN'T what it used to be, but I musta knocked him down half a dozen times before it hits me how crazy it is for a couple of near grandfathers to be beatin' each other's brains out. So I drop my hands and say, 'I just remembered somehtin'. I meant to order two bundles but forgot to do it, so you was right the whole time. Let me buy ya a steak and make it up to ya.'

" 'Lucky ya remembered,' Patsy said, 'because I was just gettin' warmed up. I'll buy the beers.' "

As I was about to go, Patsy White came across the street and the Kid introduced us.

"I was just tellin' my friend," he said, "how we go under the arch and I knock you down six times."

"You remember wrong," said Patsy. "It was only five."

"I meant five," apologized Herman.

"See what I mean?" he said after Patsy had gone back to his stand. "Next time it'll be four. And after that, three. But what's the dif? It makes him feel good and it's no skin off my nose."

Here, from the four quarters of the globe, come spices, gold, silver, jewels, rugs, everything and anything to be bought and sold. Sales are made in native shops where old-time craftsmen and their sons are hammering silver into copper, carving elephant tusks, weaving carpets, making beads, mounting jewels and doing all that goes in a polyglot city within a city. Musky's widest street (left) is filled with merchants and buyers, some from cities a thousand miles away.

Double Play Break-Up Perilous

By GRANTLAND RICE

SOME TIME BACK Dr. George Bennett, the noted medical and surgical expert from Baltimore, was talking about the "double play break up" at second.

Grantland Rice

"This is the play used to break up double plays," he said. "It is the most dangerous play in baseball and should be abolished. It should be abolished because it is unfair and cowardly and also because it hurts more ballplayers than you know. I've had any number come to me for treatment of back or leg injuries due to collisions at second base. I can't understand why baseball tolerates such a play It will end or shorten the careers of many ballplayers in the course of time."

Dr. Bennett is 100 per cent correct. In the first place the play is unfair and cowardly. The player handling the ball, shortstop or second baseman, has no chance to protect himself. His job is to take the throw and make the relay to first base. The base-runner, coming to the bag, has a clear shot at his unprotected opponent. The opponent is often completely at the base-runner's mercy. The player handling the ball can have back muscles torn loose or his legs or knees badly damaged.

A recent example was the Eddie Joost case. Joost is one of the star veterans of baseball. He was Connie Mack's most useful player, or one of his more useful players, at least. He was taken out by Cliff Mapes of the Yankees in a recent game.

But the main trouble was he wasn't merely taken out of that particular play. He was taken out for the rest of the season, or the better part of it. He may have been taken out for the rest of his career Certainly Mapes didn't intend to wreck a fellow player's baseball career. But in the speed and heat of action such as this play calls for, it is impossible to tell what the result might be.

There is no one who knows more about the handling of ballplayers in trouble than Dr. Bennett. When he rates this play the most dangerous and useless in the game he happens to know what he is talking about.

One of the first moves at the next fall or winter league meetings should be to abolish this play. Baseball isn't supposed to be football. The two games are entirely different. Baseball is more a game of skill than football can ever be.

The chances are nothing will be done about the play until two or three stars are wrecked, possibly for life, and then some change will be made later—when it is too late for the already injured.

Most Graceful Player

"Help us settle an argument," writes L. F. "Who, in your opinion, is or was the most graceful ballplayer you ever saw? Among those mentioned by the group were Tris Speaker, Nap Lajoie, Joe DiMaggio, Joe Gordon, George Burns and George Sisler."

Nap Lajoie is the most graceful ballplayer we ever saw in action. One proof of greatness is that we can't recall any spectacular play Larry ever made. He made every type of play seem easy. There was no waste motion. For example, in covering second on a steal Lajoie used only his gloved hand. He had the knack of sweeping the ball to the base-runner with one motion.

This grace extended to the bat. You never saw Lajoie crouched and tense as most hitters are today He would stand at the plate with the bat in his left hand and take it up just in time to swing at the ball.

In spring training, pitchers would test out Lajoie's timing They would get to him the first day or two in camp before his batting eye was adjusted to the ball. They would throw in front of him, back of him, in the ground at his feet, over his head. But Larry kept knocking the ball back.

On a hit and run I've seen him throw his bat at a wide pitch and single over first base Lajoie was no small man He was over six feet and he weighed around 200 pounds.

The meeting of this pair would have been a ring classic. The west still goes with Ketchel The east rides with Greb Of the two Ketchel was the better puncher. Greb was much the better boxer. Kid McCoy might have been a tough opponent for either Ketchel or Greb at his peak. The Kid was a brilliant boxer and a punishing puncher.

Greb at his best almost annihilated Tom Gibbons and Gene Tunney in one season. This was the worst beating that Tunney ever got. I also saw Greb take Jack Dillon apart

A Great Preacher?

Lesson for August 20, 1950

JESUS SAID of him that there had never been a greater man than John, the Baptist. Certainly there has never been a greater preacher, to this day. He had none of the aids a modern preacher has He had no song leader, no music of any kind; no church organization, no building, not even a tent. He was not even in a village but in a bandit-infested wilderness. There was little "dramatic" about him or his methods.

Dr. Foreman

Yet he started a tremendous revival, and he won higher praise from Jesus than any other human being received from him.

Candor

CONSIDER SOME of the qualities of this famous man. One was candor, that is, he was not afraid to speak his mind. His opinions were not always popular; his verdicts were not always those of the masses. But he spoke his mind all the same.

He called his hearers "generation of vipers,"—snakes' babies, in modern words. He freely admitted he was no Messiah. When on a later occasion he had his doubts about Jesus, he did not conceal them, but told Jesus straight from the shoulder that he questioned him. And Jesus honored his honesty.

Candor is a rare article. Those few persons in public life who are willing to speak their minds may make some enemies but they make more admirers. The odd thing is that people cover up their minds for fear they will be unpopular; whereas you will generally find that the candid person does not lack for friends.

Courage

THAT BRINGS up another quality outstanding in this extraordinary man: his courage. He could stand up to the most prominent citizens and tell them they were sinners, and name their sins.

It doesn't take much courage to say you are a sinner, or to say that any one is. Aren't we all? It takes more nerve to speak out in plain language, as John did to the Pharisees and Herod for example. When he called on men to repent, he meant a specific repentance, not repentance-in-general.

In a southern state there was a prison chaplain at the penitentiary. One of the prisoners had been convicted of stealing funds from the state bank. But he never had admitted his guilt, in court or afterwards. He was stand-offish with the chaplain, though before his conviction he used to be a church officer and a praying man, the chaplain could hardly get next to him.

Finally one day he agreed to pray. As he and the chaplain knelt down together, the prisoner began: "Lord, thou knowest that we are all miserable sinners . . ." The chaplain stopped him. Leaning over he said to the prisoner: "What are you in here for?" The man was still a moment. Then in a quite different tone of voice he began again: "O God, forgive me for stealing from the State Bank." It was the first time he had ever admitted his guilt. But it took courage on the chaplain's part as well as his own.

Common Sense

ANOTHER QUALITY of John which deserves notice is his simple common-sense. Listen to what he tells the men who come with this question: What must we do? John's common-sense mind knew that repentance, just by itself, is not enough. Repentance is turning from something bad to something good, from wrong to right.

Let the man with two shirts share with the man who has none, he said. Let him who has food do likewise. Let the tax-collector be honest. Let the soldier stop grumbling; even in an "occupied country" a soldier must not be unjust or cruel.

Pointing to Christ

WHAT MAKES John best remembered is that he preached Christ. He is known as the forerunner; he was the man who said of Jesus, "He must increase but I must decrease." The preacher who calls attention to himself is an egotist, a show-off; the preacher who draws men's eyes and hearts to Jesus Christ may himself be small, but his work will be great.

When you fit a hook and eye on a screen door, do you put the eye in the frame and the hook on the door?

That's not the best way. The hook rattles every time the door is closed. It wears a half-moon mark on the door. When the door is slammed, it may flip over and lock you out.

The solution: simply reverse hook and eye.

CHECK SOYBEANS NOW FOR NODULES

If They Aren't Present, Beans Are Robbing Soil

A large part of northern Iowa's soybean crop has been found to be poorly nodulated this year.

Following an extensive survey of the state's 1950 soybean acreage, Iowa State College agronomist C. R. Weber reports that beans in many of the counties in the northern half of Iowa lack nitrogen-firing bacteria that make soybeans a valuable legume crop.

At the same time soybeans in the southern half of the state appear to be well nodulated and growing normally.

Nodules Round

Since nodule formation should be well under way by this time of year, Weber urges growers to check their soybeans during August to find whether the roots have nodules. Bacteria nodules are round, about one-eighth inch in diameter, grow in clusters largely on the main tap root and are seldom found more than a few inches below the soil surface.

If there are no nodules now it indicates that inoculation of seed with bacteria will probably be beneficial at planting time, the agronomist says. He explains that inoculation of other legumes in the rotation doesn't help in supplying bacteria that will help in nodule formation in soybeans, because different bacteria are required.

Nodules Help Beans

These bacteria increase soybean yields considerably, raise the protein content, leave more nitrogen in stubble to be plowed under and add valuable nitrogen to the soil when root systems decay. In fact, nodule formation of nitrogen-fixing bacteria on roots makes the difference in whether soybeans are helpful in supplying nitrogen to the soil or whether they deplete soil resources, Weber points out.

North Lights

BRILLANT DISPLAY OF NORTHERN LIGHTS SEEN HERE SATURDAY NIGHT

North Iowans who were out of doors Saturday night and looked up at the northern sky saw one of the most beautiful displays of northern lights seen in many years.

The northern lights, or aurora borealis, covered about half of the visible sky from above and from east to west and all of the north. Some years the northern lights were tinged with color, but this display Saturday night was rather white, but very beautiful.

Just what causes this brilliant display is still somewhat of a mystery. It would take a mighty powerful searchlight set up at the North Pole to throw beams of light visible as far as Iowa. The lights Saturday night must have been intensly brilliant in Northern Canada and Alaska.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

In the face of the complex traffic situation today, Ed Polson, veteran safety education representative, sometimes speaks with nostalgia of the good old days of gentle motoring.

He says that many years ago, an Iowa law specified something like this: When a person on a horse drawn vehicle raised his hand toward an approaching car, the driver was obliged to duck to the side of the road and remain there until the horses got past.

If the teamester raised his hand a second time, the driver of the car was then supposed to switch off his engine and come forward to lead the team past that frightening auto.

Polson recalls that one day, years ago, he approached a man and woman in a spring wagon. The woman raised her hand and Polson pulled his car to the side of the road.

When the woman raised her hand the second time, Polson walked up to the wagon and asked if he could lead the team past his car.

The man with the rains eyed him a moment and said, "I think if you'll lead my wife past that thing the team will make it all right."

Since the days of this minor incident, there has been a great improvement. Horses are no longer afraid of cars - only people are.

EARLY PLANTED GRASS IN BEST SHAPE FOR WINTER

Grass seedings put in early this fall have a better chance of living through the winter than late seedings because the young plants can become firmly established before the ground freezes, says County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

He urges Hancock County to prepare the seedbed now for brome and other common grasses. Then planting can be done about Sept. 1st. That will give grass time to get started before killing frosts come late in the fall. The best planting date may vary somewhat, depending on the amount of moisture in the ground, Henderson says.

It's better to keep grass seed in the sack if the soil is dry, because it will not sprout. Seed that may start to germinate will probably not be able to grow after plant food from the seed is used up. Since grass seed is small there is little space to store food and the new plant will need soil moisture and food shortly after sprouting.

Henderson stressed the need for good seedbed preparation and shallow planting. A big, hard clod will smother plants that try to emerge below it, so the seedbed should be worked until soil is smooth and firm. Cover grass seed about one-quarter to one-eighth inch deep, the extension director suggests. Plant food stored in the seed will push sprouts through that much soil. Then it takes sunshine and air so plants can manufacture their own food.

Crop Damage

HEAVY FROST DAMAGED CROPS ALONG WEST RIVER FLATS

Farmers living along the West River flats, six miles west of Klemme, report that there was a heavy frost along the river Sunday night and that much corn and beans was killed by the unseasonably early frost.

About a week ago frost was reported in low fields, but no damage was done.

North Iowa thermometers registered 35 degrees early Sunday morning, a low record for August.

HENDERSON OFFERS TIPS TO FEEDER CATTLE BUYERS

Hancock County farmers who plan to buy feeder cattle this fall are given a few pointers by county extension director Paul Henderson, that could mean the difference between profits and loss in their cattle feeding operations.

Buy cattle by the pound. That's the only fair basis of exchange for both the seller and buyer, Henderson says. Any other means of transacting business usually means loss to the more inexperienced of the two who do business together.

High feeder cattle prices mean that the fill in cattle is high priced too. So buyers must be on the lookout for excessive filling in the stock they buy. For example, Henderson says, an 800-pound feeder steer that cost $25.00 per hundred would actually be worth only $23.80 if he carreid 40 pound of extra fill.

Iowa State College beef specialist says surveys indicate that death losses in feeder cattle average over 1 percent. That makes it important to be sure feeder cattle are healthy before they are bought.

Bad weather is one of the chief causes of death in shipped cattle because it often causes shipping fever. Calves are even more apt to be victims of the disease than older cattle.

Watch out for coughs, humped backs, drooping ears, wet noses, labored breathing, and cattle that move slowly—all symptons of shipping fever.

Pass up out-of-condition, overstuffed or sick cattle and check for lump jaw, goiter, pink eye and other suspicous signs, warns the extension director.

Buy cattle before they pass through too many hands, Henderson reminds local feeders, and refuse any cattle that are received on contract and don't meet grade and condition specifications.

Another Fire

4 KANAWHA BUSINESSES HIT BY FIRE

Four Kanawha business places were destroyed by fire of undetermined origin Sunday morning despite help from the Britt fire department.

The flames were discovered about 5 a. m. and were not snuffed out until afternoon. By that time they had destroyed the Tall Corn theater, the Armour Mullins blacksmith shop, the Earl Goodrich garage and the Ross Eggers bowling alley. Some damage also was done to stored stock of the Gorton and Kanawha hardware stores.

The theater, owned by Harry Pulley, had recently been improved. The blacksmith shop adjoins it on the north.

REV. GURBACHAN SINGH WILL SPEAK HERE

Will Speak At Evangelical & Reformed Church Aug 29

The Rev. Gurbachan Singh from Raipur, C. P., India will be the guest speaker at the Adult Bible Class meeting at the Immanuel Evangelical and Reformed Church Tuesday, Aug. 29 at 8:30 in the evening.

Rev. Singh is in the United States speaking in camps and churches and schools on behalf of the work of the Evangelical and Reformed Church in Raipur. He has also been taking post-graduate work at Eden Theological Seminary at Webster Groves, Missouri.

Rev. Singh was born in the Punjab, North India, and converted to Christianity in his early manhood. This step involved the sacrifice of leaving his wife and his parents. Rev. Singh is a graduate of Godron college, an affiliate of the Punjab university and of the Saharanpur seminary. At present, he is manager of the Gass Memorial Center in Raipur, and the editor of two monthly magazines, Mashihi Awaz and Prakash. He has served as chairman of a number of important inter-denominational and interchurch committees.

When asked for a brief statement to the people of the church, Rev. Singh made the following remarks: "Only two years ago India received its independence. Foreigners often describe it as a land of many religious and castes whose people cannot get along together. They assert that poverty, ignorance, superstition and disease are rampant and its leadership inefficient.

"Although some of these statements are true, they do not give an adequate picture of India. This has been demonstrated by the Government of the new India. Its leaders, by their tactfull handling of their country's affairs in the hour of crises, have given a convincing proof of their statesmanship and ability. Various measures have been adopted and reforms introduced to help the people rise to the level of advanced nations but it may take years before the full results will become evident.

"Protestant missions have made a tremendous impact on the life of India. Their contribution has been recognized and appreciated by one and all. Even the Government value what they have done in the fields of education and medicine. But the need for mission work is still great. The people of India, including the India Church, will continue to appreciate the contributions missions can make to help meet the many needs of this great land."

IOWA PATROLMEN CHECK 9,600 CAR FOR "DRIVE RIGHT"

Des Moines. — Iowa highway patrolmen stopped and checked 9,688 Iowa vehicles Wednesday night in connection with the approaching "drive right" campaign by which the state hopes to save a life a day for 24 days.

S. N. Jesperson, head of the patrol, said 170 summonses and 1,369 equipment warning tickets were issued in the spot check.

The patrol primarily was concerned with making certain that night-moving vehicles on Iowa's highways have proper lights, he said.

Jespersen cautioned that additional such checks could be anticipated between now and the end of the "drive right" campaign which begins next Tuesday. He urged all Iowa motorists to get their cars in good shape.

RABBIT AND SQUIRREL SEASON SET

The hunting season for squirrels and rabbits opens September 15. The squirrel season will close November 15, the rabbit season January 31. Bag limit on both squirrels and rabbits is 6, and possession limit 12. Shooting hours on rabbits are set at 6:00 a. m. to 6: p. m. each day with no shooting hour restriction placed on squirrels.

Biological studies indicate very little change in squirrel populations from the 1949 season, with local fluctuations in rabbit counts with the over-all population little if any better than the previous year.

Grand Champion Hampshires Win Iowa Breeder Oliver Trophy

There's no such title as "Iowa's Champion Hog Breeder." But if there were, Jim Henderson of Coin, Iowa, would certainly be one of the strongest contenders for that title.

Jim started raising purebred Hampshires in a partnership with his father, Arthur Henderson, just 10 years ago.

Last year he showed the grand champion barrow at Iowa's State Fair, brought the Hampshire breed's Oliver Trophy to the state for the first time, and sold a total of 673 purebred Hampshires for breeding purposes, believed to be a record for any breeder.

The Henderson farm's first registered sow, Zephyr Irene, P.R. 18, was purchased for $25.00. Her progeny, qualified in production registry records through eight generations, have formed the foundation for the herd.

And now the Hendersons raise 1,000 purebred hogs a year and breeding stock from this herd has been sold into many states. Last fall they sold more than 200 boars, a record in itself. This spring they had three sales, selling 55 head on March 14, 50 head on March 28 and another 55 head on April 14. Last year they sold 573 head for breeding purposes at auction sales, plus another 100 at private sales, more than any other Iowa breeder has sold in any one year. Most of their stock went to market hog raisers.

Jim Henderson's show record is just as impressive as this sale record, although he insists he is a breeder and not a professional in the show ring. Back in 1946, at the Nebraska State Fair, he had the grand champion barrow and grand champion pen of barrows. In 1947 at the Ak-Sar-Ben show at Omaha, stock from his herd won the grand champion ribbon, and at both Iowa State and the American Royal show in Kansas City he was in the money in all classes in which he showed.

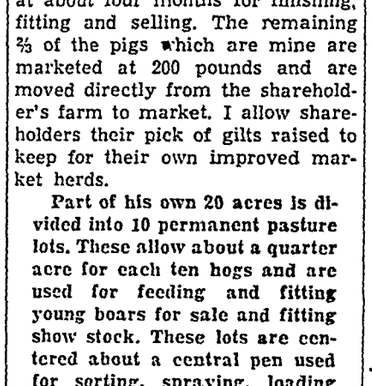
1949 Top Year

In 1948 he was in the money at the National Barrow show at Austin, Minn. and again at the American Royal.

But last year, 1949, was his top year. He started off at the National Hampshire type conference at Omaha by taking the first four places in the carcass barrow class. Then at Iowa State he walked off with six firsts out of the seven classes in which he showed. His ribbons included the grand champion barrow over all breeds, the champion light barrow and reserve champion heavy barrow over all breeds, plus champion Hamp barrow and pen of barrows. At Austin, at the National Barrow Show, he had the highest placed Hampshire truckload in a class with 45 loads, and at the Ak-Sar-Ben show in Omaha the champion ton litter and champion pen of barrows were from his breeding stock.

It was as a result of this showing that he was awarded the Oliver Trophy, bringing it to Iowa for the first time. This trophy is awarded to the Hampshire breeder making the most significant record within the breed in showing barrows during the calendar year.

Henderson has started off 1950 in the same way with the grand champion barrow and pen of barrows at the National Western Stock Show at Denver. There his champion barrow sold for a new record price of $1.82½ per lb. He took all first prizes in the two weight classes in which he showed.



Jim Henderson of Coin, Iowa, one of the outstanding breeders in that state and first Iowa winner of the Oliver trophy awarded to the Hampshire breeder making the best barrow show accomplishment in 1949. He had top four carcass barrows at Hampshire type conference in Omaha, grand champion barrow over all breeds at Iowa State fair, and highest place Hampshire truckload at National Barrow show at Austin.

Explaining his share arrangement, Jim says: "I get ¼ of the pigs of a sow at market age. About a third of my share I select as boars and these are brought to my farm at about four months for finishing, fitting and selling. The remaining ⅔ of the pigs which are mine are marketed at 200 pounds and are moved directly from the shareholder's farm to market. I allow shareholders their pick of gilts raised to keep for their own improved market herds.

Part of his own 20 acres is divided into 10 permanent pasture lots. These allow about a quarter acre for each ten hogs and are used for feeding and fitting young boars for sale and fitting show stock. These lots are centered about a central pen used for sorting, spraying, loading etc. Water is piped to this pen so that it is easy to fill waterers in each lot with a 50 foot hose. It is also simple to fill self-feeders from this one central pen.

Uses Self-Feeders

The balance of the 20 acres is kept in rotation and is divided each year by temporary electric fence so that he has absolutely clean ground for raising pigs farrowed on his own place up to 100 pounds.

With such a concentration of hogs on so small an acreage, he follows a careful sanitation and vaccination program, and places strong emphasis on his feeding program. He believes the right feeding program is vital in disease control and that it pays to keep hogs growing at a pace that keeps their resistance to disease high. Or, as he puts it, keep them growing ahead of disease.

Henderson pays special attention to the menu fed his hogs, but spends the very minimum of time feeding them. His operation is a bit unique in that he never hand feeds or slop feeds, even during the farrowing period, or prior to taking hogs to sale or show.

I never slop hogs and I'm never going to. I sell to market hog men and most of them use self-feeders all the time. If I were to sell them a pampered, hand-fed, slop-fed animal, they might be disappointed if it didn't do as well as expected on their dairy feed. I never put a hand on hogs, in the way of special feeding, before a sale or show. I haven't time. I doubt if we spend an hour a day in feeding our hogs," Henderson says.

Seeks Uniformity

"I find I don't like to try to raise hogs without some wheat and without dairy by-products," he adds. He feeds one-third wheat, one-third oats and one-third corn. This is always ground together and fed through self-feeders. To this he adds equal amounts of 40 per cent protein supplement and pelletized dairy by-products, plus mineral and salt. These ingredients are always weighed and mixed in with the grain at grinding to be sure of correct balance in the ration. The pelletized dairy by-product fits in with his self-feeder operation because in the pellet form the dairy by-product can be adapted to self-feeder use. The entire ration is always self-fed. In winter alfalfa is added to this ration. "I have all my feed ground and mixed at the local elevator.

Henderson marks some of his purebred Hampshire gilts for his second 1950 spring sale. He sold a total of 573 breeding hogs at auction last year, more than any other pure breeder in his state.

Henderson Show Record Impressive

Jim Henderson's show record is impressive. In 1946 he had the grand champion barrow and grand champion pen of barrows at the Nebraska state fair; in 1947 his stock took the grand champion ribbon at Ak-Sar-Ben show at Omaha, and he was in the money in all classes at both Iowa state and American Royal shows; in 1948 he was in the money at the National Barrow show at Austin, Minn., and again at the American Royal; in 1949 he won the Oliver Trophy.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Forces Ordered to Stand Or Die on Korean Battle Front; Baruch Urges All-Out Controls

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

KOREA:
Stand or Die

For many Americans, who had been inclined to look upon the Korean war with indifference and an attitude of "business as usual", there came a rude awakening during the fifth week of the conflict.

Casualties began to arrive from Korea, youngsters without legs and arms, bullet-riddled young men who kept their eyes closed as they were transferred from planes to ambulances, boys who did not wish to talk or be quoted.

To the millions who had no brothers and fathers and husbands in Korea, the scenes brought back frightening pictures of World War II, memories of days filled with tears and prayers, and sometimes, utter despair.

And to the awakening American public came another shock. The commanding general in Korea, Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, said: "There is no point in not telling the simple truth, which is that the war has reached its critical stage."

The American army had retreated as far as it would retreat, General Walker said. He gave one order to his troops: "Stand or die."

Americans were shocked by his flat statement that his army must win or die where they stood without hope of surrender or retreat and a mass evacuation as at Dunkerque.

And in Korea the G. I. has a question for the war correspondents: "Are you telling the folks back home the truth—that it is a tough and hard fight, and we need more help at once?"

That was the situation as 120,000 Communists began a steady attack upon U. S. positions. Along the entire front, stretched in an arc from Yongdok on the north to Hadong on the south, Communist troops hammered at American lines.

Four U. S. divisions, none at full strength, with the aid of some South Korean troops, the exact number unknown, slugged it out with the invaders. American supplies and reinforcements were rushed to the battle area, but if they would be enough and in time was still the question uppermost in the minds of military leaders.

One outstanding truth stood out from all the rest: American troops were locked in the battle that would decide the Korean war and possibly the peace of the world for the next 10 to 15 years.

As Gen. Eisenhower said, "If our forces in Korea are defeated the entire world will be thrown into another great war."

It was a rude awakening for the American people, but a necessary one, most observers agreed. It was now time for the American people to get down to the bloody, unpleasant job of winning a first class war.

INFLATION:
Invitation to Defeat

Elder statesman Bernard Baruch spoke his mind (and the mind of a great segment of the public) to the senate banking committee when he urged congress to freeze all wages, prices and rents, boost taxes, and ration essential goods in a broad program to mobilize the nation's economic strength.

In his clear and determined way, Baruch asked the question that has been in the mind of the average citizen since prices began to rise after the Korean war started: "Shall we do now what we know will have to be done later, and thus hasten the victory of peace? Or shall we fumble and falter and invite defeat?"

Baruch, who played an important part in economic mobilization in two wars, urged:

Priorities and allocations as proposed by the President. Elimination of profiteering. Higher taxes. Effective price, wage and rent controls. Power to ration scarce civilian essentials where necessary. The postponement of all less essential works. A reduction of unnecessary public and private expenditures. Every effort to increase production.

Also, the development of substitutes for things in short supply. Control of all exports and imports. Conservation of whatever is scarce. And organized self-restraint among the people—"the enlightened self-discipline to accept the denials which winning the peace entails."

Congressional leaders seemed divided on Baruch's plan even if the public was not. Said Sen. Robert A. Taft, he "wholly disagrees" with the elder statesman who, he asserted is "for all-out dictatorship".

INDUSTRY:
Higher Profit Rates

The Federal Trade Commission reported that 17 of 25 major U.S. manufacturing industries had higher profit rates in 1949 than in the prewar year of 1940.

Most striking increases in the rate of return were motor vehicles from 17.3 to 29.6 per cent, biscuits and crackers from 8.7 to 16.8 percent and bread 7.6 to 15.3 per cent. Percentage rates were based on stockholders investment after taxes.

Battle Lines

A desperate all-out push by North Korean Communists, aimed at Taegu, center of American defenses in South Korea, is underway. The Red forces hurled nine divisions against the allied line. U. S. forces gave up Hadong (1) and fell back to Chinju. Hamyang (2) was under heavy attack. In the Yondong (3) and Hamchang (4) sectors, the U. S. first cavalry and South Korean troops blunted a powerful Communist assault.

ATOMIC BOMB:
Won't Be Used

Many people have wondered in recent weeks whether or not the atomic bomb would be used in Korea. President Truman has announced it will not be used in Korea, but it was recalled that the President has asserted several times that he would not hesitate to use atomic bombs to assure the security of the United States.

As the world situation became more tense, it was obvious that officials were carefully avoiding any public discussion of the use of atomic weapons, though strategists have indicated that there are no worthwhile targets for such weapons in North Korea.

Another angle of atomic warfare was under consideration by defense officials, however. Ways and means of stopping any ship from entering American harbors that might be carrying an atomic bomb were being worked out.

Port authorities in San Francisco and New York have announced all ships from Russia or Russian satellite nations will be stopped and searched before allowed to enter into those ports.

EMPLOYMENT:
Highest in Two Years

Except for farm work, employment in the United States set a two year record during the first week of July with 52,774,000 persons employed. The previous peak was 52,452,000 in July, 1948.

The department of commerce estimated 8,440,000 farm workers were employed during the first week of July as compared with 9,647,000 in early July, 1949.

The increase in employment was attributed to a stepped up production in industries directly related to the nation's mobilization drive, most observers believed.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer made this comment on the employment situation:

"It should be noted that, with the nation again approaching full employment, it may be necessary once more to find ways to expand our labor force to permit the increased industrial production and strengthening of the armed forces requested by the President."

He was quick to deny, however, that he had any thought of possible manpower controls in making that statement.

PLANES:
$4 Billion Order

As the Korean war developed it became obvious to all observers that the United States air force has the best planes in the world. That superiority will be increased. The air force has announced 200 manufacturers have been ordered to begin work immediately on nearly $4,400 million worth of new planes and parts.

Considerable secrecy enveloped the details of the order. Manufacturers were authorized to announce the number of additional workers they would need to fill the orders, but they were prohibited from disclosing the type of production, the number of units, the dollar value of the orders, or other information relating to the contracts.

New Economy

With an eye on the huge amounts being spent for the armed forces and defense, the house appropriations committee decided to take another look at non-military appropriations and cut them where it can. Some observers think the cuts may be drastic.

A committee spokesman said the group had no fixed goal, but was determined to "cancel all appropriations" that can be cancelled.

SABOTAGE:
U. S. Starts Drive

The Federal Bureau of Investigation was back in the news with the announcement of two new arrests of spy suspects. They were identified as Abraham Brothman, 37, and Miriam Moscowitz, 34.

The couple was arrested after Harry Gold, confessed atomic spy, named the man as his one-time associate in espionage activities for Russia. Miss Moscowitz is a partner in Brothman's engineering firm.

In all, seven Americans now have been arrested since Dr. Klaus Fuchs' trial conviction and sentencing to 14 years in prison in England.

Meanwhile, the government started a campaign to catch and prosecute spies and saboteurs.

J. Edgar Hoover, F. B. I. director, said each citizen can play an important part in stopping Communists who would bore from within. The citizen's job, he said, is to report quickly to the F. B I. any evidence of subversion or sabotage.

And Attorney General McGrath announced that the justice department intends to be ready for any evidence that might be turned up. Effective October 1, he said, four federal grand juries—instead of the usual two—will be kept on duty in Washington. At least one grand jury will be used exclusively to deal with charges of subversive activity.

CANDY:
Important Food Item

Candy has become one of the nation's important food items and America's sweet tooth demands an average of 17 pounds of candy per capita each year.

This figure is taken from a book just published by Edwin J. Brach, Chicago candy manufacturer, who reports on America's candy-eating habits. Using figures from the department of commerce, he shows that candy is an important food item in the American family budget.

On a per capita basis each American eats almost seven pounds more candy than butter annually; almost 10 pounds more candy than cheese; about 11 pounds more candy than margarine; nine pounds more candy than cereals and only 2½ fewer pounds of candy than coffee.

Citing figures from the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, the Brach report showed that the average family spends 25.2 cents per week on candy in food stores alone compared to 23.7 cents for canned juices, 21.5 cents for cakes, 19.8 cents for shortenings, 18.7 cents for soups and 16.3 cents for white flour.

Almost half of the candy purchased today is sold in food stores.

RUSSIA:
Returns to U. N.

The Soviet Union ended its boycott of the United Nations as Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob A. Malik took over the council chair for August.

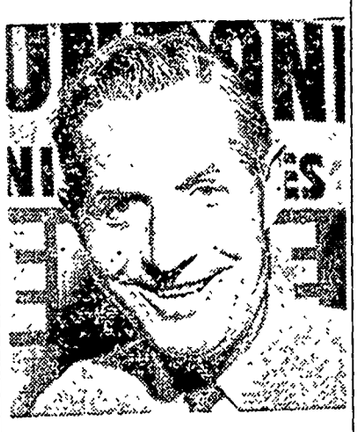
The democratic nations of the world immediately raised the question of why had the Russians called off their six-month walkout, especially at this time.

There appeared many possibilities, the most important of which was a belief the Soviet Union would attempt to sabotage the work of the council.

Other observers pointed out that the so-called Stockholm Peace Petition campaign by the Soviet Union had failed and the Russians must now try something else. The security council offers an ideal place for a "so-called" peace move.

Still another possibility presented by observers was founded on the belief by the Russians that the Communists may win the Korean war soon and that the Kremlin decided to step back to the council and demand peace at that stage.

Primary Winner



Rep. Mike Monroney defeated Sen. Elmer Thomas in a run-off primary election, and thus won the right to represent the Democratic party in the November senatorial election in Oklahoma. Democratic nomination in Oklahoma is tantamount to election.

MACHINE TOOLS:
Aging Alarmingly

The nation's population isn't alone in growing older. Machine tools are, too, and at a rate that a wartime production expert finds "alarming."

"Our industrial equipment is deteriorating so rapidly that the nation could be placed at a serious disadvantage in an emergency," said William L. Batt, president of SKF Industries, Inc., and former war production board chairman.

"IOWA FOR CHRIST" CRUSADE

The eyes of the nation will be focused upon the "Iowa For Christ Crusade" which begins August 23rd on the Iowa State Capitol lawn in a great Canvas Cathedral seating 5,000, with Dr. Mervin Rosell, Rochester, Minn., as evangelist. Running simultaneously with the nightly rallies on the Capitol grounds will be the "Crusade Canvas Chapel" to be erected on the Iowa State Fair grounds, where daily programs of music, messages, motion pictures, and radio broadcasts will feature top talent from across the nation.

Hundreds of churches, pastors, religious and civic groups are joining hands to promote what promises to be the most far-reaching interdenominational effort in the history of Iowa.

Dr. Mervin Rosell, the evangelist, has conducted large religious rallies across America, and will be in Des Moines after a successful campaign in the arena of the Municipal Auditorium in Kansas City, Missouri where over a quarter of a million persons attended the three-week endeavor.

The Des Moines "Crusade" is being sponsored by Youth For Christ and hundred of churches. Cy Jackson, director of Des Moines Youth For Christ and International Vice President of the organization, is general chairman.

The meetings on the Capitol lawn will be held at 7:30 p. m. daily, with Sunday afternoon rallies at 2:30. Also, Monday, September 4, Labor Day, an afternoon rally at 2:30. On Sunday, September 3 at 1:30 p. m. the "Old Fashioned Revival Hour," world-wide radio broadcast will originate in Des Moines with Dr. Charles E. Fuller in person.

Of special interest to Iowans will be the daily appearance at the Fair Grounds of Rev. Clarence Erickson, radio pastor to millions, who is heard daily over radio station WHO. Erickson will also appear at the Capitol Lawn tent.

Other talent to appear at both tents include Herbert Hoover, of Greenville, South Carolina, songleader and soloistist; Arnie Hartman, accordianist.

MOST ACCIDENTS ON THE COUNTRY ROADS

Death is on the march on country roads these days.

Norval Wardle, extension farm safety specialist at Iowa State College, reports that accidents on country roads are increasing steadily. So he says drivers may well heed the tips in the state-wide Drive Right Campaign, August 22 to September 6th, which is sponsored by the Iowa Safety Congress.

Contrary to common belief that highways are the most dangerous driving places, Warrle says the highest percentage of accidents per number of drivers is now on country roads.

Offer Safety Tips

He blames this party on less driving supervision there, fewer road signs, narrow roads and loose surfacing which makes it hard to stop quickly. All of this means that slow driving is vital to farmers' safety, Wardle warned.

The safety specialist point out several things that may help cut down accidents on country roads.

When driving onto any road from a private drive, bring the vehicle to a complete stop, according to law.

Tractors and other farm implements are required to have at least one white light in front and one red light in the rear if on the road at night. These lights must be visible from 500 feet, which eliminates the use of reflectors.

A driver's license is required of any person who operates a farm vehicle on any public road except when going between farm buildings or nearby farm fields.

Tractor Accidents Heavy

The tractor driver is in a dangerous spot if he has an accident with a car. One out of every 15 tractor highway accidents results in death, while 1 out of every 111 car accidents kills someone.

Automobile drivers can be warned much sooner that there is a tractor on the other side of the hill if a pole and red flag is fastended to the implement, extending 8 feet above the road.

STRETCHING OATS CROP RAISES HOG FEED VALUE

The new oats crops will be worth more as hog feed if it's stretched out through the whole year rather than fed heavily now and used up long before harvest time next year.

Oats fed in small amounts is worth as much or possibly more than corn, pound for pound, says C. C. Culbertson, Iowa State College animal nutrition specialist.

Sows and growing gilts will efficiently use about 20 percent oats in their ration, assuming corn and oats are the same price per pound. This means about 2 pounds per day if hogs are hand fed. Oats is especially important for sows in the gestateion or suckling period, Culbertson says.

Farmers with a surplus of oats can put their hogs in shape for market without using any corn, or with a small amount of corn. But oats will have to be cheap or this type of ration will not pay. In food value, a pound of good oats equals the same amount of corn if the oats makes up about 20 percent of fattening hogs' rations. They will eat more and put on faster gains if it's ground to medium fineness and soaked for 12 hours. Oats should be fed moist, not wet, Culbertson points out.

There's nothing better for starting pigs than rolled, hulled oats, he says. Many farmers take their oats to nearby mills to have this done, and they find that it pays.

OLD NEWSPAPER BROUGHT TO TIMES OFFICE BY W. H. GREIMAN

W. H. Greiman brought a copy of an old newspaper to The Times office which he had received from his son, Maurice, who found it when remodeling an old house.

The paper is The New Convenant, published in Chicago, date of May 20, 1865. The newspaper, devoted to Religion, Theoretical and Practical, Literature and News."

Many of the early newspapers carried advertising on the front page, but not this paper. The front page carries a lengthy poem, and the balance of the front page was devoted to religious articles. D. P. Livermore was the Editor and Proprietor.

The 8-page paper carried ads on only 3 pages. Patient medivines, sewing machines, and organs were well advertised, as well as melodeons, dry goods, steam engines and Kirby's Harvester which could be used as a reaper as well as a mower.

The paper was set in 8-pt. type with 6-pt. slugs between lines and set 16-ems wide, or about 2 and five-eights inches as compared to the 12 and 13-em newspapers of tdoay. All pages were 5-columns wide.

The issue was volume XVIII which would indicate that it began publication in 1847.

PLAY SAFE -- "SLOW DOWN AT SUNDOWN"

As days grow shorter and the hours of darkness grow longer, the problem of headlight glare becomes an increasing menace according to Floyd L. Link, safety director of the Motor Club of Iowa, largest Iowa affiliate of the American Automobile Association.

Although introduction of the sealed-beam headlight brought marked improvement in automobile lighting, glare continues to be a Number One Enemy of the millions of motorists who drive at night. Failure on the part of all too many motorists to depress the headlight beams when another car is approaching aggravates the hazards.

The fact that nearly two-thirds of all traffic fatalities occur in hours of darkness points to the need of further research by automotive engineers into solving automotive lighting problems. Also there is need for greate study of the entire problem of drivers' night vision - particularly among those drivers who are prone to have after-dark accidents.

Meanwhile, says Mr. Link, every motorist can help the entire situation by keeping his headlights in good working condition, by depressing the beam when meeting another car, and by remembering the warning: "Slow down after sundown."

ARTIFICIAL INSEMINATION SHORT COURSE SET

Local persons interested in becoming technicians in artificial breeding associations will have a chance to prepare for the position at an Iowa State College shortcourse in Ames, September 5-9, says Paul Henderson, county extension director.

Extension dairymen at the college report a shortage of well trained men in this field. All Iowa counties now have artificial breeding services available, but some counties will be needing additional men, Henderson says.

The total average income for technicians in 1949 was $3,150. Of course, some had much higher incomes, according to ertension reports. The average technician serviced 1,050 cows and received a commission of $3 per cow.

Reports indicate that men between the ages of 18 anl 40 with farm background are often most successful in this work. Experience with dairy cattle helps too, the Hancock County extension director adds.

The course at Ames will be limited to 20 men. Those accepted will be charged a $5 00 laboratory fee and will buy about $10.00 worth of equipment. Men will be expected to arrange for their own board and lodging while attending the course.

Some of the main subjects offered will be semen collection, processing, storage and evaluation, and record keeping. There'll be courses in anatomy, physiology, feeding and management of dairy cows Each man will have a chance to do some actual insemination work during the school.

Henderson says that anyone interested should write for an application for entry to Dr. J B. Herrick, Curtiss Hall, Iowa State College, Ames.

SOIL TESTING RESULTS APPLY YEAR AROUND

Soil tests from samples taken in August can be relied on in December or in May or any other month.

Results of tests taken at any one time of year apply at any other time of year and make reliable guide for soil management over a period of years, according to County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

In fact, Hancock County farmers who send in soil samples for testing won't need to plan on further sampling of the same land for the next 5 years, he explains.

Reports from the Iowa State College soil laboratories indicate that now processing methods are helping get results back to farmers without any delay this summer.

Henderson thinks right after harvest is a good time to take samples and send them in, since those sent in now will avoid any seasonal rush that might develop at the laboratories during fall months.

Soil testing cartons and information on sample taking and mailing procedure may be obtained at the county extension director's office.

FEEDER RUNS MAY BE HEAVY IN FALL

Likely To Be Heaviest In October And November

Cattle feeders can look for a normal seasonal run of cattle this year, with the main feeder movement picking up in Sept. and coming in heavy during October and November, says Rex Beresford, Iowa State College extension beef cattle marketing specialist.

Feed is good in most of the range country so cattle will be in good condition when they roll into Iowa feedlots, Beresford reports. Plentiful feed in the range states also will cause cattlemen to hold onto their feeder cattle as long as possible so they can put on more gains. The price upswing in last year's late feeder cattle market may influence range cattlemen to hold for the late market this year.

The total feeder supply will be at least as large as last year, possibly larger. It looks as if calf numbers may be slightly larger than a year ago with about the same number of yearling feeders offered for sale.

It will be a different story for 2 or 3-year-olds. Beresford says the supply of this type is down and prices have been running $5 to $6 above last year. Short feeding these heavy cattle last year proved to pay off well, so he expects more buyers for the large ones this year than there will be cattle.

Although the total supply of cattle is more than 2 million head above the numbers 2 years ago, more cows and heifers are being held for re-stocking. So cattle feeders will find about the same number on the market as last year, but prices have been hanging above those of a year ago. That may mean that the profit from fattening cattle this season will have to come only from gains and not from price increases, according to Beresford.

The two great unknowns today that could change everything are the soft corn situation and price ceilings. Either could greatly affect feeder cattle prices in a hurry, Beresford warns.

GOOD CITIZEN

Tolerance Is Important Problem In Every American's Life Today

This is the seventh of a series of 10 articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

The sixth promise of a good citizen: In thought, expression and action; at home, at school and in all my contacts, I will avoid any group prejudice based on class, race or religion.

In youthful sports we learn that the best pitchers or finest quarterbacks are the boys who throw or pass better, without regard to color of their skins, the kind of churches they go to, or the size of homes they come from

Jews and gentiles, white and Negro, catholic and protestant, skilled and unskilled, rich and poor, intelligent and dull, tall and short, man and woman, blonde and brunette, are all members of this club. the United States of America, and furthermore are members of the human race.

TOLERANCE is not merely "putting up" with the other fellow. It's the spirit of trying to understand him. It is judgment of people as people rather than as classes.

Intolerance and group prejudice are a resentment of anybody that's different, a manifestation of insecurity and ignorance, and a form of bullying akin to that of chickens picking on the one with part of its feathers already off.

Intolerance whispers and listens to gossip and rumor.

The intolerant is one who has a mob or a safe majority with him and is mean enough to take advantage of it, which is why appeals to intolerance are so generally used by rabble-rousers and demagogues.

An appeal to prejudice, an attempt to divide the United States along social, racial and religious lines, and so to conquer it, was the chief hope of our enemies during the war.

FAIR PLAY starts at home, where "little pitchers have big ears" Even a thoughtless remark by parents and absorbed by children can foster intolerance in school and in the play groups of the neighborhood, where it grows its first poisonous roots and often assumes its cruelest forms.

We have made many laws of liberty in the country, nurtured many forms of freedom. But there is one law made long before 1776 which will last far longer than any man-made regulation:

"Do unto others as you would that they do unto you."

Let it shine from out the hear of every man. Let it spread through the neighborhood, the countryside and the city block; through the shop and office; through the city and state—north and south, east and west—through the country and throughout the world

TWO LETTERS

Abraham Lincoln's letter to Mrs. Bixby of Massachusetts:

Dear Madam:

I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant-General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any words of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I can not refrain from tendering to you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the republic they died to save. I pray that our heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.

Yours very sincerely and respectfully,

Abraham Lincoln

Message from Kaiser Wilhelm II of Germany to Frau Meter of Delmenhorst-Oldenburg:

His Majesty the Kaiser hears that you have sacrificed nine sons in defense of the Fatherland in the present war. His Majesty is immensely gratified at the fact, and in recognition is pleased to send you his photograph, with frame and autograph signature.

STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

JOHN REED KING, emcee of "Chance of a Lifetime" and "Give and Take", has reached the million dollar mark in prizes given away during his years on radio quiz programs. More than 40,000 contestants have come before his microphones; he prides himself on never having capitalized on a contestant's discomfort. Not that he doesn't indulge in a bit of fun; he once awarded a "2½ carat necklace"—carrots on a piece ot string. Another time, he presented a contestant with "a little carbon in a piece of paper", a diamond ring wrapped in a $500 savings bond. Audiences love him, keep him on stage hours after broadcasts, though he's not giving anything away.

Betty Hutton, according to reports, will travel for a couple of months with Ringling Bros. Circus, incognito, preparatory to being starred in De Mille's "The Greatest Show on Earth". It's my guess that the instant she arrives everybody will recognize her. Betty could no more hide her charm and gaiety than she could change the color of her eyes.

CBS correspondents have a habit of finding wives while abroad on news assignments. Winston Burdett found Georgianna in Italy; Richard C. Hottelet married an Englishwoman; Larry LeSueur also married an Englishwoman, Priscilla Bruce. Howard K. Smith wed a Dane. David Schoenbrun married an American, but he met and courted her in Paris. Want to marry a war correspondent? Then travel!

FARM GIRLS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

BEULAH and Candida had met in the New York office of Mortimer and Brown, attorneys. They became fast friends because they found something in common. That something was a desire to live on a farm in the country.

They talked about it incessantly. Then Beulah came through with the great idea.

3 Minute Fiction

"Let's work hard and save for a year. Then let's pool our resources, make a down payment on a small farm and —and live there!"

"But we don't know a thing about farming. We've both lived in the city all our lives. We couldn't make it pay."

"We could," Beulah said, "if we wanted to badly enough. There are books on how to do everything these days."

So for a year the two girls worked and saved. They spent evenings on end at the library reading books on small scale farming.

When spring came they drove up into the country and called on the farmers who had offered their homes for sale. The second place they visited proved exactly what they wanted. It was a small, white, tree-shaded house with a big barn, a hennery containing a flock of 100 birds, a cow, a horse, a pig and several cultivated acres.

It was a swell idea. Best of all, they made a profit. The enterprise would likely have developed into something lasting, had it not been for Barnaby Xerxes.

"But we don't know anything about farming," Candida said. "We've both lived in the city all our lives."

He was a radio singer, suffering from a nervous breakdown. He had come to Hillside to recuperate. Beulah met him one day on a deserted section of country road. He was walking and she gave him a lift back to town in the delivery truck.

BEULAH was thrilled. During the days that followed she hated going off evenings and leaving Candida home alone, but, obviously, Barnably and she couldn't take the other girl everywhere with them.

Beulah was wondering how, when Barnaby proposed marriage and she accepted him, she was going to break the news to Candida.

Two nights later Beulah delivered a half dozen fowl to the village church for its semi-annual supper, and was returning home earlier than she was expected. Lights were on in the front room and through the window she saw Barnaby holding Candida in his arms, kissing her.

Beulah was furious. She stormed into the house. Candida tried to be calm and explain that she and Barnaby had loved each other all along. They hadn't had the courage to tell Beulah.

You — you vixen!" Beulah shrieked.

A week passed. The girls went about their duties without speaking. Both knew that sooner or later they would have to come to some agreement about the farm.

So in the end Beulah made arrangements with Lawyer Stearns and one evening the girls set out in the delivery truck for his law office to write the final chapter in their adventure.

They were silent on the drive to town. Even when the car lights went out for no explainable reason neither of them said anything. Silently Beulah got out, lifted the hood, discovered a fuse was blown, and having no spare, tried to produce a makeshift from a hairpin. It began to look as though there was nothing to do but continue on foot, when suddenly the connection was made and the lights flared up.

In the glare of the headlights a man and a woman, evidently having come up in the darkness without knowing of the truck's presence, were standing in close embrace.

The man was Barnaby Xerxes. Nobody said anything for a moment; then Barnaby turned and began walking swiftly away. The girl followed him.

Beulah got into the truck. She started the motor. She looked at Candida. Candida looked at her.

"Oh, shucks!" said Beulah presently, "let's go back and milk the cow and call it a day."

"Oh, let's!" cried Candida.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

Izaak Walton of East Side Did Arresting Angling Job

By BILLY ROSE

When I was a kid on the East Side a couple of hundred years ago, a sidewalk was a lot more than a strip to walk on; it was something to dream on, tap-dance on, pitch pennies on, and scribble philosophical sayings on, of the sort not found in Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations." However, to Gimpy Myers, the leader of our gang, a sidewalk was none of these things—it was primarily something to fish through.

To put a fine point on it, what Gimpy fished through was not the sidewalk itself but the iron gratings over cellar windows and ventilation shafts. And what he fished for, with the aid of a blob of tar dangling at the end of a string, was everything but fish—coins, picture buttons and other bits of treasure which had fallen through.

There were two occupational hazards, however, which used to annoy this Izaak Walton of the asphalts — cops and dogs. Cops, because a subway fisherman attracts crowds and crowds, as a rule, attract pickpockets; dogs, because Gimpy's exposed rear was an invitation for a quick snack, and on several occasions neighborhood mongrels had given it the full and painful treatment.

Billy Rose

As he grew older and more ambitious, Gimpy did less and less angling on the lower East Side where the droppin's, and therefore the pickin's, were slim. Instead, he invaded the lusher territories to the north, and finally settled on the gratings near the Union Square subway where, if the streets were not paved with gold, at least the ventilation shafts yielded a reasonable amount of silver.

THE COP on 14th street in those days was one Ike Fogarty, a cynical gent who always suspicioned that while Gimpy was fishing in the subway, an accomplice was fishing in the spectators' pockets. But he was never able to pin anything on the kid, and this irked him so much that he finally threatened to pull him in for obstructing traffic the next time he caught him.

Gimpy took the hint and went back to Delancey Street—that is, until one May morning when the sun was doing its stuff and going to school was out of the question. At his suggestion, our gang headed north on the prowl for cigar bands, and on 14th Street we saw a woman get out of a taxi, suddenly clutch at her throat, and then stoop over and peer through a grating near the curb.

"Lost som'n, lady?" Gimpy asked her.

"A locket," said the woman. "It isn't worth much, but it has a picture of baby."

There were neither cops nor canines in sight. "I'll git it fer ya," said Gimpy.

From a Prince Albert tin he took a chunk of tar and held a match under it until it was sticky. Then he lowered it on a string and began to maneuver it over the locket.

AT THAT MOMENT, Officer Fogarty rounded the corner. "This time I'm runnin' ya in," he said. "Playin' hookey and obstructin' traffic at one and the same time."

"I'm only tryn' ta git this lady the pitcher of her baby," said Gimpy.

In exactly one minute and 46 seconds, our leader delicately eased the locket through the grating, pulled it free from the tar and handed it to its owner.

"Thanks," said the woman. "It's the only picture I have of baby."

"Let's get goin'," said Fogarty.

Stalling for time, Gimpy said to the woman, "Wouldja min' if'n I took a look?"

"Not at all," she said, and snapped open the locket. Inside was a picture of a mean-looking pekinese pup.

"That ain't no baby," snarled Gimpy. "It's a lousy dawg."

"Watch your language, young man," said the woman. "'Baby's' won more blue ribbons than you have fingers and toes."

Gimpy slowly stuffed string and tar back into the empty tin and dropped it down the grating. Then he turned to Fogarty.

"Okay, copper," he said. "Do ya duty."

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Keep Home Intact During Wartime

By Lawrence Gould

If war comes, should children be "evacuated"?

Answer: Not if it means separation from their parents, and especially their mothers, to judge by what happened in World War II. A London child guidance clinic reports that a follow up of two hundred out of twelve hundred children seen during the war years showed that mental illnesses caused by bombing or changed home conditions have tended to clear up, while those which grew out of being evacuated, although fewer, have become deep and persistent neuroses. Only children who were sent away and felt "rejected" turned into delinquents.

Does every child love his mother?

Answer: Every normal child does, but he also sometimes hates her. For in a child, love and hate are automatic responses to the immediate situation. At least while he's little, a child loves you when you give him what he wants and hates you when you refuse it. If he matures healthily, he'll strike a balance between the two feelings and so love his mother without thinking she is "perfect." But if he remains emotionally childish, he'll let himself recognize only one side of his feelings and will love or hate her unreservedly.

Do many people enjoy being idle?

Answer: No, reports Edrita G. Fried of McGill University in the Journal of Gerontology. Interviews with a "mixed sample" of men and women between fifty and eighty years old showed that sixty-five per cent of them had regular activities, and that among those who did not (mainly from the lower income groups) the desire for work was almost an obsession. Old folks yearned to have their jobs back because they felt that their self-respect depended upon having something to do and that only work could ward off restlessness and depression.

LOOKING AT RELIGION

THE ANCIENT HEBREWS IN CANAAN PRACTICED SOIL CONSERVATION. EVERY 7TH YEAR THE FARMERS ALLOWED THE GROUND TO BE IDLE THAT THE SOIL MIGHT NOT BE EXHAUSTED. IN THOSE YEARS, EVERYTHING THAT GREW BY ITSELF WAS LEFT FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE POOR, THE STRANGERS, AND BEASTS OF THE FIELD.

Acetylsalicylic Acid—Valuable Drug

By Dr. James W. Barton

ONE OF THE VALUABLE and commonly used drugs is acetylsalicylic acid (trade name aspirin) which is, and for many years has been, the specific or special treatment for the pains of rheumatism. It is used alone or with baking soda in the treatment of various types of pain.

Unfortunately there is a certain percentage of people who are allergic to this drug or in whom it upsets the stomach. Accordingly, drug manufacturers combine acetylsalicylic with other drugs because it is still the most effective drug in rheumatic pain.

Some months ago I wrote about the use of very large doses of aspirin, over 150 grains a day, which caused no reaction when combined with succinic acid. This is especially valuable in treatment of rheumatism.

Many rheumatic patients find that a few grains of baking soda taken with acetylsalicylic acid prevents any pain or upsetment in the stomach.

In the New England Medical Journal, Boston, Drs. R. H. Talkov, M. W. Ropes and W. Bauer point out that enteric-coated aspirin (covered with a special coating to allow the drug to go through the stomach into small intestine and so cause no stomach disturbance) has a painkilling effect equal to that of the acetylsalicylic acid and the onset of this painkilling action is only slightly delayed because of this coating.

The use of this specially coated preparation of aspirin is, they write, "especially advantageous in such cases when very great doses are required to control pain."

While about 80 per cent of persons can take the usual dosage of aspirin without any stomach disturbance, the other 20 per cent are unable to do so. Enclosing the aspirin in a covering that carries it through the stomach without any being absorbed by the stomach makes this excellent painkilling drug available for use even in severe stomach disturbances.

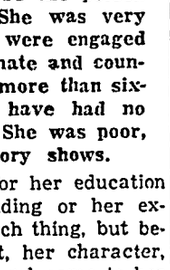
Blessed Woman

Lesson for August 27, 1950

A PROTESTANT Christian is essentially a Bible Christian. Among other things, this means he will form his ideas about Bible characters from the Bible itself and not from books about the Bible, not from legends long afterwards invented.



Dr. Foreman

Some Protestants seem not to realize that even a reverent book like "The Greatest Story Ever Told" is as much fiction as it is fact. Yet Protestant Christians are sometimes inclined to go to the opposite extreme. In reacting against the tall tales, they overlook the facts.

If some Christians overdo reverence for Mary, offering prayers and incense before her statues and even going to the point of saying we cannot come to Jesus except through Mary—an idea totally false to the Christian gospel—other Christians make the mistake of neglecting her memory altogether.

Surely we ought not to forget or under-rate the woman who of all the women in the world was chosen of God to be the mother of our Lord Jesus Christ.

God Knew Her Heart

NAZARETH was a small village with no good reputation. Yet it was in that town that Mary grew to womanhood. Man looks on outward appearances, but God looks on the heart.

You might have not selected Mary for the mother of Jesus, or to put it in another way, you would hardly have expected Mary's child to be the person Jesus became. She was very young, for girls were engaged early in that climate and country—perhaps no more than sixteen. She could have had no great education. She was poor, as the whole story shows.

Yet it was not for her education or her social standing or her experience or any such thing, but because of her heart, her character, herself, that the angel came to her that spring day in Nazareth.

Mary's Song

THERE IS no room to tell all that can be known of Mary from the Gospels. We can know or guess much from that one song, the "Magnificat" as it is called from its first word in the Latin translation. (Luke 1:46-55.)

We can tell from this that she was a woman who knew her Bible. Moffatt's translation of the New Testament uses italic type to indicate quotations from the Old Testament; and in this Song of Mary, of its sixteen lines all but two are printed in italics.

Words and phrases came to her in the familiar cadences of the book she knew and loved. Further, she was of a poetic turn of mind. This "Magnificat" has been set to music and sung in churches all over the world. Since Mary was herself a poet, it is not surprising to find that Jesus often spoke in words which sing with the beauty and rhythm of fine poetry.

Patriotism and the Poor

MARY WAS A woman who loved her country. We are so familiar with the "Magnificat" as a church anthem that we overlook it actually and originally was; a hymn of praise to God for his mercies to Mary's nation, Israel.

Her people, so long enslaved, were to be set free. It is a revolutionary hymn, too. Princes are to be dethroned, the proud cast down, the rich made empty; but God will give his help to the hungry and the poor.

Mary and Jesus

LOVE OF HER Bible, love of beauty, love of her country; and most of all, love of God. You could guess this from the words of the angel, but you can see it plainly in this song. It is an outpouring of joy and thankfulness to a God who is very real and near and loved.

Every mother lives again in her sons; in Jesus we can see the manner of woman Mary must have been. When the boy Jesus called God his Father, who had taught him that word? When the young man Jesus fought off temptation by using the Word of God, who had first guided him to do this? Where had Jesus learned Scripture except under his mother's roof?

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

By WALTER D. HEAD, WNU Correspondent

Unity Is Lacking

A COUPLE of weeks ago this column reported the wonderful worth-while movement in this country called the "Crusade for Freedom," a private enterprise plan to sell to all nations those great principles of freedom, friendship and faith which form the cornerstone of our democratic republic.

But watching the antics on Capitol Hill since the courageous challenge issued by President Truman to Communist aggression in Korea, it might be a good idea for all of us, including many senators and congressmen, to search our own souls and our minds for a rebirth of freedom, friendship and faith within ourselves if we want to be worthy advocates and staunch defenders of the principles of peace and justice and all those attributes we have been taught to admire and believe in.

For there appears to be little faith on the hill. There is suspicion, members of congress eye one another with distrust. Epithets are hurled back and forth beneath the domed roofs where statesmen at one time or another made history. Now and then is heard the prudent voice of reason and wise counsel, but mostly it's bickering and jealousies and politics and hate and distrust.

There is little evidence of the unity and undivided support and oneness of purpose which the nation must have if we are to successfully withstand the communistic horde and lead the forces of this nation and the United Nations to victory once again.

Too Many Reservations

On the one hand we have the Wherrys, the Jenners, the Malones, the Fergusons, the McCarthys, giving lip-service to the President, but gummed-up with "whens, ifs, and buts"; we hear Senator Taft declare it dangerous to give the President the tools he asks in controls and other war powers, and the same day the elder statesman Bernard Baruch declare the weakness of the war powers act of 1950 is that it does not go far enough in powers for the President.

There are too many reservations dividing the support behind the President; there is too much hindsight criticism and not enough foresight planning to make for a winning team; there is too much spying on one another, too much hysteria over what now must play second fiddle to the survival of the nation.

Truman Has Aged

To those of us who have attended the President's press conference it is evident the decisions which Mr. Truman has been forced to make have already taken toll. Today the President's sparse greying hair is almost snow white, deeper lines have etched into his face, the chipper cocky smile with which he charmed the people at his whistle stops over the country is gone. In its place is a grim, thin-lipped determination.

For Mr. Truman, politics is out the window for the duration; his cabinet is meeting twice a week; General Bradley is his first visitor in the morning, briefing him on what has happened and is likely to happen; he meets with congressional leaders of both parties—not about politics—but about hurrying-up legislation necessary to carry on the nation's mobilization.

Closer to him now are Stuart Symington, former secretary for air, now chairman of the National Security Resources Board and the most important war agency. Also, close to Mr. Truman and a liaison between him and his secretary of state, Dean Acheson, is Averell Harriman, former roving ambassador and now made a special presidential assistant.

Example of Patriotism

Insofar as this column is concerned, George N. Craig, national commander of the American Legion in a recent nation-wide broadcast, has set an example which every patriotic American citizen should emulate. Said Craig:

"The duration and course of this onslaught by atheist communism against God-fearing people of the world, no one at this moment can foresee . . . but the American people can forestall it. It is not too late to avoid World War III. But we must make our decision now."

The United States is faced today with what may prove the major crisis of our history. And unity is a must. Realizing the herculean task confronting our nation, the entire membership of the American Legion has been mobilized.

The services of the three million American legionnaires in 17,418 posts throughout the length and breadth of our land have been pledged to the President of the United States and the American government. These three million men and women stand ready."

AROUND THE HOUSE

Citron can be kept fresh indefinitely if you store it in an airtight jar in the refrigerator. Cutting citron into little pieces for fruit cake and such can be a sticky job; but it'll be less sticky if you first cut the peels into long narrow strips, then roll the strips in flour before you do the rest of the cutting.

When raisins and other dried fruits get stale and hard, they can be freshened and used if you put them in a strainer and set the strainer with a cover on it over a pot of boiling water for about fifteen minutes.

One of the handiest ways to take the seeds out of pear halves is to flick them out with the little gadget used to make melon balls.

To avoid having to strain cranberry sauce, run berries through a meat grinder before you cook them. In fact, you can stop right there if you want an unusual raw cranberry relish. Just run the raw berries through the meat grinder along with a couple of raw oranges, peels and all, add sugar to the resulting mixture, and let it stand a few hours before serving.

When stewed fruit begins to turn sour, reclaim it by adding a pinch of baking soda and boiling the fruit over again for a few minutes.

Stale or melted chocolate peppermints have a use, too. Put a quarter of a pound of the tired candies in a double boiler with two cups of milk and heat till everything is melted. Moisten two tablespoonsful of cornstarch with a little cold water, add it to the mixture, cool the whole thing for five minutes, pour it into dessert glasses, and guess what happens? Chocolate mint pudding.

SAVE A LIFE - MOW WEEDS AND CUT CORN ON THE HIGHWAY CORNERS

Mow weeds and cut the tops of the corn above the ears where ever they obstruct the view of drivers on our country roads is the suggestion from Paul Henderson, Hancock County Extension Director. He states that this action taken at once will fit in with the "Drive Right Campaign." Henderson thinks too that a few minutes cleaning up these corners where visibility is bad is worth every second. It may save the life of some good neighbor. There are plenty of these bad corners where the farm operator could help without cutting his yield of corn according to Henderson's observation while driving around the country.

Surely you don't want to be guilty of contributing to the cause of an accident by your neglect in not cleaning up these fence corners.

Curbstone Engineers

Quite a number of people drove to Britt last week to watch the construction of a new concrete elevator and storage bins for the Farmers Elevator. It was like a 4-ring circus and there was usually a couple of hundred people around watching the construction. The building was put up in 10 days and construction was continuous "around the clock" and concrete was poured at the rate of about 6 inches per hour. The forms, catwalks, staging, floor, etc. was all raised continuously with a system of screw jacks. When completed the building was 100 feet high.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Up in the low hills, at the edge of a curve, stands a little white country church. It was a bright Sunday morning when a highway patrolman approached this curve on his regular duty run.

As he rounded the curve, the usual Sunday peace of the scene was marred by two freshly mangled cars standing half on the highway in front of the church. One of the cars - judging from the direction in which it was headed -was obviously on the wrong side of the road.

An elderly man and a young couple stood looking at the damage. The patrolman pulled in and asked if anyone had been hurt. The older man said no and "reachoned" they had been pretty lucky.

Then he took the patrolman by the arm and led him to the most damaged of the two cars. "You know," he said, "it looks to me like this car was on the wrong side of the road."

"You're right," the patrolman said. "Who was driving it?" "I was," said the man.

And that began one of the most pleasant accident investigations in the patrolman's experience. The elderly driver said he always went to the rural church every Sunday morning he had been called into town and hadn't been able to attend.

On his return trip, he had been looking at the cars parked by the church "to see who was there" and had let his own car wander onto the wrong side of the curve.

I'll pay for everything. It was my fault," he said.

So, except for the accident, everything worked out as it should have, considering the scene and the day. But unless you're safe in church, better pay attention on the highway on Sunday and every day.

Stores To Close On Wednesday Nights For Balance Of Season

During the summer months Klemme stores have been open two nights each week, on Wednesday and Saturday. This week is the last Wednesday open night. From now on the stores will be open one night ech week, on Saturday night.

SCHOOLS OPEN -- TAKE IT EASY!

Tiny Tots leaving their mother's hands for the first time and older children still filled with the casual play spirit of vacation start their daily trudge to school again this month. This reminder was issued by R. J. Allison, Executive Vice President of the Motor Club of Iowa.

Emblazoned in the mind and heart of every driver should be the words, "School's Open - Take It Easy." Though police officers and School Safety Patrol members will be on duty at many corners to help protect children, it is the responsibility of the driver to treat the appearance of every child as a "human caution sign."

Take it easy, Brother Driver, when anywhere near a school this month and then keep up that practice for the balance of the year so that child traffic tragedies are avoided.

Pink And Blue Shower Held On Mrs. Harlan Nuehring

Mrs. Fred Nuehring entertained a number of ladies at a pink and blue shower at her home Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Harlan Nuehring. Games were played after which the hostess served nice refreshments. Mrs. Harlan Nuehring was presented with many nice gifts.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

And here's why 60 miles an hour is fast driving at night. Average good headlights show you the highway ahead for about 250 feet. But at 60 miles an hour, your stopping distance—from the moment you first sight danger—is 331 feet.

So if you are driving 60 at night, if you have good headlights, if you have good brakes, if your reactions are quick and your attension keen and if you hit the brakes the moment your lights first pick out danger on the highway—you're still going to plow 81 feet beyond that danger spot, or into it, before you can stop.

Half of all fatal accidents occur at night though only one-third of the total traffic moves at nights. Slow down at night. Drive Right.

It Supplies Late Fall And Early Spring Feed

For late fall and early spring pasture, rye rates with the best, says Ralph Krenzin, extension agronomist at Iowa State College.

Rye that's seeded in early September will make a high-yielding, high-protein pasture for livestock late this fall and early next spring. It not only stretches out the pasture season, but it's a labor saving way of feeding livestock.

The Balbo variety of rye is outstanding in production and quality of feed and has less effect than common varieties in causing off flavors and odors in milk if cows are pastured on it. Tests have shown that it contains nearly 30 percent protein when it's young, and it usually comes on a little earlier than most varieties.

Seeding Rate

The winter hardiness of Balbo rye, however, is about the same as that of winter wheat, which means it may not be satisfactory in all parts of the state, Krenzin says.

Rosen, Imperial and most of the other common varieties of rye are suited to Iowa growing conditions. Recommended seeding rates are from 1½ to 2 bushels per acre.

Pushes Milk Yield

Robert Fincham, extension dairy man at the college, says that rye is an excellent source of supplemental pasture for cows. He puts it in the same class as new legume seedings for fall and spring pasture. Rye pushes milk production late in the fall and starts it early in the spring. It's important that milk cows be taken off the rye 2 to 3 hours before milking to keep the milk from having unpleasant odors.

Rye pasture has a lot of advantages for hogs too, William Zmolek, extension animal husbandry specialist, points out. Fields that are blanketed with green rye in the spring are excellent for new pigs. Rye furnishes a clean pasture and will save feeding hogs some of the protein supplement that normally makes up the ration.

Very Appropriate!

After the wedding ceremony of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Jacobs at the Evangelical Church at Cedar Falls, guests retired to the church parlors to congratulate the newlyweds. Along the side of the dining room were Sunday School rooms above which were signs designating the several class rooms. It so happened that directly above where Dean and his bride, Bonnie, were standing appeared the sign: "Beginners."

"BOOTS" EARLY FOUND IN HOUSE DEAD AFTER DOING CHORES

Funeral Services Being Held Today For Victim Of Heart Attack

Alex "Boots" Early died early Sunday evening after doing chores when he came to the house to rest on the porch. His wife and daughter noticed that he was ill and called the doctor immediately, but he passed away before medical aid could reach him. His death was caused by a heart attack.

Mr. Early had appeared to be in good health and he and his family had been away for the day. He was in the best of spirits and was his usual jolly self and happy.

Funeral services are being held this Wednesday afternoon from the farm home south and east of Klemme and at the Klemme Methodist Church at 2 o'clock, with the Rev. E. M. Egeland conducting. Burial will be in the Ell Township Cemetery near Klemme.

Obituary

Alex Milton Early, son of Silas and Emma (McCarthy) Early, was born on March 22, 1898 at Hannibal, Missouri. During his young manhood he came to Belmond and lived around there and at Goodell.

He was united in marriage to Miss Sylvia Larson on February 20, 1930 and to this union one daughter, Norma Lucille, was born.

Mr. and Mrs. Early farmed near Goodell for 9 years and then moved to a farm east of Klemme where they have lived since.

Mr. Early was preceded in death by his parents and one brother. Surviving are his wife and daughter; two sisters: Fern, Mrs. Wallie Moline of Clare, Iowa, and Annie, Mrs. Lee Powell of Lehigh, Iowa; and two brothers; Robert and Everett of Wapato, Washington, as well as many other distant relatives and a host of friends in this community.

DON'T FEED DAIRY COWS SILAGE WITH DDT IN IT

Farmers who will be putting up silage this fall are warned against improper use of that silage if it contains DDT.

Earle Raun, Iowa State College extension entomologist, says silage from DDT-sprayed corn shouldn't be used for dairy cows under any condition. If corn was sprayed for corn borers the DDT will remain on parts of the foliage and be eaten by cows. Chemical tests have shown that DDT can pass into the milk and result in harmful effects to humans who drink it.

Thats why the Food and Drug Administration makes it illegal to sell any dairy products that contain DDT, Raun says.

Silage with DDT is safe for fattening livestock, but it must be taken out of their ration 30 days before marketing. Raun explains that DDT stores up in animal fat. After DDT-contaminated silage has been taken away from fattening stock for a month, the chemical that was stored in the fat has been disposed of. Then the meat is safe to eat.

Schoenwetter On Furlough

Homer Schoenwetter, who was called by the War Department to report at Warren Air Force Base at Cheyenne, Wyoming 2 weeks ago for active duty, received a 4-months furlough to harvest his crops and close up his farm work. Schoenwetter was a Master Sergeant in the Air Forces during World War II. He is now at home getting ready to report back to services at the termination of his furlough.

Secret ECA Session

AS CONGRESSIONAL leaders gathered in his office to discuss the President's request for an additional $4-billion to arm our allies, Mr. Truman opened the meeting by urging everyone to "speak freely and give me your opinions." He got his wish.

There were two verbal explosions at the secret session, one from Democratic Sen. Tom Connally of Texas, who demanded that some of the $4-billion be diverted from ECA spending; another from GOP congressman Dewey Short of Missouri, who objected to bypassing congressional committees.

"Are all these millions for economic (ECA) aid necessary at a time like this?" demanded Connally, pointing out that if the U.S.A. must tighten its belt economically for war, our European friends should expect less economic help from us. "Why can't some of it be used for military aid?" the Texas senator asked.

"We can't cut off food to those unfortunate people," explained Secretary of State Acheson, who attended the meeting. He added that this was more important than sending arms—certainly more important in keeping the friendship of western Europe.

"Yes, but we don't have to feed them for five years," boiled the acid-tongued Texan. "Some of our own people need feeding. Besides, not all this ECA money goes for food. Some of it is spent for such things as hydroelectric projects in Europe."

Acheson agreed, but reminded Connally that western Europeans need electric power not only for peace, but to manufacture arms for use against aggressors.

"It takes two or three years to build a dam and the other facilities needed to produce electric power," shot back Texas Tom, in no mood to be argued down. "We are dealing with a current emergency—the problem of providing military aid now. If an amendment is offered to use some of this ECA money for arms, I'll vote for it."

Missourians Differ

Congressman Short, the only house Republican from Truman's home state—therefore an object of special disdain at the White House—complained about the strategy of bypassing the foreign affairs and armed services committees by sending the $4-billion measure directly to the senate and house appropriations committees.

The time you will save will not be worth the bad feeling you will create in congress," protested Short. "If you went through the regular procedure of getting authorizations from the foreign affairs and armed services committees, you could still get this bill to the floor in a day.

"A lot of my colleagues will want to know what type of weapons we are sending to Europe—what countries are getting how much—and if the shipments can be made without weakening ourselves. But this information will be denied us.

"As one humble and insignificant member of congress," the Missourian continued, "I can't say that we should give unanimous approval to this unconstitutional procedure."

"Oh, you're trying to make an issue out of nothing," snapped the President.

"No, I'm not," retorted his fellow Missourian. "There's a proper and an improper way to handle these matters."

Finally, house GOP leader Joe Martin intervened in favor of the president.

Wiretapping Probe

Betting odds on Capitol Hill are that the federal grand jury now probing police-state methods and the wiretapping inspired by Senator Brewster of Maine will end in a whitewash.

Despite the efforts of conscientious James McInerny, chief of the justice department's criminal division, alibis are arranged to get Senator Brewster and his friends, Pan American Airways, off the hot spot.

In the first place, the justice department held the wiretapping report for almost a year and only fished it out of the files after the facts had been exposed in the press. As a result, the statute of limitations is about to expire, and but one scant week remains—seven days from today—in which the grand jury can act.

Feared for His Life

Meanwhile Senator Brewster's story is that his life was in danger and he called in the Washington police. While they may have tapped some wires in protecting him, he had no knowledge of what they were doing and received no information from them

Significantly, other policemen who tapped Howard Hughes' wire under Lieutenant Shimon's direction had instructions to listen especially for conversations pertaining to the airplane industry.

HOARDING HYSTERIA

U.S. Has Greatest Food Supply of Any Country in World Today

A Michigan farmer drove up to his grocery store with 250 pounds sugar in the back seat of his automobile. He told the merchant he purchased the sugar before World War II and wanted to exchange it a fresh supply. The merchant told him, not too politely, where to go. That, perhaps, was an unusual incident, but throughout the nation greedy have been rushing to purchase large supplies of sugar, ny-, cigarettes, liquor, sheets and even automobiles and household ap-nces In some instances the e buying has reached almost terical proportions.

he average citizen, who remem-s the shortage of World War II, ot entirely to blame. Inclined believe the hints and rumors always prevail in time of na-al emergencies, the consumer been listening and following nudging of many retailers and nufacturers that there will be re shortages.

one southern town, for instance, oe store called its regular custo-rs and told them to come in and two or three pairs of shoes be-leather became scarce.

rehouses Overflowing

ne customer replied he had need only one pair of shoes, a steel-pair with which to plant a swift to the merchant's posterior.

For every one of those per-ons who are hoarding, how-ver, there are hundreds who sten to the voice of the govern-ent proclaiming there will be o shortages. And for every erchant that urges scare buy-g, there are hundreds who ave advertised in newspapers elling consumers their stocks re adequate.

ome stores are offering large ks with the word "hoarder" in ge letters to their customers o they suspect of buying more n their immediate needs. Many ers are refusing to sell in large ntities.

ll this excess buying and short-hysteria is about the silliest g that has overtaken the Ameri-public since the wave of gold-gulping by college boys a nber of years ago.

ood, for instance, is overflowing ernment warehouses. The de-tment of agriculture has so ch wheat, corn, eggs, milk, but-and other farm commodities hand it would like to give them y. The government actually sn't have room to store all of surplus stocks. On top of this, n crops are expected to be near ord peaks this year and meat duction will top last year.

hile the scare buying and hoard-appears ridiculous, it has a ous and almost tragic angle. American's are undermining r own economy, forcing prices ard, and thus presenting the sibility of defeat from within. mericans are remembering 1942 trying to put the same coat of umstances on 1950. It will not however.

In 1942 this country took up itself to feed most of the orld, while today we have only urselves to feed. Barring the nd of buying that brings on ntrols there will be enough everything for every Ameri-n.

n 1942 the United States had to d war plants. Today they are ting to be reopened and retooled. uring the last war our supply s reached in every direction, nding thousands of miles over oceans of the world. Today they tch across the Pacific ocean re there are no submarines to der shipment.

his country has stockpiles of strategic materials such as lead, bauxite, mica and raw rubber. We have numerous government owned synthetic rubber plants that can more than fill our needs.

Farm Production High

Steel production is greater now than at any time during the war and the petroleum industry has increased production far beyond the peak World War II output.

The farmers of the nation more than anyone else realize how silly it is to hoard. Here are some of the reasons:

Fats and Oils — Stocks are ample because of our near record supplies of cotton seed, soybeans and lard.

Meat—We have over 80 million head of cattle, over 60 million hogs, and the annual output of meat is rising steadily.

Milk—Production will reach a new all-time high this year.

Wheat—We have on hand right now a surplus of nearly 500,000,000 bushels—a half year's supply—left over from last year's crop.

Corn—We have a surplus supply of nearly a billion bushels —half again as much as in 1941.

These supplies could be doubled if necessary, because:

1. Tractors have more than doubled on our farms since 1941, with over 3½ million of them multiplying farm production today.

2. Animals are bred to far better production: a dairy cow now gives one-fifth more milk than one did 25 years ago; a hen lays 43 more eggs per year than one did 15 years ago.

3. Chemical fertilizers have more than doubled in farm use since 1941, greatly increasing crop yields.

4. Over two million trucks, and nearly 6 million automobiles—practically one to each farm—are speeding all farm work.

5. Electrification has spread to over 4 out of 5 farms, vastly increasing use of power equipment. In 1941, only about one-third of our farms were electrified.

Sugar Stocks Adequate

The American people do not like rationing and price controls because it smacks of regimentation and dictatorship, but continued scare buying and hoarding will bring it about quicker than anything except total war.

Sugar buying is perhaps the silliest of all hoarding. Americans generally don't seem to think so.

The agriculture department reports the nation's primary distributors sold 37 per cent more sugar during the first three weeks of July than in the corresponding period a year ago. A total of 880,695 tons were distributed between July 1 and July 22, compared with 554,309 in the like period last year.

What makes this ridiculous is the fact the government has made arrangements to purchase Cuba's entire reserve stocks of sugar, totaling some 600,000 tons. This is on top of the largest stock of sugar this country has ever held.

The total available for consumption in 1950 is 8,450,000 tons, compared with the peak consumption of 7,500,000 tons of last year.

Sour Note for Sugar Hoarders

A Washington, D. C., grocer recently stacked sugar outside his re and put up a sign reading, "Special, Five Pounds Sugar, 98c." Lines formed, he said, and he sold about 800 pounds in four urs.

Grocers across the street continued selling sugar at five pounds 59c and had no rush.

"I just wanted to see the reaction," the grocer said. "I wanted prove that the price doesn't mean a thing. If they want it they y it."

MIRROR Of Your MIND ■ ■ ■ Divorce Symptom Of Deeper Failure

By Lawrence Gould

Is divorce a "national menace"?

Answer: Not in itself, but it is a symptom of a very grave one—the failure of modern marriage to provide the happiness that men and women expect from it. For unhappy people, divorced or not, cannot be good citizens or neighbors. Neither exhortations nor reproaches will be lastingly effective; we must train young people to adjust themselves to and one another in a world in which the roles of husband and wife are every day becoming more different from what they were, even a generation ago. Meanwhile, let's be patient with them.

Should a baby suck his fingers?

Answer: He will do so anyhow, and it is a necessary stage in his development, writes child psychologist Willie Hoffer. There is reason to believe that the dual sensation (in his mouth and in his fingers) helps a baby realize for the first time that he has a body through which he can act to satisfy his wishes. The distinction between himself and his body is the starting point of recognizing the difference between himself as an individual and the world outside, of which it takes time for him to become clearly conscious.

Are most people afraid of themselves?

Answer: Yes, although they often do not realize it. For while we attribute most of them to sources outside us, all of our neurotic phobias and anxieties are really different aspects of our fear of our own primitive impulses, or the punishment we believe we shall suffer if we give way to them. It isn't high places, for example, that some of us are afraid of: it is (or may be) our natural urge to raise ourselves above our neighbors, along with the threat that if we do so, our pride will turn out to "go before a fall."

KEEPING HEALTHY

Treating the Peptic Ulcer Patient

By Dr. James W. Barton

SEVERAL YEARS AGO a young man who had been treated for ulcer of the stomach met his physician on the street and the physician complimented him on his appearance. The patient admitted that he looked good but stated that for months he had been unable to eat solid food.

"I drink several quarts of milk a day and for solids, I drink eggnogs, using syphon soda instead of milk."

The physician advised him to return to his present physician because he should be able to eat solid food now that his ulcer was healed. An X-ray test using barium sulphate was made which showed that while the ulcer had healed, it had left a large amount of scar tissue, which tissue was blocking the passage from the stomach to intestine so that instead of having an inch or more passage, the scar tissue had reduced it to the size of a lead pencil so that only fluids could pass from stomach to small intestine where, of course, most of digestion takes place.

The milk and eggs accounted for his gain in weight and good appearance. Although the ulcer was healed, by diet and medical treatment, this "scar" obstruction made it necessary for a passage to be made from stomach to small intestine.

I am writing the above because some ulcer patients are undecided as to whether to have an operation or undergo medical treatment. The fact is that the majority of these patients are treated by diet and alkalies and recover.

Some years ago I quoted Dr. Joseph Daly, Toronto, in the Canadian medical association journal in which he stated that it is now admitted that no one treatment is suitable for all peptic ulcers (ulcer of stomach or small intestine). "The physician no longer aims to treat the ulcer but to direct the management of the patient who has the tendency to ulcer."

Ulcer patients have a tendency to worry and the symptoms disappear when there is a prolonged period of relief from the wear and tear of life. A return to usual work, worry or mistakes in diet brings on a return of ulcer symptoms.

IT'S THE CARCASS THAT COUNTS—Although it was placed 10th when judged alive, a steer exhibited at the Upper Mid West Fat Steer show held in conjunction with the Mower County fair at Austin, later placed 3rd in carcass competition. The steer was shown by Addis Greiman and Emory Weaver, Garner. Mr. and Mrs. Weaver are pictured above with the carcass. The Greiman and Weaver steer was the only one among the 100 steers in competition to place in the top 10 when judged both alive and in the carcass.

Live contest winners from North Iowa included Art Pringnitz, Kanawha, 2nd; H. W. Marquardt, Sheffield, 5th; Loyd Larson, Rudd, 8th, and Donald Justice, Ringstead, 9th. Other carcass contest winners from the area included E. C. Buntenbach, Garner, 4th; Paul Wearda, 7th, and Ronald Neilsen, Ringstead, 10th.

Top carcass steer of the show was owned by Leo Killion, Easton, Minn. It weighed 1,030 pounds and dressed out 66 percent. The Greiman and Weaver steer weighed 1,065 pounds and yielded 67 per cent. It was sold for $34.20 a cwt. In addition it was awarded a $10.00 prize for live placing and a $90 prize for its carcass placing.

The 1st prize live steer, an Angus owned by Leary Brothers, Caledonia, Minn., did not place among the top 20 in carcass competition. It weighed 1,130 pounds and yielded slightly more than 67 per cent of that weight in salable carcass.

FARM BUREAU RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE MET

Hancock County Farm Bureau Resolutions Committee met on Friday evening and made plans for the all important annual meetings of each township in the county.

Clark Lackore, chairman, presided and told the committee "It is our responsibility as the county resolutions committee, to present the resolutions at each township meetings and to make every effort to get a good cross section of the thinking of the largest number of farmers possible."

"We must demonstrate to the general public," continued Mr. Lackore, "that the policies of the Farm Bureau represent the opinions of the majority of its members in the state."

This year a copy of the proposed resolutions of local, state and national issues which have been prepared by the Hancock County committee will be mailed out to each member prior to the township meetings and each member is asked to go over the issues, do a lot of thinking about the several topics, and then take them to their respective township annual meeting and register their opinions regarding these issues.

A schedule was made whereby a member of the county resolutions committee and one person of the office personnel will be at each township meeting in the county.

Those attending the meeting were: Clark Lackore, chairman; Clarence Bird, Bingham township; Jerry Psotka, Liberty twp.; Mrs. Kenneth Olson, Ellington twp.; Sanford Rogeness, Crystal twp.; Albert Claude, Concord twp; Paul G. Shurts, County Fieldman and Paul Henderson, county extension director.

PLAIN CATTLE BEST FOR BEGINNING FEEDER

Iowa farmers who plan to feed cattle for the first time this fall are advised by Rex Beresford, Iowa State College extension beef cattle specialist, to "cut their teeth" on some plain cattle before trying any of the fancy kinds.

He suggests trying 700 to 850-pound steers or 600 to 750-pound heifers. Even bigger, rough, plain steers will do. All of these can be made to fit the particular feed supply and the desired marketing date.

Color and shape are not very important, but the purchase price is, warns Beresford. It's a good idea to talk the whole thing over with a reliable commission man or feeder dealer and let him do the buying. They can offer the new cattle feeder the experience he lacks, and that's important when buying feeder cattle.

The efficient meat producers are usually cattle with plenty of middle and bone. With a short supply of grain feeds Beresford suggests feeding them roughage during the first part of the feeding period for cheap gains. Finish out with 18 to 25 bushels of corn. These cattle usually should be sold by May 10th.

LOCATE PUMP IN PIT, PUMPHOUSE OR IN THE BASEMENT

There are several factors to consider in deciding whether to locate a pump in a pumphouse or in a pit at the well, says Erwin Johnson, Iowa State College agricultural engineer.

If the pump can't be located in a basement, it's necessary to have an insulated and heated pumphouse or a well pit to protect the pump and pipes from freezing.

Pits with the pump below the frostline should be constructed so surface water or seepage can't enter the pit. A drain tile is important in carrying out water that leaks past pump packing glands. The pump should be mounted on a raised concrete platform and have a sealed casing to prevent pollution of well water in case the pit fills with water.

Pumphouses are recommended by the Iowa Department of Health. If this type of pump protection is used it should be built with good drainage and ventilation facilities. Insulation will be needed to reduce the possibilities of freezing, and even with insulation additional heat may be needed, Johnson says. For this purpose, he recommends electric heaters thermostatically controlled, because of their simplicity and dependability.

COMMISSION SET PHEASANT SEASON REGULATIONS

Des Moines—The Iowa Conservation commission Monday set a 25-day pheasant season in 70 counties and a 10-day season in 13 counties. The season will open November 11 both the long and short zones.

The long zone season is the same as last year but the short zone season is increased from 7 days to 10. Bag limit will be 3 male birds per day. The posession limit will be 3 male birds. This is an increase of 1 bird in the bag but a cut of 1 bird in the possession limit. Taking of pheasant hens is forbidden.

The quail season will be the same as last year, beginning November 1, with bag and possession limits unchanged. Quail counties also are the same as a year ago.

There will be pheasant hunting in all of Iowa's counties except 16.

Daily shooting hours for the pheasants will be 12 noon to 4:30 p. m. Shooting hours for quail will be 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

The pheasant season in the long zone counties will end at 4:30 p. m. Dec. 5. In the short zone counties it will end at 4:30 p. m. Nov. 20th.

The commission said the annual game census indicates the heaviest pheasant population is in the northern 3 tiers of counties extending from the west border eastward two-thirds of the way across the state. In general the number of pheasants is up over a year ago. The birds appear to have filled out the old Iowa pheasant range area where their populations had been down in recent years.

The overall number of quail is substantially unchanged from last year, the commission said, with indications that the center of their population has drifted southeastward into the old quail range.

USE COLOR ON RAMS TO KEEP BREEDING RECORD

Accurate breeding accounts can be kept on sheep with the aid of some old crankcase oil and a good coloring agent.

Mark the ram between the front legs each day with this oil mixed with lamp black or venetian red. Then he'll mark all the ewes that he breeds. After 16 days changes the color of the marking, says C. W. McDonald, extension sheep specialist at Iowa State College. If two different colors are found on ewes it will mean that they came in heat again.

Paint also will tell when the first ewes are bred. If more than one ram is used, a different color on each will show up a non-breeding ram before too late in the season McDonald points out.

A vigorous ram from 1 to 4 years old can serve 35 to 40 ewes if he's left with them day and night. That figure can be upped to 60 ewes if farmers pen rams up in the daytime. Ram lambs will handle 20 ewes apiece if rams are well grown and used only at night.

Sluggish old rams can sometimes be pepped up if they are sheared before breeding time, McDonald says. Keep feeding the ram 1 or 2 pounds of whole oats and some good legume hay if he's penned up during the day. The sheep specialist suggests that flock owners turn rams out on pasture instead of confining them to a small pen.

WILD GOOSE HATCHES HER BROOD AT BLUMER FARM

For the past two years Emil Blumer has seen a wild goose on his farm occasionally.

During harvest time a wild goose flew out of the grain field and when Emil investigated, he found that she had a nest in the field. Emil cut the grain around the nest, leaving plenty for the goose so as not to disturb the nest.

The other day Emil thought about the goose and peeked into her nest and there were 8 or 9 little geese scampering around and trying to hide in the oats which had been left standing.

This is quite unusual for a wild goose, which Emil thinks is a Canadian honker, to build a nest and rear a flock, in this part of Iowa. Where "papa goose" hangs out is still a mystery.

GOOD CITIZEN

Free Schools Can Safeguard Democracy by Teaching Truth

This is the eighth of a series of 10 articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by the American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

The seventh promise of a good citizen: I will support our system of free public education by doing everything I can to improve the schools in my own community.

Many "isms" and ideologies are being peddled and sold around the world today.

Most of them dismiss, ignore and brush lightly aside the inalienable rights of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness.

Isn't it fortunate that we have at hand a system of education which can give to our boys and girls the knowledge and ability to separate the true from the half true—to look "isms" straight in the eye?

The coming generation, with minds and hearts reinforced with such knowledge, is more powerful than an army.

Our public school, our private schools and our schools conducted under religious auspices all must provide the climate and the soil for the roots and the fruits of freedom.

So, good citizen, keep our system of education strong.

THE SCHOOLS are yours. You pay for them. There is much that you can do to improve them, and the need is urgent.

Teachers enjoy—or ought to enjoy—freedom from social and political pressures; freedom to seek the eternal truths and to present these truths in a way that will stimulate young minds to look for truth and be able to recognize it when they find it.

Teachers should be proud of their profession. They deserve the friendliness, sociability and respect accorded to doctors, lawyers and members of other professions.

Teachers should be able to live their private lives as any other self-respecting citizen lives his—neither playing "Mrs. Grundy" to the community nor being dictated to by the social arbiters of the community, whoever they may be.

Help to make your schools a force for national unity by protecting our children from bigotry and prejudice.

It has been said, "America fears no enemy but ignorance."

The generation which did not fight the war is trying to understand what happened, why it happened, and what can be done to straighten out the world.

Help it to find out through even better, stronger, freer schools which bring to it the distilled truth wrested from the experience of all recorded time; which encourage the search for truth; and which foster the undeveloped talents which are America's greatest source of wealth.

MARK TWAIN, referring to a foreign dispatch, once said . . . "the vast expense of maintaining the army has made it necessary to retrench, and so the government had decided that to support the army it would be necessary to withdraw the appropriation from the public schools . . .

"It is curious to reflect how history repeats itself the world over. Why, I remember the same thing was done when I was a boy on the Mississippi river. There was a proposition in a township there to discontinue public schools because they were too expensive. An old farmer spoke up, and said if they stopped the schools they would not save anything, because every time a school was closed a jail had to be built.

"It's like feeding a dog on his own tail. He'll never get fat. I believe it is better to support schools than jails . . ."

DETECTIVE PETERS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

ORION DIDN'T look like a detective. He realized this for a fact when the girl with the chestnut brown hair came up and spoke to him.

"You're Orion Peters, aren't you? Mrs. Keith told me. I'm June Ingalls. It's going to be a gorgeous wedding, don't you think? Have you seen the swimming pool yet?"

3-Minute Fiction

Orion knew at once because of her easy informality she had mistaken him for one of the guests. And suddenly he decided to go on with the game.

"Hello," he said cheerfully. "It's nice to see you again. No, I haven't seen the pool. Is it new? Shall we go look at it together?"

They went and looked at it. In fact they swam in it.

They stayed near the pool for almost two hours. At the end of that time Orion came to two decisions. First, he decided that the girl was the loveliest, most beautiful creature he'd ever known. Second, he decided he was a fool. At first this business of pretending to be a guest smacked of a lark. Now it was different. He was falling in love.

He went back to his room and changed into his tux. He'd have to go down and keep his eyes on things and avoid June Ingalls, if he could.

He took up a station within observation distance of the table where the gifts were placed and acted as much like a guest as he knew how. June was not among the crowd that milled around the living room. He was convincing himself that he was glad of this, when a feminine voice behind him said:

"Why, Mr. Peters, you're standing here like a statue. I mean, shouldn't we dance, or something?"

"I'm dreadfully sorry," he said. "I hurt my ankle in the pool this afternoon. I'm afraid dancing's out, for me."

"Oh, how wretched! Is there anything I can do? I mean, oughtn't you to see a doctor, or something?"

JUST THEN Orion's desperate glance fell on the table where lay the gifts. There was a man standing at one end talking to a woman. The woman had a fan, which she maneuvered skillfully. Behind its ruffled folds the man to whom she was talking suddenly darted out a hand, scooped up something on the table, and thrust it beneath the tails of his coat.

Orion came back to earth with a jolt. He started toward the man, who was moving through the crowd toward the terrace door. He caught up with the fellow just as they got outside and fell into step beside him.

"All right," said Orion when they reached the end of the terrace. "Take it easy and you won't get hurt. You're under arrest."

The man looked at him quickly. Orion didn't have time to lift his arms in defense. Something struck him a terrible blow on the head. He swayed, caught himself, glimpsed the thief racing down the steps.

Orion anticipated the direction of the man he was chasing by leaping the fish pond and making a flying tackle at the fellow's legs. They went down in a heap.

When he opened his eyes there was a crowd of people around. He heard snatches of conversation and guessed that the thief had been captured and everybody thought that he, Orion, was quite a hero. Then he knew that his head was pillowed on something soft. He saw a face bending over him.

"Well, that settles it, I guess," he grinned. "Now you know. But I'm not really a detective. I go to law school nights and detect days and week-ends."

"It doesn't make a particle of difference," June told him. "I'm Mrs. Keith's secretary. She asked me to see that you were looked out for. Can I help it if you thought I was a guest? And now that you know the truth, I suppose you don't like me any more?"

"Suppose," said Orion, "you let me ask a question."

She agreed and he asked it and she blushed as she said, "yes."

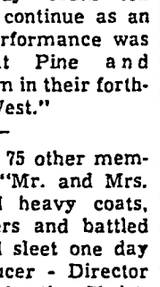
Beggar Has New Angle – Can You Spare a Teddy Bear?

By BILLY ROSE

There's a beggar in New York with a new sales approach: "Can you please, Mister, spare the price of a teddy bear for my sick little daughter?"

It so happens that this panhandler hasn't got a sick little daughter, but that doesn't mean you have to turn him down if you meet up with him. His story is hearts-and-flowers stuff, and I'll tell it to you as it was told to me the other night by Charlie Washburn, the Broadway press agent . . . .

"A few days before Easter," said Charlie, "I was standing in front of a toy shop on Fifth Avenue when a seedy-looking guy tapped me on the arm and asked if I could spare the price of a teddy bear. When I told him to quit his kidding, he explained he wanted it for his sick little girl, and that if I didn't think he was on the up-and-up he'd write his name and address on a piece of paper and I could have it delivered.



Billy Rose

"Well, filled with the old Easter spirit I walked into the shop and picked out a five-dollar bear, but when I handed the slip to the girl who waited on me she gave me a funny look and said I was the third person that afternoon who'd ordered one sent to that address.

* * *

"IT SMELLED LIKE a good human interest yarn, and so I had her wrap up the toy and set out to deliver it myself. It was a flat in a walk-up tenement in the 50's near Tenth Avenue, and the door was opened by a woman who looked as if she could use a little sleep.

"'What you got there,' she said, 'another teddy bear?'

"'How'd you know?' I asked.

"'I've been getting two or three every afternoon for the last month,' she said. 'Where'd you run into Tim?'

"Tim, it turned out, was her husband and he had been missing for several weeks. Things hadn't been going well with them for quite some time, and when his unemployment insurance ran out last March the going got real tough. Then, to make things still worse, their three-year-old daughter, Peggy, had taken sick and the doctors at the clinic couldn't seem to do much for her.

"THE TEDDY BEAR angle had come about this way: Shortly after Peggy became ill, she asked for a teddy bear and kept talking about it all the time. Tim said he thought it would do her more good than all the medicine, but what with the room rent and food, they just couldn't afford to buy one. A month ago he walked out of the house, and ever since teddy bears had been arriving at the rate of two or three a day.

" 'With all those toys,' I said to the woman, 'your daughter must be a happy little girl.'

" 'They're too late to do any good,' she said. 'Peggy died two days before her father left. And the teddy bears probably wouldn't have helped anyhow — she had leukemia.'

"When I told her I couldn't understand why a man was mooching teddy bears for a dead child, the woman said she was afraid Tim had cracked up. He was never one to accept reality anyhow, and in his fuzzy condition he probably still thought the kid was alive.

" 'Well, then,' I said, 'what have you been doing with all the teddy bears?'

"The woman told me she had gotten to know the doctors at the clinic pretty well, and when her husband disappeared they had found her a job at the hospital as cleaning woman.

" 'There are a lot of kids in the charity ward where I work,' she said, 'and they get a big kick out of those teddy bears.' "

Man of Power

Lesson for September 3, 1950

"I KNEW him when—" can be a deadly weapon It has knocked down many a good man Some one is being considered for a job, and he is just about to be accepted, when somebody sounds off with "I knew him when—."

Dr. Foreman

"I knew him when he was a boy and he was a neighborhood nuisance. I knew him when he used to live here, and his family were no-account. I knew him when he was in school and he never had high grades. I knew him before he amounted to anything, so he can't amount to anything now.

A Case Against Peter

IT IS A GOOD thing the Christian church never took that attitude about the Apostles, and a very good thing they didn't take that line with Peter. It is true that he did not come out of the top drawer. It is quite true that when he was young he was no prize specimen. In fact, it would not be hard to make almost as strong a case against him as against Judas, if you take Simon Peter at his low point.

"Shall we keep Peter on our list?" Suppose you had been one of the other apostles and had been asked that question the night after the crucifixion If you had not had a rather generous heart, you could easily have turned in an unfavorable report.

"Well," you might have said, "he has some good points. He is sometimes on the alert, never fails for something to say. But he doesn't always come through in a pinch. I understand the Lord took him up to the top of the mountain when he was transfigured, and what did that man do but go to sleep? Any of us would have given our right eye to have been there. But we never did get much of a story out of poor old Simon Peter. He was asleep most of the time.

"And do you remember that dinner when Mary poured all that ointment over Jesus' head? It was a beautiful thing for her to do. I mean her motive was beautiful. But Peter complained about it.

"Then there was the night—only last night, but it seems a year away—when Jesus took Simon Peter and those two others into the garden with him. All the Master wanted was company. But old Peter was asleep again in no time.

"But that's not the worst. Last night at the supper table Peter bragged about how brave he was—got out a couple of swords in fact—and he swore that even if every one else denied the Master, he wouldn't. But just before cock-crow he showed himself up for a liar and a coward. Some girl, just a girl, mind you, somebody out of the kitchen, said she knew he was a friend of Jesus And this Peter starts swearing in the ugliest kind of language that he never knew Jesus, his very best friend.

"Well, Judas hanged himself, and Peter might as well . . . . I don't see how he can possibly hold his head up again after last night."

Man of Power

NEVERTHELESS, Peter became a hero, a man of power. Look at his story in Acts 2-5 A recognized leader of the Christians, defying the very men of whom he had once been so afraid; honest, rock-ribbed, standing up for the Master when it meant risking his life to do so.

Even if you could not believe the miracle-stories which are told about him in Acts, you would have to admit that it is not every man who has miracle-stories told about him.

It is no weakling who has the reputation of being able to raise men from the dead and to kill liars with a glance of the eye.

Transforming Secret

WHAT WAS the secret of Peter's transformation from the half-braggart, half-coward he used to be, to the stalwart fearless man of power he became? The answer is in those stories in our Scripture readings from Matthew and John.

The first tells of Jesus' faith in Simon Peter. The second tells of that again, and also of Peter's response to Jesus' faith in him. It is the secret of any Christian's success in being all that God knows he can be.

Frosty Cold Foods Help Cheer Family During Hot Spell

"MOM, WHAT do you have that's really cold to eat," is the question that keeps Mother hopping during spells of hot weather. There's apparently nothing so lifting to spirits as something icy cold when the heat is at its highest.

Well, then, what do you have that's really cold? What about a chilling beverage that packs as much nourishment as it does eye and appetite appeal? Or, how about a cooling dessert like ice cream or a chilled chiffon pie that you can make while the morning is still cool?

Smart mothers will keep the fixings for cooling beverages right at hand where the family can reach them.

When you want something deliciously different in beverages, try some of these nourishing, chilled drinks. Several contain milk in one form or another, just in case the milk is difficult to get into the young folk in its pure form.

Ginger Lime Rickey
(Serves 6)
1½ cups lime juice

Nothing's cooler or easier to make when the temperature's soaring than a refreshing lime beverage. You may like a simple limeade of sugar, water and juice, with lime wedges and ice cubes, or you may prefer ginger ale with limeade for something different.

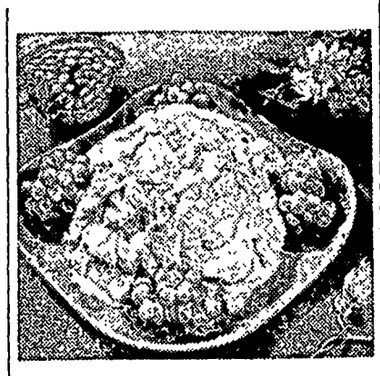
Provide dressings to serve with cold meat platters to make them more interesting. You can start with mayonnaise, and then use it as a base with any of the following: chopped, hard-cooked eggs, chives, green stuffed olives and horseradish.



Simple but pretty is this ice cream dessert that has a flavorsome grape sauce to go with it. The ice cream is scooped on a large platter and garnished with frosted grapes set on galax leaves. Dip grape clusters with egg white, then dip in granulated sugar to give them a frostlike look.

This Is a Season of Comebacks

By GRANTLAND RICE

THIS GALA SEASON of 1950, in some ways at least, is still adding to its comeback record. It began with Ben Hogan and almost registered with Citation who ran swiftly but not quite fast enough. Hogan was away 11 months and Citation 14 months.

Another arrival was Billy Southworth who had to Grantland Rice retire last summer. More than a few thought the Braves manager would never report again. He not only reported but he has his ball club in the frontline trenches with a good chance to win again. Southworth has done one of his best jobs after almost a complete collapse last summer.

The Cubs and Frank Frisch looked to be sunk again at the start of the season. Frank had been away from the game for some time when he took over the Cubs. He couldn't help them much in 1949 but he has a different club working in 1950 and he will have a better club ready for 1951.

Then there is a young fellow by the name of Johnny Mize. Johnny was on the raw edge of falling over the precipice. He was rated all-through. His own league let him go when the Yankees took a last stand. Then Georgia Johnny was sent to Kansas City. His big league days were over. But further Yankees injuries gave Johnny another chance. The famous hitter came back to life again, using a piece of ash for this purpose. In the Yankee drive recently with such stars as DiMaggio and Henrich out of action, it was Big John who resumed his old habit. He was the star hitter of the club through an important stretch.

Mize as a rule either hits a single or a home run. It has always been said that the batting eye is the last important factor to leave. First the arm or legs begin to give out. As Ty Cobb once said: "You get your first leg warning in starting. Once under way you can run practically as fast as ever. But you can't start as fast."

But with arms and legs fading away the batting eye retains its old-time glow. The good hitters keep on hitting long after the pitchers and fielders wear out. This has been one of the best of all the comeback seasons. There may be other athletes to report on before the first snow falls.

You Can't Buy Pennants

One of the major faculties in baseball's stability is the fact that no one can buy a pennant. Tom Yawkey has proved that.

The Red Sox owner has spent at least $5,000,000 in the last few years to get the best talent, but this talent has won only one pennant since 1918. That was in 1946 making it a little matter of 28 years between championships.

The wealthy Mr. Wrigley hasn't been able to buy a pennant for his Cubs since 1945. They have been settling for last place in 1948 and 1949 but should fare better this season.

The latest case is the Pirate's new ownership. They raised enough money to invest as much as $5,000,000 in new talent. They even turned loose $100,000 for an 18-year-old high-school star who has yet to prove he is worth $18. The $5,000,000 at the end of three years has left the Pirates in a desperate struggle to finish out of the cellar.

The cellar is where they'll probably finish. In manager Meyers the Pirates have one of the smartest leaders in baseball. That didn't help either. It was certainly not Meyers' fault. It wasn't the owners' fault. They spent their cash lavishly. In 1948 it began to look as if the Pirate owners were going to buy a flag. They made a strong showing. They looked so good in 1948 that many picked them to finish 1-2 in 1949. The owners spent new money for 1949—but the Pirates took a dizzy dip. They spent more money for 1950—and took an even deeper slide.

No wonder owner Frank McKinney decided to bolt the scene. When you buy a pretty fair club and put $5,000,000 extra into it and drop from the first division to last place, it is about time to retire.

Which goes to prove you can't buy a pennant.

Top Fighters

Humbert Fugazy, one of the promoters of the Ray Robinson — Charlie Fusari welterweight championship for the Damon Runyon cancer fund, ranks Robinson with the all-time greatest.

Certainly if any one man now fighting deserves this nomination it is Robinson. He is an excellent boxer and a punishing puncher. He can also handle his share of punishment.

It would be difficult to rank the greatest 10 fighters of all time. Jack Dempsey would be in such a list. So would Joe Gans. So would Jim Corbett, Gene Tunney and Joe Louis. Then there are Harry Greb, Stanley Ketchel, Benny Leonard, Jim Jeffries and Sam Langford. But what about Bob Fitzsimmons, Jack Johnson, Mickey Walker, Jack Blackburn and the original Walcott.

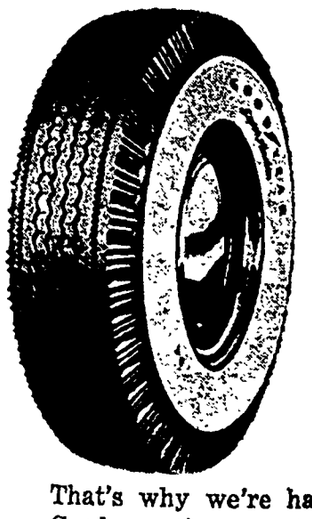
NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY THE BEST!

GOODYEAR



TIRES are the best!

In times like these, far-sighted people naturally buy the best. And when it comes to tires, they buy the best tires. That's why more car owners today are turning to Goodyear tires. That's why we're having a hard time keeping Goodyear tires in stock — despite the fact that Goodyear makes more tires than any other manufacturer in the world. Even if we are temporarily out of your tire size, it will pay you to place your order now for earliest possible delivery.

Trade new miles for old

90% of all tire trouble occurs in the last 10% of tire life. Why take chances with worn, smooth tires? We'll trade new Goodyear miles for the remaining unsafe mileage in your present tires. Get out of the "danger zone" — go Goodyear. And for safer driving, get LifeGuard Safety Tubes.

Remember, if we don't have your tire size today, it will pay you to wait for new Goodyears — the best!

LET CORN MATURE IF AT ALL POSSIBLE

But If Frost-Damaged Put It Up As Silage

Scattered reports of frost damage to corn in August already have raised the question of feed value of silage made from immature corn.

Although corn stopped by an early freeze can be used best as silage, Iowa State College extension dairyman Floyd Arnold says that corn in the milk stage has only two-thirds as much dry matter as corn with ripened kernels.

There is an even smaller amount of total digestible nutrients or net energy present because most of the starch is stored in the late stages of the maturing process. The main storage of fat also takes place in the kernels after the milk stage.

Result Of Tests

Tests made in Indiana show that an acre of corn in the milk stage on September 10th contained slightly more than 6,000 pounds of dry matter, while more than 9,400 pounds were present in an acre of mature corn on October 8th.

With this in mind, farmers whose corn hasn't been damaged by frost will want to let it mature before harvest. On the other hand, those with frost-damaged corn will probably be ahead if they put it up as silage, Arnold says.

Silage is highly palatable, can be aconomically put up at a convenient time of year and is eaten without waste. Since it is slightly laxative, silage is especially beneficial to animals during winter months, although some dry feed may be necessary in the ration to counteract the laxative effect.

Best Use Of Silage

Cattle—especially dairy cows, and sheep usually make the best use of silage as feed.

Arnold thinks livestock men who have these animals on their farms may want to look into the possibilities of temporary and trench silos if an early freeze continues to threaten.

These structures aren't too expensive to build, and they offer the farmer a chance to feed the biggest share of the proteins, minerals and starch already produced in his corn when growth stops.

CONTOUR DEMONSTRATION NEAR GOODELL

A contour demonstration will be held on the J. B. Cashman farm located at the east edge of Goodell at 1:30 P. M. Friday, September 8th.

DHIA SUPERVISORS AID IN T. B. CONTROL

Iowa's artificial breed technicians and dairy herd improvement association supervisors are going beyond the call of duty to be of real service to the dairymen in Iowa.

Robert Fincham, extension dairyman at Iowa State College, reports that technicians and supervisors are lending their assistance to the control of tuberculosis in cattle. Their part in this program is to report the code number of all tags used to identify cows along with the names and addresses of the herd owners in whose herds the tags were used. This information is reported on a form provided by the state veterinarian's office and is placed in the permanent files of the federal (Bureau of Animal Industry) veterinarian's office.

Fincham says that the information will be used to trace the origin of ear-tagged carcasses found diseased at packing plants. In this manner, the source of infection can be located and eradicated before infection spreads completely through a herd and into other herds.

Cooperation of the artificial breeding technicians and dairy herd improvement association supervisors was requested by Dr. H. U. Garrett, state veterinarian, and Dr. C. W. Brown, Pureau of Animal Industry veterinarian.

Fincham points out that this cooperative undertaking shows that the bull studs, the local cooperative breeding associations and the DHIA's are interested in developing a complete dairy herd improvement program in Iowa.

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

How bloody must a highway lesson be before it gets across to some drivers. That's a question one young patrolman would like to hear answered after being involved in the following incident recently.

He and two other patrolman worked hard and fast one afternoon clearing the wreckage of a fatal accident from a bridge. Two persons had been killed and there was nothing at all pleasant about the work txcept the help and cooperation received from many passing motorists.

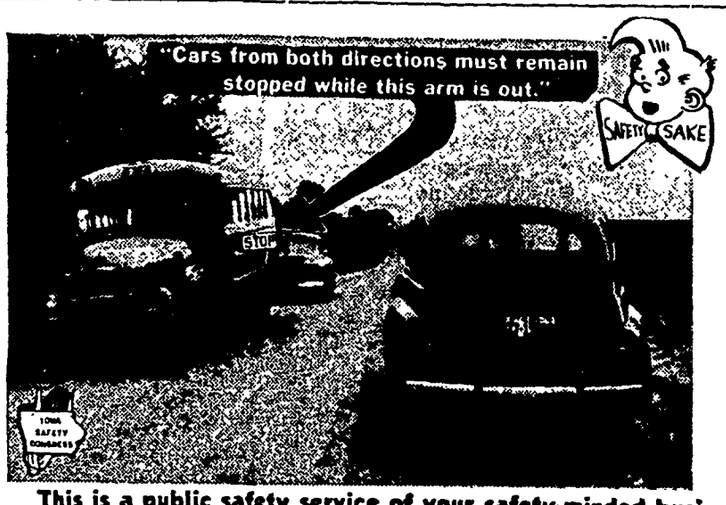
When the job was finally finished, the patrolmen who tells this story was getting into his car when he noticed that the man stepping into the car ahead was one of those who had stopped to help.

For the next seven miles, the patrolman followed this car. In a short time, the pace was 70 miles an hour. Then came two improper passes on the yellow line. In the restricted speed zone of the next town, the car was traveling 50 miles an hour when the patrolman made the stop.

The driver was surprised but apparently delighted to see the officer again. He began to talk excitedly about the accident back on the bridge. "Wasn't that a terrible thing," he said. "I was about the first one there. I helped pick up that bloody mess. I took one of hem to the doctor."

Then the patrolman handed him a summons. The driver was surprised and insulted. He waved the ticket under the patrolman's nose. "Where do you get off giving me this," he shouted, "after I stop back there to help you guys."

"I didn't try to explain it to him," the patrolman said later. I knew he had just seen the results of a bad fatal accident at first hand. Then I watched him make two improper passes at high speed. He was doing 50 in a 20-mile zone when I stopped him. Seeing blood on the highway hadn't taught him a thing. I was just too discouraged to lecture after that."



This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Protect our children. Obey the Iowa school bus stop laws. Amended by the last Iowa legislature, this is how the school bus stop law applies to you as a driver:

When meeting a school bus on which the signal warning lights are flashing, you must reduce your speed to not more than 20 miles an hour. When the school bus stops and the stop-arm is extended, you must come to a complete stop - AND REMAIN STOPPED - until the stop-arm is retracted.

When overtaking a school bus on which the signal lights are flashing, you may not pass. When the school bus stops and the stop-arm is extended, you must come to a complete stop not closer than 15 feet to the rear of the bus. And you must REMAIN STOPPED until the stop-arm is retracted and the bus resumes motion, or until signaled to proceed by the driver. Code of Iowa Section 321.372).

USE 2,4-D NOW ON WEED REGROWTH

Regrowth of perennial weeds previously sprayed or mowed can be dalt an effective blow now by 2,4-D.

E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialist at Iowa State College, says this treatment now can be used effectively on such weeds as Canada thistle, wild morning glory, perennial sow thistle, perennial peppergrass and bindweed. He recommends spraying when regrowth is about 8 inches tall or long.

The ester form of 2,4-D will give better control than the amine or sodium salt forms. Recommendations call for 1 to 1½ pounds of the active chemical per acre—the amount contained in 1 to 1½ quarts of the liquid ester 2,4-D concentrate.

For small patches of weeds, use 1 tablespoon of the ester per gallon of water thoroughly wet, but avoid wasted runoff.

An advantage of spraying weeds in the fall is pointed out by E. Sylwester. Weeds like other plants, build up root reserves for use next spring from fall growth. By stopping this supply of food reserves from building up in the roots, plants are weakened to the extent that they get a later start in the spring and produce weak plants. Some even are damaged to the extent that they winter-kill.

TRENCH SILO CAN BE BUILT QUICKLY

Its Cost Is Low And It Is Easy To Fill

For farmers who find the cost of an upright silo too high, a trench silo can be built at a small cost and in a relatively short time.

Trench silos work well for tenants who don't care to build expensive uprights on farms that they rent. These low-cost silos also can save large amounts of feed in cases of emergency when storage space is needed and the upright silo is full.

Besides easy to make, the trench silo is easy to fill, says Dale Hull, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College. No forage blower is needed if a stationary cutter is used. Wagons and dump trucks hauling away from a field chopper can drive right into the silo and unload. In addition, trench silos are wind-proof and frost-proof.

Build On High Ground

Hull stresses the need for building trench silos on high ground where they will be as dry as possible. A drain is nessary at one end of silos built on level ground if they collect water. Water that collects in the bottom of the silo can be drained out, or a barrel that's sunken in the low end of the silo can collect the water. This excess water can then be pumped out of the barrel with a cistern pump.

Repairing a trench silo each year is limited to smoothing the walls and cleaning out the drain. Farmers can lime the walls of their trench silos at a later time, if they decide to make a permanent silo.

Protect Edges

When trench silos are left unlined for a period of years, the edges must be protected against caving, Hull says. He suggests putting inposts at regular intervals and placing planks or poles along the bank edge for support.

To keep animals or persons out of danger, Hull suggests building a fence around the silo.

In rainy weather silage feeders may need the silo incline lined with planks so they can get to the silage with their wagons or carts. Some farmers get the silage out by using a manure scoop mounted on the tractor.

MAY BE PROFITABLE TO STORE SOYBEANS

Storing soybeans for sale this winter or next spring will probably be a profitable way to use farm storage space if a price slump on beans develops at harvest time, according to Iowa State College farm economist Francis Kutish.

The 1950 soybean acraege is up 28 percent from last year, and a record crop of 271 million bushels will be harvested if August prospects are realized.

This sharp increase in the size of the crop is likely to mean a market glut at harvest time, and the result may be a sizable price discount for beans sold direct from the combine, Kutich says.

Mrs. Lloyd Lau Was Hostess To Circle Meeting

Mrs. Lloyd Lau was hostess to a meeting of Circle 4 of the Klemme Methodist Church, on Thursday, with the chairman, Mrs. Harry Gibbs in charge.

Mrs. Edwin Josten gave an interesting lesson with a piano accompaniment by her daughter, Miss Marcelle Josten. Following a short business meeting a nice lunch was served by Mrs. Lau and Mrs. Ella Schneider. Cozette Lau entertained with a couple of musical selections on the piano.

SISTER OF MRS. BEN MULLINS RETURNED FROM TOUR IN DENMARK

Mrs. Harold Christensen of Eagle Grove was visting with her sister, Mrs. Ben Mullin Friday. Mrs. Christensen had her car, a Dodge, parked on Klemme's Main street and the peculiar license tag attracted a lot of attention. A Times reporter spotted the unusual license plate and which was a bit smaller than the Iowa plate and it was labeled K-110-851. The K was red on a black back-ground and the numerals were white. A "hand" (of welcome) was also a part of the design. The license plate was from Denmark and one issued to tourists.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Christensen had just returned back to the States from a six-week's trip to Denmark. They had shipped their car to Denmark so they could tour the country. They made the trip to visit Mr. Christensen's mother, and Mrs. Christensen's aunt. They toured through the greater part of Denmark. The people there were amazed at the large car, but were told by the Christensens that many U. S. cars were a lot larger than their Dodge.

Bicycles are used for transportation and there are very few small foreign make cars used because of the high priced gasoline. In one mile the Christensens counted 150 bicycles. People travel on bicycles in the Scandinavian countries like we travel with cars here. They cycle all over Denmark and even ride into neighboring countries on them, carrying equipment with them and often the entire family rides one one bicycle, in front, on the bar, the seat and the back.

Bicycles are also used for hauling light loads and some are fitted with trailers to carry extra loads. Mrs. Christensen observed a man riding a bicycle and balancing a davenport on his head, which he was delivering. She looked for a spill, but the man kept right on going!

Mrs. Christensen said food was not rationed in Denmark, although it was in Sweden. Some foods are expensive such as coffee, sugar, oleo and butter.

One day Mrs. Christensen decided to give the people a real treat: a good American pie. (Pie is unknown in the Scandinavian countries.) She could not locate a pie tin anywhere, but finally used a pyrex lid from a flat kettle, and made the pie in that! Needless to say the pie was a real treat to the Danes.

RABBIT AND SQUIRREL SEASON OPENS SEPT. 15

Hancock Entries At North Iowa Fair Did Good

Hancock County's entries in the North Iowa Fair at Mason City did a very good job, Laverne Josten exhibiting a brown swiss heifer placed 2nd in district 4-H class and 2nd in the open class.

Shirley Greiman with a purebred Angus beef heifer placed 2nd in her 4-H class, 1st in the open division and had reserve Jr. Champion with her heifer.

On Saturday, September 2nd about ten of Hancock Counties 4-H boys took part in the Beef Grading contest held at the North Iowa Fair.

MEN AT WAR

Time-Honored Foot Soldier Still Backbone of Every Nation's Army

A South Korean army band stood on the dock playing marches as the U.S. troopship pulled along side. A marine, leaning against the rail, cracked:

"Well, beat me around the ears and call me stupid! The Koreans are playing trombones. What you know about that?"

But the marine who stood beside him had a serious reply: "They got other Koreans that don't play trombones, jughead. Just see that you don't get them mixed up."

That is the American soldier—the strangest individual that ever made up an army. By all standards he should be the poorest fighting machine in the world for all of his training and equipment.. Surprisingly, he is good. Sometimes he is extremely brave, and as often as not scared about half to death.

He is inclined to manufacture a language of his own, punctuated with profanity, and direct it at every conceivable object. He hates authority and regimentation, but he obeys orders.

Backbone of an Army

At home, parents and sisters and sweethearts and wives are inclined to wrap him in a cloak of righteousness that is an illusion. On the battle front he is tough.

Since the time of ancient Egypt when that nation spread across the eastern shores of the Mediterranean and conquered all of the known world, it has been the foot soldier that has been the backbone of every army. And even today, with atomic bombs and planes and great fleets, it is still the time-honored foot soldier who fights and dies and wins wars.

During World War I American soldiers stood in the trenches that stretched across France and won the conflict. When it was over the experts said the use of the foot soldier was a thing of the past. But it took millions to win World War II.

Today it is the foot-sore GI, dirty and unshaved and weary, with the pain and reality of death reflected in sunken eyes, who is shuffling across the rice-paddies of Korea. Again they must win a war no matter how much help they get from jet fighters and great bombers.

GI Tells His View

But the story of the war in Korea and just what today's GI is like can often be told in the words of the Smiths and Jones and Ebensteiners and McClellans who are getting shot at and trying to kill as many Communists as possible.

Like the answer a marine received when he observed the terrain looked rugged from where he stood on a transport's deck: "Yeah, and you are gonna get a nice close look at that rugged terrain pretty soon and you had better damn well gather up some bunches of it, for these Joes of ours have been backing up long enough," his buddy replied.

Some of them are not men yet. Like the youngsters who solemnly assured a war correspondent, "Yes, sir, I have to shave twice a week."

He was the youth that watched 10 of his buddies stripped of their clothing and made to run over sharp stones until they dropped and were slaughtered.

How did he feel about it? "I don't know," he said, "but I was very sad and I vomited."

Then there is the cocky, confident Jones and Smiths and Johnsons. He is the kind who says, "We think we can kick the hell out of the Communists."

And there is the more serious one, who see a little beyond the present. "This is one time that we ain't just braggin.' If we don't stop the Communists here we'll be trying to stop them some day on our home ground. We don't want to have to do that. That's why we're here."

What the private and corporal says is often reflected by his officers who march and fight with him. This is what one had to say about the Korean fighting:

"I don't know where to start on this. These last three weeks have been pretty rough. We're getting help here now. That's something we sure didn't have when we started. What makes it so difficult here is that you can't tell the damn North Koreans from the South Koreans. That caused a lot of slaughter . . .

"We had a narrow escape here about two or three days ago. Lost a lot of good men. Hope we never get into a scrape like that again. Present time we're trying to regroup.

Reasons Become Clearer

"There's no question how this will come out. We'll come out on top. It's going to take a lot more—a lot more than we have over here. This affair is more than a police action. It's something—gigantic. I know it is. Been through the Pacific and part of the European campaign, but I never ran into anything like this before."

There is the funny side of every situation and some of the instances shed light upon the Korean war and the men fighting it.

A jittery engineer command post behind U.S. lines fought a five-hour battle one night but the cold light of dawn revealed that the only casualties were several dogs of unknown nationality.

"Never saw so much fire for so little," said one sleepish Major. "If we had hit a North Korean with every shot fired the war would be over."

The post had been raided the night before. That night the men fired at every moving bush. "I suppose it's funny when you look back on it, but it wasn't funny last night," one soldier said the next day.

These are the Smiths and Jones and Ebensteiners and McClellans fighting in Korea, the men and boys who will be the seasoned troops of the U.S. army of tomorrow. Their own words give a picture of themselves and the Korean war.

In their words are many truths: the fear and courage and sadness and confusion of men fighting for their lives. And there is a spark of idealism that can be found only in a democracy and among free people.

It was much the same in the last war. Then, perhaps, the reasons for the killing were more clearly drawn than at the present time, but the reasons are becoming clearer each day. The men on the battle front seem to realize it quicker than those at home and it is from them the Jones and Smiths and Ebensteiners and McClellans on the home front draw their courage. It has always been so; it will continue to be.

New GI Has No Illusion About War

The average teen aged GI is going off to war with no illusions about liking it—just a grim resolve to get it over with. From a shipping out point, comes this report:

"Their general attitude seems to be that of one who is about to get a bitter dose of medicine—'might as well get it over with because it's going to happen anyway.' They are definitely sobered. They feel that the vacation is ended and they have a job to do. The general opinion is, 'This had to come.'"

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Showdown Battle Looms in Korea; Jacob Malik Stops U. N. Action; House Votes Home-Front Controls

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

KOREA:
Showdown Near

On the fifth anniversary of the liberation of Korea from Japan, Communist and United Nations troops were involved in a series of maneuvers and probing thrusts that indicated a showdown battle was near.

In the north the Communists made their most important gains with the capture of Pohang and forcing U.S. troops to evacuate an important airfield. American and South Korean forces were in action against a Red unit west of that city.

In the west, the Communists had crossed the Naktong river at two points, north and south of Taegu. At one point 12,000 Red troops had crossed the river and counter attacking Americans attempted to throw them back with some success.

The Communists were reported to have 60,000 men massed in that area for the all-out drive to push United Nations forces from Korea.

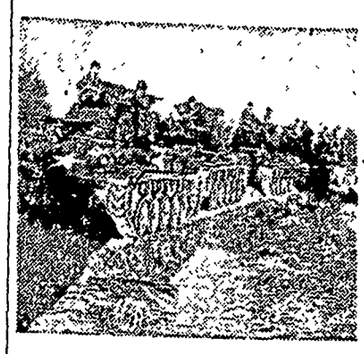
In the south, U.S. marines consolidated their positions just four miles outside Chinju and continued to mop up isolated Red groups cut off by the American drive.

Military observers reported the Communist time-table had been upset by the stubborn defense of U.S. and South Korean forces. The Reds had set August 15 as the date for final victory and their so-called "liberation" of South Korea. A final and desperate attempt to gain that victory seemed but a matter of hours.

Meanwhile, American jet fighters and bombers continued raids on North Korean installations and ground positions. One striking force dropped 625 tons of bombs in a raid on an oil refinery.

The Navy announced the first combat use of a new rocket-type missle, the Tiny Tim, a 11.75-inch armor-piercing rocket. The rocket was credited with knocking out 13 Communist locomotives and destroying a bridge.

American Armor



A sight to cheer the GI's who fought the first holding actions against the North Korean Communists was the line of medium tanks, shown as they moved up the front lines to add their weight to the battle. Such tanks are often dug in and used as pillboxes.

HOME-FRONT:
Truman Gets Power

The house voted, 383 to 12, a broad home-front mobilization bill that gave the President power to control prices and wages, ration consumer goods and impose industrial curbs to speed up the war effort. The senate also had a similar bill under consideration.

Some kind of control bill had been expected for some time, but there were several surprising aspects to the one the house voted. In the first place, the vote of 383 to 12 was startling. But even more startling was the fact the house, which usually jealously guards its authority and power, left it entirely up to the President when to invoke the price-wage-rationing and other control powers contained in the bill.

Mr. Truman insisted he was not ready for severe restrictions upon civilian economy. And although the bill gives him that power, it is not believed that such broad scale mobilization is in sight. However, the administration is reported anxious to use some of the industrial controls, particularly the power to allocate scarce materials to war industries.

If and when the President invokes controls, the bill stipulates he must peg wages at the May 24-June 25 level. For prices he would have to give only "due consideration" to the period as a base.

The bill would:

(1) Give the President authority to impose wage and price controls and rationing at any time he deems necessary.

(2) Make it a criminal offense, punishable by a $10,000 fine and a year in jail, to hoard food, clothing, automobile tires and other "necessaries."

(3) Authorize the President to exercise consumer credit controls similar to those used during World War II.

(4) Authorize the President to requisition materials and factories necessary to the defense effort.

(5) Let the President set up a system of priorities and allocations for getting strategic and critical materials to defense plants.

(6) Authorize the government to make or guarantee loans for defense purposes. The total of loans outstanding at any one time could not exceed $2 billion.

ESPIONAGE:
Suspect No. 7

Mrs. Ethel Greenglass Rosenberg, 34, mother of two children, was arrested by the F.B.I. as suspect No. 7 in the Harry Gold-Dr. Klaus Fuchs atom spy case. She was held under $100,000 bail.

Her 32-year-old husband also is under $100,000 bond. The F.B.I. said when he was arrested July 17 that he belonged to a spy ring financed by Anatoli Yakovlev, former Soviet vice consul in New York.

UNITED NATIONS:
Anger and Frustration

Delegates to the U. N. security council watched with disgust as Russia's Jacob A. Malik blocked every move of the organization to continue with its business after two weeks under his chairmanship.

Non-Communist delegates were angered and frustrated by his tactics, but were resigned to waiting it out until his chairmanship ended today, August 31 and Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain takes over.

Malik's strategy had been designed to stall any action of the organization on the Korean situation and to create as much propaganda as possible for the Communist cause. Some quarters believed that Malik scored some success along that line

He continued to drum the theme that South Korea started the war and accused the United States of using "inhuman and barbarous methods of waging war in Korea."

The western delegates hit back much more forcefully than ever before U.S. delegate Warren Austin pinned the responsibility for the North Korean invasion on the Russians—as the men behind the men behind the guns. Sir Gladwyn made biting attacks on the entire philosophy under which the Kremlin operates.

The western attack seemed to hit home. Malik seemed a little harassed at times and talked much faster and gestured more often.

Malik stated during one of the rounds that the only Russian arms possessed by the North Koreans were those "we sold to them when Soviet forces withdrew from Korea". It was the first time Malik or any other Soviet leader has admitted that North Koreans were using Soviet weapons.

The statement exposed Malik as a liar before the world because late model weapons have been captured from the Communists that were not even developed at the time the Russians were supposed to have withdrawn from North Korea. One such weapon was a late model mortar shell.

POLITICS:
An Issue Found

Four important Republican senators, members of the foreign relations committee, issued an indictment of Democratic diplomatic failures, charging the administration's policy invited Russia "to grab whatever it could in China, Korea, and Formosa."

Senators Wiley of Wisconsin, Smith of New Jersey, Hickenlooper of Iowa and Lodge of Massachusetts signed the statement that demanded the United States take immediate steps to "regain the initiative and the power for the organization and preservation of lasting peace, which it threw away in 1945."

The senators charged that the administration was responsible for "the disintegration of our armed forces in 1945", evidently forgetting that Republicans and Democrats both answered the screams of mothers and fathers throughout the nation to let their boys come home.

Republican leaders said they will discuss this issue in the congressional campaigns and expect their national committee soon to lay down a documentary "white paper" to support their position.

In other words, the Republicans believed they had found an issue for the coming political campaigns.

Income Up

The national production of goods and services boomed up to an annual rate of nearly 270 billion dollars in the second quarter of 1950, the commerce department announced. It is the highest quarter on record.

The 270-billion mark represented a sharp climb from the annual rate of 254 billion in the last quarter of 1949, and 263 billion in the first quarter of 1950.

WALLACE:
Makes Up His Mind

Henry A. Wallace resigned from the Progressive party. In a short (only two paragraphs) letter to his former political aide, C. B. Baldwin, he wrote:

"In view of actions recently taken by the national committee of the Progressive party and the various state committees, I am convinced I can more effectively serve the cause of peace by resigning from the national committee and the executive committee of the Progressive party.

"You will, therefore, take this letter as my formal resignation from the party."

It was the third time that Wallace has broken off political affiliations, and, some observers pointed out, a confession on his part that the Progressive party is too left wing for even his tastes.

He started his political career as an Iowa Republican. When the New Deal came into power in 1933, Mr. Wallace became a Democrat, first as secretary of agriculture and then Vice-President of the United States in Franklin D. Roosevelt's third term. In 1946 he quit the Democratic party and his cabinet post. In 1948 he was the Progressive party's candidate for president. His candidacy, polling 500,000 votes in New York, cost Mr. Truman the empire state but not the election.

In recent days, the question has been whether Wallace would accept the Progressive's foreign policy line, obviously dictated by Communists in the party.

TAXATION:
Cost Will Be High

The senate finance committee served notice that the cost of war in Korea would be higher with its unanimous approval of increased individual income taxes amounting to about $3 billion.

The senate and house were expected to approve the legislation.

Main points of the bill:

1. Dig deeper into the pockets of more than 50,000,000 individual taxpayers October 1. Withholding of wages and salaries, after personal exemption, will jump from the present 15 per cent to 18 per cent.

2. The actual increase in taxes will be around 20 per cent for millions of persons in the lower income brackets. For 1950, the present tax would apply on three-fourths of income, and the higher rates on one-fourth. In 1951 and thereafter the higher rates would apply on all income.

3. GI's fighting in Korea would pay no tax at all, and their officers would get reductions in their taxes, too. The tax exemption would not apply to servicemen and service women outside the war zones.

PROPAGANDA:
Straight to Cemetery

Russian propaganda at times has been ridiculous. The newest blast was directed against American football.

Radio Moscow said recently: "Football players at the University of Michigan are often carried from the football field to the hospital or even straight to the cemetery."

Moscow pictured American athletes driven to slaughter by greedy promoters. In fact, Moscow cried that it all was inspired by Wall Street to get the American public conditioned for war.

In retaliation, the Voice of America offered to buy a season pass for any accredited Russian correspondent who wants to see the University of Michigan football team play.

Said the U. S.:

"The voice will gladly offer a season's pass to all games of the University of Michigan to an accredited U.S.S.R. correspondent to see for himself. We can assure him that he'll have no expenses for flowers or wreaths."

All-Out Battle

Capture of Pohang (1) and U. S. last ditch defense of air strip highlight Korean war news. Reds mass tanks (2) for attack near Waegwan. A battle raged at the Pugong-ni (3) bridgehead. In the south (4) the three-pronged U. S. advance stopped at outskirts of Chinju.

CHURCHILL:
The Old War-Horse

Winston Churchill roared again in the consultative assembly of the Council of Europe, warning of Europe's weaknesses and stating flatly that America's atomic bombs shielded Europe from Communist aggression. He proposed a unified army for Europe and the council approved by a vote of 89 to 5.

A number of critics said the old war-horse had gone too far, but others considered it a major victory.

AROUND THE HOUSE

If you have reason to believe that a steak is going to be tough, tenderize it by soaking it in a pint of water and a tablespoonful of vinegar for ten minutes before you cook it.

When you want bread crumbs to use for frying, put stale slices of bread through the meat grinder and mix the crumbs with equal parts of flour. In grinding the bread crumbs, you can avoid a lot of mess if, instead of catching them in a bowl as they come out, you tie a paper bag securely over the end of the grinder.

Waxed cardboard milk containers, washed and thoroughly dried, make handy receptacles for bread crumbs. Especially if you give the outside of the carton a coat of paint to make it last longer and look better.

If you have trouble getting the shell to separate from hard-boiled eggs, run cold water over the eggs as soon as you take them out of the boiling water.

To improve the flavor of roast lamb and get rid of that "sheepish" taste, pour molasses over the meat while it's roasting.

Light, high, fluffy omelettes can be managed if you beat the whites and the yolks separately. Mix them together just before you put the eggs in the skillet, and the large amount of air in the mixture will bring about the desired result.

Vinegar in the water used to boil or poach eggs will keep the eggs firm. Also, in the case of an aluminum pot, the vinegar will help to prevent the pot from turning color.

Obliging Carrier Finally Gets Mad

Bill Nelson, Salt Lake City, mail carrier, was stopped one morning as he set out by a woman who lives on one end of his route who asked for her mail.

Cheerfully Bill put down his mail sack, unstrapped several packs of letters, rifled through them and finally came up with one letter for the woman.

She moaned that the letter was only an advertisement and handed it back to Bill with instructions to leave it at her house.

So Bill, still cheerful, put down his mail sack, unstrapped several packs of letters, etc., to replace the letter at the bottom of the heap.

That was all right. But the next day Bill had a COD package for 35c for the same woman. She refused to part with a 50c piece in her purse and asked Bill to change a $100 bill.

Although she still has her 50c piece, Bill also has her package, and says as far as he is concerned, things can stay that way.

—Erwin Beenken, Teacher

Eighth Grade News

We have begun our school year of 1950-51 with 18 pupils. We have six girls and twelve boys in our class.

It is quite a change for most of us to be back in school again, but we are certainly happy about going again.

The eighth grade room is downstairs now and where the sixth grades were last year. We like our new room very much.

We are all looking forward to a very prosperous and educational school year. Our goals are high and we expect to reach them also.

Our first week of school was more or less a refresher week to refresh our summer minds. Give us two weeks and we'll be hard at work again.

Any of the parents who would care to come up are very cordially invited.

Our weekly motto "The most valuable of all education is the ability to make yourself do the things you have to do when they have to be done, whether you like it or not."

—Mr. Juhl, Teacher

Sparkling eyes, a clear complexion, and healthy white teeth, all three are essential to a winning smile. And—milk plays an important role in developing to perfection all these attributes of beauty. It is one of Nature's best ways of providng bone and tooth-building minerals to work with Vitamin D—the sunshine Vitamin—in building strong, sturdy bodies.

It's the wise mother who sees that all her family gets plenty of milk . . . grown-ups as well as children. Doctors say . . . at least a quart a day for every child, and at least a pint a day for every adult.

GOOD CITIZEN

People Acting Together Make Strong Community and Nation

This is the ninth of a series of ten articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

The eighth promise of a good citizen: I will try to make my community a better place in which to live.

The Pilgrim fathers "got together" to come to this country.

From other countries came groups which settled together at a "good bend in the crick."

Neighbors built cabins near each other, leaned on each other, worked with each other, protected each other.

Man has always liked someone to talk to; someone else to walk with, to learn with, to worship with, to run races against, to wrestle, to argue politics with, and with whom to deplore the weather.

Men early found that by their joint efforts they could achieve something far greater than they could hope to accomplish singly.

The more things that people working together in a community can do without depending upon the federal or state government, the more our individual rights will be preserved, the stronger our nation will be.

YOU HAVE cast your vote and paid your taxes. Don't stop there. There is also an intangible obligation to make a community a little better for the time you have lived in it.

You don't have to be a professional do-gooder to be a good citizen.

No matter how busy he is, in addition to church and school, nearly everybody can find time for at least one community activity. It may be the Boy Scouts, or Girl Scouts, the 4-H Club, the Red Cross, the Future Farmers of America, the Community Fund, the Campfire Girls, slum clearance, a new park, a public swimming pool or golf course, or merely your family helping another family

The spirit which motivates these groups is what makes one community so much better to live in than another town the same size which doesn't have the spirit.

These things call for your time and ability rather than your money, and they will give every good citizen an inner glow of pride and satisfaction for having done them.

"IN THE MAKING OF A TOWN," William Allen White said of Emporia: " . . . the material—the brick and stone and mortar and lumber that make this town, are but a small part of it. Hundreds of towns in the country have just as much brick, stone, lumber and lime as Emporia has, that are not nearly such good towns.

"Those who have lived during the half century now passed, put something besides houses and streets and trees and material things. They put practical work in politics, in religion, in education, in business, in the social organization to make this a good town. Emporia did not just grow. To have a clean town meant a fight, every day in the year for someone; it meant sacrifice for scores of men and women—sacrifice of time and money and health and strength. To have all these schools and churches meant that thousands gave freely and in a great faith without material results in sight, that we who now enjoy what we have, might reap where we have not sown.

"This town is the child of many prayers. This town is the ideal realized only after those who dreamed the ideal, laid them down to rest with the dream still a dream. This town is the fruit of a great aspiration, and we who live here now, have a debt to posterity that we can pay only by still achieving, still pursuing; we must learn to labor and to wait, even as they learned it who built here on this townsite when it was raw upland prairie . . ."

This article is Chapter 8 of the booklet "Good Citizen" produced by The American Heritage Foundation, sponsors of the freedom train. A complete book may be obtained by sending 25 cents to The American Heritage Foundation, 25 West 45th Street, New York, N. Y.

Star Dust
STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

BARBARA STANWYCK, pausing in New York on her way to Rome to join Robert Taylor, admitted that she was none too happy about going by plane; aviation is one of the few enthusiasm she does not share with him. One of the most interesting and best informed actresses in Hollywood, she would head the list of those I'd like to be marooned with on a desert island; she is frank, intelligent, and has a sense of humor second to none. She has a terrific part in "The Furies", soon to be released, but talked not about her own role but about the late Walter Huston, whom she admired and liked so much. "The Furies" was his last picture.

When it was announced that Bill Boyd, star of Mutual's "Hopalong Cassidy" radio series, is to co-star with Bing Crosby in a film, everyone began speculating as to whether the Western star would sing with Bing. Boyd settled that question in short order; his reply was a definite "No! Leave that to all the rest of them." And to Bing's sons.

Gloria Swanson is likely to be known as the Iron Woman if she continues her current routine. Recently she completed a three-month tour of 31 cities in the United States and Canada, on behalf of her Paramount picture, "Sunset Boulevard", a trip which she began not long after a similar one to publicize "Samson and Delilah".

Ruth Roman, while working in "Three Secrets", paused long enough to order a swimming pool. "Just put it anywhere," she told the contractor. He went to work the same day, and she got home that night to find that the hole for the pool occupied the space formerly used by the driveway to her garage. So she now uses half the double garage next door.

THE FICTION CORNER

"DOING-BETTER"

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

LAURIE, Sam Edgewater's pretty daughter, brought in the news. "There's a nester squatting in our lower range," she said. "He's building himself a home, and when I told him to pack up and get out he laughed at me. More than that he was rude and insulting!"

Sam Edgewater took one look into his daughter's angry eyes and sent for Tex Tremont and Chuck Wellington. Tex and Chuck had worked for him for 20 years.

Sam explained briefly what Laurie had said, and added: "We'll ride down and warn him off. No violence this first trip. But we'll make it clear he ain't going to be allowed to stay. This here's my land by right of settlin' it."

En route to the lower range Sam fell to wondering how it was that the nester had proved insulting.

A young man was hewing logs in a clearing when the trio rode up. He drove his axe into a tree trunk and looked up at them, smiling pleasantly.

"Howdy gents," he said. "Climb down and squat awhile."

"Never mind the formalities, mister. I'm Sam Edgewater and I own this property. We don't tolerate nesters."

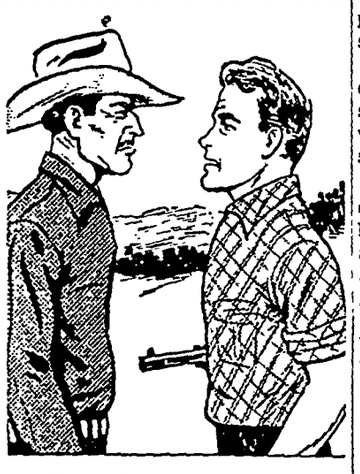
"They told me I could come down here and pick myself a home. It'd be mine if I improved it some. And I aim to improve it."

"This here's been my property for 20 years. It's mine by right of conquest," Sam roared.

The redhead grinned. "Well, if you got papers to prove it's yours, I suppose I'll have to get off. Otherwise, I'm staying."

Sam's face grew purple. He turned to Chuck and Tex. "Boys, you forget what I said about warnin' this jigger. We're gonna have a showdown right now. Kick him out!"

None of them saw the redhead move, but suddenly he had a gun in his hand. It exploded and Tex was staring down at his shattered wrist.



The redhead wasn't grinning. None of them saw him move but suddenly he had a gun in his hand.

The redhead wasn't grinning He looked at Chuck. "Well, mister, I guess you're Edgewater's hired gunman too. How about it, want to try earnin' your pay?"

Chuck looked mad but helpless. He wasn't a fool. Sam recovered after a moment from the shock of what had happened. He ordered his men back on their horses. "O K," he said. "You win this play, Red, but we'll be back."

"Yeah," jeered the redhead. "Next time bring a dozen with you.

EIGHT DAYS later Sam rode down to the lower range at the head of seven grim-faced punchers.

"Son," said Sam Edgewater, "we don't want to hurt you none, but we aim to kick you off this land. You must have sense enough to realize you ain't got a chance, playing a lone hand."

The redhead grinned. "The government," he said, "allowed I could have this here land. However, you look to me like a square shooter, so I'll make you a square proposition. I'll take on any three of your heroes single handed—and agree not to marry your daughter if they beat me."

"Agree not to what!" Sam bellowed.

The redhead looked surprised. "Shucks," he said, "I thought Laurie had told you we were fixin' to get married. You see, I kissed her the first day she come down here and that sort of settled things—"

"Laurie! Is what this young whippersnapper says, true? Is it?"

Laurie looked at the young whippersnapper, then at her father "He did kiss me that first day I came down," she said.

Sam stared at her and swore under his breath. After a moment he turned his horse and galloped away, and the punchers galloped after him. Laurie confronted the redhead and her eyes were angry

"That," she said, "was about the most—the most—" Her expression softened, because Red was grinning. The most unromantic way of proposing," she finished.

"I can do better," said Red "Want me to?"

Laurie didn't answer. She didn't have to.

Dairy Needs

Each year the baker depends upon dairymen for millions of pounds of dry milk, condensed milk solids, and fluid milk to provide bread with additional healthful food qualities.

Keep Vegetable Interest High
(See Recipes Below)

Vary Your Vegetables

VEGETABLES appear on the menu so often, homemakers often find themselves at a loss as to how variety may be introduced in their service.

If you're doing some baking, why not bake the vegetable, too? If your menu plans include a meal prepared on top of the range, why not pan-fry the vegetables, or make a sauce to add sparkle to them?

Sauces do excellent things to vegetables which you've been used to serving in the same, old, boiled way with just salt and pepper as seasonings.

Then, too, there are combinations of vegetables that can be pleasing, like lima beans with corn, carrots and parsnips, green pepper and onions with limas and zucchini squash with tomatoes.

Vegetables can be varied simply by their treatment: carrots in timbales, potatoes in pancakes, molded asparagus.

IF YOU'RE serving two vegetables, pick them for flavor and color contrasts, like this combination of potatoes and green beans:

Green Beans, Butter Herb Sauce
(Serves 6)

- 1½ pounds beans
- ¼ cup butter
- ½ cup finely minced onion
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- ½ teaspoon thyme
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon paprika

Cook beans in boiling salted water until tender. Fry onions in melted butter until tender but not brown, about 5 minutes. Add remaining ingredients and pour over hot, cooked beans.

• • •

Cheesed Potatoes
(Serves 6)

- 8 medium new potatoes
- ¼ cup butter
- ⅓ cup minced chives
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon paprika
- ½ cup grated American cheese

Cook potatoes in jackets; drain and return to low heat, for 2 to 3 minutes, shaking gently until they are hot and mealy. Turn into a hot serving dish. Meanwhile, melt butter, add minced chives, seasonings and cheese. Pour hot cheese mixture over potatoes. Sprinkle with extra chives and a dash of paprika.

• • •

Baked Succotash
(Serves 8)

- 2 cups dried lima beans
- 4 cups water
- 2½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ cup dark molasses
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- ⅛ teaspoon black pepper
- 1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- 1¾ cups cooked (12-ounce can) whole kernel corn
- 4 strips bacon

Soak beans in water overnight. Add 1 teaspoon salt; bring to boiling point; simmer but do not boil about 45 minutes. Drain; save water and measure; add water from corn to make ¾ cup liquid. Mix liquid, molasses, mustard, worcestershire sauce, onion, and remaining 1½ teaspoons salt. Combine beans and corn. Pour into a 2-quart bean pot or casserole dish. Arrange strips of bacon over top. Cover and bake in a moderately slow oven (325° F.) 1 hour. Uncover and bake 30 minutes.

• • •

Lima Bean Casserole
(Serves 6)

- 1 pound large lima beans
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- ½ cup chopped onions
- ⅓ cup fat
- 3 tablespoons light corn syrup
- 1 can tomato soup
- ½ cup water

Soak clean beans several hours or overnight in water to cover. Simmer slowly until tender. Brown chopped peppers and onions in the fat and add the light corn syrup, tomato soup and half cup of water. Place drained limas in greased casserole and pour other mixture over them. Bake two hours in moderate oven.

• • •

Potato Pancakes
(Serves 4-6)

- 6 medium-sized raw potatoes
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 2 teaspoons melted fat
- 1 tablespoon milk
- 1 teaspoon grated onion
- 4 tablespoons fat

Pare potatoes. Grate. Add flour, eggs, salt, 2 teaspoons melted fat, milk and onion and mix well. Heat remaining fat in heavy frying pan. Drop tablespoons of potato mixture into it. Fry, turning to brown on both sides.

• • •

Carrot Timbales
(Serves 6)

- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 2 tablespoons flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 5 large carrots, cut in pieces
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 cups soft bread cubes (¼-inch size)
- 3 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 tablespoon chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
- 1½ teaspoons salt

Melt shortening in a small saucepan. Blend in flour and salt. Add milk and cook until thick. Clean and scrape carrots. Cut carrots in pieces and cook them in small amount of water until tender. Drain off remaining liquid. Add butter to carrots and mash them together. Combine mashed carrots and butter with bread cubes, beaten eggs, onion, parsley, nutmeg, salt and white sauce. Place mixture in 6 well-greased individual custard cups. Place cups in a shallow baking dish, partially filled with hot water. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 35 minutes. Unmold and serve with sauce.

LYNN SAYS:
Here's How to Get Most out of Vegetables

Baking is one of the best methods for preserving vitamins and minerals in vegetables. Simple baking until the skin can be pierced easily with a fork works best on the following: potatoes, sweet potatoes, squash, turnips, carrots, onions and parsnips.

Many cooked vegetables when served the second time can be more palatable if sauteed in butter and bread crumbs

To freshen vegetables and remove insects, soak bud, head and fruit group vegetables in cold water to which salt has been added.

Yellow vegetables are among the most stable as to color and vitamin content. Use them often to get Vitamin A which will help you resist infections.

Cream sauce, either plain or with cheese added, will glorify many a vegetable when it's served as a leftover. Use this idea, too, when combining two small amounts of leftover vegetables.

Show Business Offers Heart Break to Stage-Struck Girl

By BILLY ROSE

As everyone and his Aunt Esmerelda knows, there's no business like show business for the fortunate few who make the grade. But—

In 1946, a stage-struck lass from Nebraska named Judy Peters moved into a boarding house off Times Square and began looking for work in the theatre. As per usual, she was average bright, round of face, figure and eye, and determined to make her mark on the 45th Street marquees.

A few months later, thanks to a stage manager who took a shine to her, she got her first part—a three-line role in a two-act play that lasted four performances.

Billy Rose

For a solid and sobering year after that, Judy made the rounds, eating the usual health salads and waiting on tables to pay for her furnished (after a fashion) room. It was heart- and arch-breaking work, but it finally paid off when the Big Chance came along—the second lead in a Shaw revival.

THE DAY AFTER the play [illegible] Judy wired her folks, old hit. "The Shining Jean Nathan singled her out for mention in his review the farm girl figured it was all over but the movie offers.

One swell notice, however, doth not a star make, and when the play closed after a run of three months, Judy had to go back to reading the casting notes in Actors' Cues. By this time her family, fed up with her show business shenanigans, had put her on notice that the only further money she could expect would be train fare back to Nebraska. And so, to keep body and hopes alive, the would-be Helen Hayes went back to waiting on tables.

Last April, after three grim years of scratch-as-scratch-canning, Judy was handed the script of Keith mer stock company. He asked her to bone up on the part of Judy Linden—a typical farm girl whose accent was pure Midwest, and whose face and figure were more silo than sex.

THE AUDITION WENT off without hitch or hesitation, and Judy was in the heaven above seventh when the director complimented her on how well she read her lines. He told her he'd let her know definitely the following day, and she went back to her one-room-and-half-bath to wait.

The next night the landlady smelled gas, but by the time the police arrived Judy was dead. On the bed by her side was the script of "The Shining Hour" opened to the scene in Act Two where Judy Linden, the farm girl, takes her own life.

The cops, looking for a suicide motive, didn't have far to look. On the dresser was a note from the director: Sorry, honey. You read the part fine, but I'm afraid you're not the type."

Quitter Makes Good

Lesson for September 10, 1950

UNLESS THAT boarding house in Antioch was different from other boarding houses, you could hardly have a private quarrel in it. There would be some inquisitive people who would notice when voices were raised, and who could not resist the temptation to listen.

Dr. Foreman

One of the quarrelers was none other than the famous Apostle Paul, and the other was his best friend Barnabas. At least, Paul and Barnabas had been good friends up to that day.

After that day's argument we do not know that they ever saw each other again. Paul never mentioned the incident, but the story got around, and Luke put it into his book of Acts.

Young Man Seeks Position

THE ARGUMENT was all about a young man named John Mark. Young people do not always realize how often they are discussed by their elders, or how much those discussions affect their lives. A young man applies for a job (which he would rather call a "position") and he either gets the job or he does not. But he never sees the files. He never hears the conversations about himself. He never knows just what remark got him the job—or cost him the job, as the case may be. So John Mark may never have known just what Paul and Barnabas said about him.

The facts were plain. John Mark was a native of Jerusalem, son of a woman at least well-off enough to have a large house of her own. He was some relative of Barnabas, perhaps a nephew. (Tradition says he was the young man in embarrasing circumstances described in Mark 14:51-52.) When Paul and Barnabas set off on their first missionary journey together, this John Mark went with them as a general assistant.

All went well at first. But when the party landed on the hot steamy shore of Pamphylia, and when the missionary expedition was about to take off over the high lonesome ranges through bandit country, John Mark left the party and took the first boat back to home and mother.

Two Bosses

WE HAVE no idea why he went. Maybe he had good reasons, maybe not. Anyway, we do know that he quit. And that was all Paul wanted to know. A new missionary party was being made up, and Barnabas wanted to take his young relative along again. But Paul could not see it.

Why take a man who had already fallen down on one job? Why take an assistant that could not be depended upon? The argument between Mark's two bosses boiled down to this: Paul judged their assistant on past performance. It was all he had to go by. Barnabas judged Mark by his love for him and his belief in him. The quarrel was sharp, and the two old friends could not agree. Finally the incredible happened: Paul and Barnabas parted company, and each went his separate way from that time forward.

What happened to Barnabas we do not know. But we do know that Barnabas was right about John Mark. Years later we read in more than one letter from Paul that Mark was a real help to him. We find that another great leader, Simon Peter, called Mark his "son." These leaders of the Christian church, though they might differ on some things, agreed about Mark, that he was a man to rely on.

What This Goes to Show

ALL THIS GOES to show several things. For one, it is clear that even an Apostle may be wrong. No man can be an infallible judge of another man. And another thing: You can't judge a man on his record alone. There may be more in the man than the record shows.

On the other hand, people do judge others by their records. The dubious young man does not always have a relative who will give him the benefit of the doubt.

If your record is bad, you must realize that there are numbers of people, even good people, who will judge you by that alone.

Mackmen Are Impoverished Bunch

By GRANTLAND RICE

I HAPPENED to be hanging around when Connie Mack had one of his great teams—the Athletics of 1910-1914. He won four out of five pennants through that blazing march. He had his famous $100,000 infield — now an $800,000 bunch at least at present prices.

Grantland Rice

I recall that one of the main reasons Connie broke up his brilliant squad was lack of patronage. He was barely breaking even with ballplayers such as Eddie Collins, Stuffy McInnis, Jack Barry. Home-run Baker, Eddie Plank, Chief Bender and Jack Coombs. At the time one reason offered for poor attendance was the fact that Mr Mack had a team that was entirely too good for business. Today I believe that the Athletics of 1910-1914 would draw at least 1,500,000 a year in the small ball park. But not then—not 40 years ago.

So Connie had to disband his great squad. Collins left for the White Sox. McInnis went to Pittsburgh. Barry moved to Boston. Most of them were scattered over baseball's map. I've heard that Connie sold a big part of this squad because of shady rumors in connection with the 1914 world series—which the Braves won in four straight games. I've never believed this was true. Connie simply had a team that couldn't draw up to its playing ability at that time.

Today Mr Mack has no such all-star array In place of a pennant winner or a pennant contender he has a cellar contender. He is down with the Browns and White Sox. So, his Athletics are even further down in attendance figures.

You don't run a big league ball club today with a few thousand dollars Your scouting alone costs you over $300,000. At least these are the figures big league owners give me Pay rolls have risen from $100,000 to $1,000,000. In those days there were no $100,000 Ted Williamses or Joe DiMaggios (I don't believe they get that much.)

Wagner and Mathewson were $8,000 and $10,000 men. Few got over $3,500. Joe Jackson and Ed Walsh (Jackson hit .408 and Walsh won 40 games) picked up $1,500 a year—one year. Their average was under $3,500. Today a busher, or a near busher, can knock over $6,000. Or a kid can get a $70,000 to $100,000 bonus —more than Wagner or Mathewson or Alexander or Cy Young drew in 12 years. Or Walter Johnson.

Mr. Mack can't face the toll any longer. His Athletics must go overboard to someone else. This year —Mr. Mack's 50th—will be the most disastrous, financially, he has ever known.

A Strange Career

Connie Mack has been the living proof of what can happen in baseball. He has won nine pennants. If my figures are correct he has finished last 16 times

When he had fine material, he won flags. When he had poor material, he finished last. No one can say that Connie Mack hasn't been a fine manager. One of the best. He knew ballplayers. He knew how to run teams. He knew how to handle men. But he never knew enough to lift poor material out of last place. Look at his record. His one weakness was lack of a big bank roll. When this 1950 season opened —his 50th year with the Athletics— he had faint dreams of first place.

Faint dreams—but possible dreams. He had definite dreams of finishing in the first division. These dreams were based upon high grade pitching—headed by Brissie and Kellner. Also the $100,000 addition of Dillinger. The first thing that collapsed was his pitching staff. Then the rest of his team followed the Big Flop.

Connie Mack has always been a sportsman and a gentleman. But baseball is a matter of winning or losing material. Nothing else. His 1950 team—his final dream of moving up with McGraw as a 10 time pennant winner—is already over.

The Other Boston Team

Back last March, when the mockingbirds were singing on the west coast of Florida, the team given the best chance to win a pennant was the Red Sox—rated about level with the Dodgers. It wan't the Braves who were shoved in well back of the Dodgers, the Cardinals and the Phillies.

Yet it has been the other Boston team—not the Red Sox—that has been in the thick of the pennant scramble all the way.

The Braves are an odd outfit. They are seventh in batting, below the Reds and Pirates. They are just a bare notch above the Cubs. They are supposed to have kept their place through the pitching of Sain, Spahn and Bickford. But Spahn has lost about as many games as he has won at this spot.

You have to give more than normal credit to Billy Southworth, who keeps his clubs shooting at the top, no matter where he works. Southworth is a great leader. He is also a close inspector of details.

Why Should You Feed FELCO?
The Answer Is Simple!
Certainly you want to know WHY you should feed FELCO FEEDS. Here is the reason: Felco Feeds are mixed in YOUR plant each day according to formulas developed by expert livestock nutritionists, developed to create most efficient results . . . not a profit for a feed Manufacturer. They are mixed here where the grain is raised, only minerals and proteins being added to give the best possible mixture, thus excluding enormous freight charges which add to your costs and do not improve your feed one iota.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded business and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

"Where are you going?" That's probably the most common question among members of any family. When the youngster leaves the house, it's "Where are you going?" When the husband leaves the house, it's "Where are you going now?"

Behind that question lies the urgent desire to keep in order, to keep all members of the family out of trouble.

And so in traffic. Whether you are driving a car or riding a bicycle, nearby drivers want to know where you are going They want to know if you are going to turn or stop.

To keep traffic in order, to help keep yourself and other drivers out of trouble, always give a definite, correct hand signal before you turn or stop.

The signals shown in the pictures above are the only hand signals approved in Iowa for drivers of all vehicles. When making a left turn, it's smart to complete your signal by pointing one finger in that direction also, to make your intention absolutely clear.

Drivers who failed to signal or who gave the wrong signal caused 743 accidents in Iowa last year.

Signal. Tell other drivers where you are going, so they won't have to tell accident investigators how you went.

LARGE NUMBER OF KLEMME YOUNG PEOPLE AWAY TO SCHOOL

Klemme again will be well represented by young people of the community attending colleges for the coming year.

Iowa State Teachers College at Cedar Falls has the largest representation of K.H.S. graduates with the following enrolled: Dean Jacobs, Marcelle Josten, Lillian Wille and Gloria Haefner.

"Pete" Larsen and "Red" Schmidt will attend Iowa State College at Ames.

Northwestern University, at Evanston, Illinois is the choice of Mary and Sylvia Egeland.

Miss Evelyn Arnold, who has been teaching, will take further college work at Upper Iowa University at Fayette.

Jerry Finders has enrolled in a business course at Fort Dodge.

Miss Ruth Janssen has enrolled in the La James Beauty School.

Two Klemme girls are looking forward to a business career and are students at Hamilton's University of Commerce at Mason City. They are Luella Priebe and Norma Early.

Usually there are several graduates going to Waldorf College at Forest City but this year Phyllis Boland seems to be Klemme's only representative there.

Miss Mildred Busse has returned to her studies at the Moody Bible Institute at Chicago.

Eddie Grosshuesch will return to the Mission House College at Plymouth, Wisconsin.

The Times may have missed some young people attending college. If we have please let us know so that we can add them to the list.

Alice Mae Anderson returns to the University of Iowa at Iowa City as a Junior student.

Iris Rosendahl and Erdene Nelson are both continuing their nurses training at Des Moines Hospital School of Nursing.

Esther Hartbeck and Emily Lou Johnson continue their nurses training at Deaconess Hospital at Marshalltown. Jean Kurtz is taking her nurses training at Omaha.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

It seems almost too much, considering the thousand common dangers of driving, but these new and unnerving notes from the animal kingdom should be reported.

In north-east Iowa, a motorist enjoying the pleasures of a highway through the woods suddenly crashed into a deer. The driver got his car stopped, checked the damage, then walked back to where the deer sprawled on the highway, apparently dead.

The drver was looking down at the animal with some compassion when the deer got up, butted the man, knocked him down, stomped on him and jumped back into the woods.

And in another part of Iowa, a "big black dog" came out to waltz down the center line of a highway and send two approaching cars crashing into opposite ditches trying to avoid him.

But the most tragic incident occurred recently in western Iowa. An out-of-state driver, making time at night, hit a horse standing in the middle of the highway.

The top of the car was all but torn off. Skid marks to the point of impact measured only 31 feet. The car, with the horse on top, traveled 91 feet down the highway then 70 feet more down a ditch. The driver was killed.

Probably the practial moral of these stories is: Look out for animals on the highways. But perhaps there's something more to it. Perhaps there's a conspiracy afoot among the animal brethern to strike back at drivers.

Maybe the deer had the whole thing planned. Maybe the "big black dog" had a sly smile on his jaws as he trotted away from the wreckage he caused. And maybe the horse was frantic, determined to sacrifice himself to the "cause" and to take someone with him when he went.

You never know. Look out for animals on the highways.

MAY WANT TO HOLD SPRING PIGS

But Watch Prices And Don't Overstay Market

Farmers with late spring pigs may want to consider carrying them along for January and February sale.

The trend toward more early spring pigs has reduced the number of hogs for midwinter market, reports Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist. He says higher lard prices and an expected stronger demand for pork should mean a stronger market for hogs in January and February—even at heavy weights.

At the same time, farmers will want to watch prices to make sure they don't overstay the market with their May and June pigs, Kutish says.

Fall Pig Increase

If hog raisers follow through on their June intentions, there will be a 5 percent increase in fall pigs and most of this increase may show up in summer pigs.

Farmers raised 3 percent more pigs last spring than they did in the spring of '49. However, farrowings were more evenly distributed through the season this year and if hogs are marketed when they reach desirable weights, heavy runs should be avoided this fall.

CONSERVATION FARMING ON THE INCREASE

In only six months, 3,900 Iowa farmers have asked the U. S. Soil Conservation Service for technical assistance with their erosion problems. This fact was shown in a mid-year report made public at Ames today by Frank H. Mendell, state conservationist.

"There has been a definite increae in public interest," Mendell said, "and this has been reflected in greater demand upon the SCS for technical assistance. Naturally, with the field technicians we have available, it is impossible to keep up with the demand. However, we will get to these new district cooperators as rapidly as possible."

Mendell's report shows the farmers who applied for technical services during the first half of the year operate 683,000 acres of land. They bring the total of Iowa farmers who have asked the SCS for technical aid since the soil conservation district program began, up to 36,-200. These district cooperators operate 6,600,00 acres.

During the first half of the year, SCS technicians were able to help 2,500 farmers finish complete farm conservation plans which fell 1,400 short of the new applications coming in during the same period.

Vernon Moss, local SCS planner, reports that the Hancock County Soil Conservation District, has shared in the Statewide trend. "We have had 51 farmers apply for technical help so far this year," Moss said, "and have been able to help 17 develop complete farm conservation plans. We believe however, that by working with neighbor groups, we can make faster progress in the future."

HANCOCK COUNTY TERRACING DEMONSTRATION

One of the most effective methods of soil and water conservation, terrace building, will be demonstrated for the benefit of Hancock County farmers. The demonstration will take place on the Wm. Hoeft farm, operated by Jacob Blumer, 3 miles north of Garner.

The date will be Friday Sept. 15th starting at 10:00 a. m. Several different makes of farm equipment will be used.

Level type, broad base farmable terraces will be built. This type of trrace is now in operation on one of the steeper fields in the farm and can be seen by those attending the demonstration.

The Hoeft farm is operated under a complete conservation farm plan and will give demonstration visitors an opportunity to see conservation farming in action. Mr. Blumer, the operator, who is one of the outstanding conservation farmers of this area will be on hand to answer visitor's questions.

Cooperating in this demonstration will be the local Implement Dealers, Soil Conservation Service technicians and the Hancock County Conservation Dis- Commissioners. Commissioners of the soil Conservation District are local farmers elected by farmers to direct and coordinate soil conservation in the county. This demonstration of terrace construction with regular farm equipment is one means used by the Soil Conservation District to bring farmers information on soil conservation practices.

Squirrel And Rabbit Shooting Opens September 15th

The 1950 Iowa hunting season will get underway September 15, when squirrel and rabbit shooting becomes legal. The squirrel season will remain open until November 15, the rabbit season until January 31. Shooting hours for rabbits are 6:00 a. m. to 6:00 p. m., with no shooting hour restrictions on squirrels. Bag limit is 6 and possession limit 12 on each of these game animals.

Squirrel hunters using rifles are remided by the Conservation Commission that the .22, while excellent for squirrel shooting, if carelessly used may be extremely dangerous. The more powerful .22 slugs are hazardous to humans and livestock up to a mile. Hunters are urged to be sure of the final destination of the bullet and to, in every case, secure the landowner's consent before entering into privately owned timberlands.

SCRIPTURE: Mark 3:31-35; 6:3; 1 Corinthians 15:7; Galatians 2:9-12; Acts 12:17; 15.
DEVOTIONAL READING: James 1: 19:27.

Brother to Jesus

Lesson for September 17, 1950

THEY WENT fishing together, no doubt; very likely they worked together in the shop; perhaps little James was the nuisance that small brothers sometimes are, but like all small brothers he would tag along when Jesus went walking over the Nazareth hills. As a man in later years he became influential and famous; indeed it was he who probably wrote the book in our New Testament called "James." But as a boy, his neighbors saw nothing remarkable in him. So completely commonplace he was, that as Mark 6 shows us, the natives of Nazareth couldn't believe that one of James' brothers could amount to anything.

Dr. Foreman

Unbeliever

FOR years and years James grew up with Jesus, boy with boy. They lived under the same roof, ate from the same dish. James may even have worn his big brother's outgrown tunics. All his childhood days he knew the care and love of the same mother Mary that Jesus had. Through all those "silent" years when Jesus lived and worked in Nazareth, James lived and worked beside him.

And yet, the strange thing is that when Jesus left the carpenter shop and went about "doing good" as Peter said, James did not believe in him. It seems clear from the story in Mark 3 that both Mary and the brothers (not James only) had the idea that Jesus was out of his mind. They came to get him and would have stopped his ministry at that point, if they could. John also mentions the fact that Jesus' own brothers did not believe in him.

It seems strange, yet the reason may not be hard to find. Perhaps it was a case of the old proverb, "Familiarity breeds contempt." Perhaps James had a sort of inferiority complex about himself, maybe he agreed with the villagers' low opinion about him, so that he could not believe that his brother could be the Christ. In any case it is plain that if miracles could ever have compelled belief, Jesus' miracles would have convinced James . . . but he was an unbeliever right through the day of Calvary.

Believer

PRECISELY what changed him was never known. Some anonymous writer in early times wrote a "Gospel of James"—a piece of fiction never accepted by the church as genuine. What we do know is what Paul tells us: that after his resurrection, Jesus "appeared to James." It may well be that James was convinced by the risen Christ as he had never been by the Carpenter of Nazareth.

Be that as it may, as time went on and Christians began to multiply in Jerusalem, James appeared as the leader of the Christians' Home Church. At the important conference held in Jerusalem to decide the church's first great controversy, it was James whose speech was the "last word" before the decisive vote.

Quality of Leadership

JAMES was not an accepted leader merely because he was a brother of Jesus. There were other brothers who remained quite obscure. James was a recognized leader because of his personal qualities. The reader is invited to study these out for himself. But there is one interesting and unusual combination of qualities in this man: strictness with himself, together with flexible generosity in dealing with others.

In Acts 21:17-26 it is clear that James kept all the laws of Moses himself and expected other Jews to do the same. To the end of his life he was personally a rigid conservative. But when it came to other people, he was far more tolerant.

When the question arose, How much of Jewish law shall we expect Gentile Christians to observe? James agreed to the startlingly small nucleus of laws that the Jerusalem conference set forth as the absolute minimum for all. James did not wish his own conscience to bind every one else He did not expect every one to be bound by his own pattern He had high standards and he lived by them. But he did not use his own standards as a club with which to beat others over the head.

Household Hints

To remove the odor from your hands after peeling onions, rub your hands with raw celery or parsley before trying to wash them. Or, wet the hands with clear water and rub them thoroughly with salt.

To avoid yellow stains on your hands when peeling carrots, peel them under water.

If you have some cold cuts and would rather have hot cuts, wrap the slices of meat in two soaking wet dish towels, put them in a pan and put the pan in a hot oven for fifteen minutes. The meat, which needs no cooking, will be warmed by steam without destroying the flavor.

Here's a quick way to serve leftover roast beef without reheating it. Slice the meat, get the gravy piping hot, and pour the hot gravy over the cold meat. It'll get by nine times out of ten.

What to do with small quantities of leftover fruit juices? Add them to gelatine desserts for extra "natural" flavor.

She Needed the Seat

Two rather overdressed girls boarded a crowded bus, and one made a bet with the other that she could force the dignified old gentleman in the rear seat to give her his place. She pushed through the crowd and said to him:

"How do you do, Mr Brown? Fancy meeting you on a bus! I'm so glad to see you—you're almost a stranger. My goodness, but I'm tired."

The old gentleman glanced up at the young woman he had never seen before. He rose and said in a voice audible to every passenger on the bus:

"Do sit down, then, Mary. I don't often see you out on week days—no wonder you're tired. And, by the way, skip delivering our laundry next week My wife is seeing the judge Monday about getting your husband a parole."

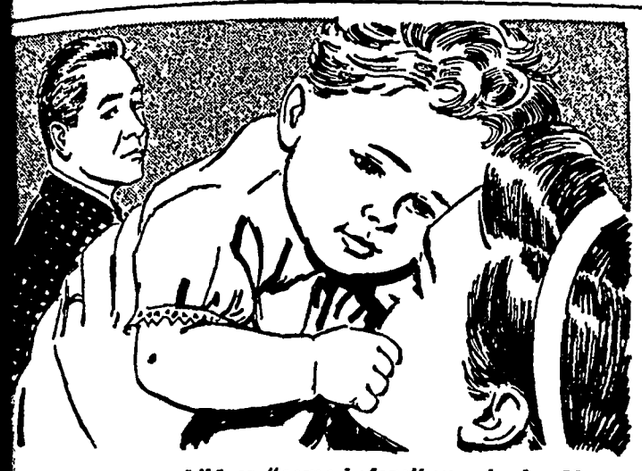
Give Children Proper Place

By Lawrence Gould



Should your children "come before" your husband?

wer: Only as far and as long ey are helplessly dependent on Baby's supper comes first, for ple, because Dad can raid the y—or "eat out," if necessary. o give your children the first in your affections is not only to your husband; it's bad for hildren. For one thing, you'll between them and the father they need as much as they mother if they are to be well- ced. For another, you will them by unconsciously de- ing from them what only one of your own age can give.

Is cleanliness a virtue?

wer: The late G. K. Chester- maintained that it should be ed as a luxury, citing the fact in the Middle Ages living in was regarded as a form of enial. When cleanliness is not obsession (as it is for some otics) it should probably be thought of as one of the distinctively adult forms of pleasure. Children prefer to be dirty, partly because they are and resent being interfered with—and some childish-minded adults feel the same way. Liking to be clean is an "acquired taste."

Can an older brother lead a younger astray?

Answer: Yes, but only if the younger brother has been neglected by his parents, and especially his father. For a normal boy develops by identifying himself with the older male whom he loves and admires most, or who seems to him most enviable, and if a good father plays this role in his life, no one else will greatly influence him. But a boy whose father shows no interest in him or affection for him may adopt an older brother as "hero" and model, and if the brother is lawless or delinquent, imitate him to win his approval.

KEEPING HEALTHY

eatment of Hereditary Headache

By Dr. James W. Barton

ILE HEADACHE is consid- ered the commonest symp- known to mankind, there are varieties and, of course, many s.

halalgia is another name for che, just as neuralgia is an in the nerves. It is known that ches, sometimes a particular of headache, seems to run in families. This is called her- y cephalalgia.

Postgraduate Medicine, Dr. M. Charles, St. Louis, Mo., that individuals giving a y history of paroxysmal (com- uddenly, very severe for a and leaving suddenly) head- and having such headaches elves, may be grouped to- under the term hereditary lalgia, without attempting to hem out into different varie- subdivisions.

made a study of 35 patients have regularly occuring se- headaches and who give posi- amily histories of paroxysmal lalgia. Many of these have electroencephalographic trac- ings made (tracings of brain movements, just as heart movements are traced by the electrocardiograph).

For years the specific drug used for migraine (one-sided headache) has been ergotamine tartrate (gynergen). In the treatment of these 35 patients ergotamine tartrate alone or in combination with caffeine (cafergone), was used.

As with migraine, ergotamine tartrate was by far the most effective drug in treating these hereditary headaches, excellent results being obtained in 80 per cent of the patients and good results in the remaining 20 per cent. Some of the other preparations gave good results and were used where gynergen caused various s or symptoms.

Because of the electroencephalographic findings (brain movements) in many patients with hereditary cephalalgia, which findings are present in epilepsy or convulsions, the drug Mesantoin to counteract convulsions was given to several of these patients with excellent results. Further tests will be made. Despite the fact that cortisone and Acth will not be available for a long time yet, dramatic results are stimulating manufacturers to put them on the market as soon as possible.

The second atomic bomb ever exploded made a charred wilderness of the Japanese city of Hiroshima. Of the city's 340,000 population, 100,000 were killed.

△ △ △ △

ATOMIC ATTACK

A-Bomb Damage Would Be Big But Cities Can Survive Blast

If an atomic bomb was exploded 2,000 feet above the sidewalk of New York city today, from 100,000 to 500,000 people would die, depending upon that number within a mile and a half radius of the point of the explosion. Most Americans can not conceive the power and destruction of such an explosion, and, many have shrugged hopelessly believing that there is no defense against sure death if an atomic bomb was dropped in their vicinity.

There are, however, some things the public can do to help itself. Many of these things have been outlined in a book entitled "The Effects of Atomic Weapons" just published by the atomic energy commission at Washington and the United States department of defense.

The book suggests that the public can help itself on a community scale by an alarm system, by designating large shelters, by training to meet emergencies, by preparing to evacuate target areas and by long range, but hastened, development of highways and removal of danger points, such as slums.

Many cities, such as New York and San Francisco, have started such programs.

Three Types of Bombing

As individuals the public can protect itself by learning how to take care of injuries, by deciding in advance how to act under attack as a family or neighborhood group, by preparing simple home shelters.

Death and destruction from an atomic attack would be immense, but a city can survive as many did from terrific conventional bombing.

The terrible destruction and death rate from an atomic bomb is outlined in the book which tells what one bomb did to Hiroshima where 100,000 of the 340,000 population were killed, and what happened at Nagasaki where 70,000 of the city's 250,000 people died from one A-bomb explosion.

The book reports there are three possible types of A-bombing: High air burst as at Hiroshima and Nagasaki where the bombs were exploded about 2,000 feet above the cities, low ground, and underwater or underground.

The high air burst is the most probable in an attack on the United States. It kills the most people and does the most wide-spread damage. Its effectiveness is somewhat determined by weather and topographical conditions.

But in the average American city it would:

Kill 85 per cent of the people within a half mile radius of ground zero (the point directly below the burst), 35 per cent at one mile and 2 per cent at a mile and a half. Cause various radiation and conventional violent injuries and burns up to several miles.

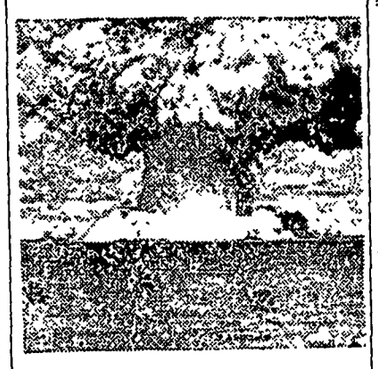
Explosion Described

Obliterate virtually all property above ground in the first zone. Do damage ranging from intense to light from the first zone to some eight miles from ground zero. Cause immense fires.

Dr. J. O. Hirschfelder of the University of Wisconsin, head of the board of editors for the book, describes an atomic explosion:

"A fraction of a second after the bomb explodes, a ball of fire shoots out to a radius of 150 yards. It gives off light of the same spectoral characteristics as the sun.

"On a clear day, the light from the ball of fire will produce skin burns up to a distance of two miles. Under some conditions, the whole area beneath the explosion may be converted into a huge fire storm or bonfire.



The above picture shows a column of water about 2,000 feet across at its base and 5,000 feet high boiling up out of Bikini lagoon in the U. S. A-bomb test.

"It takes the blast wave one second to reach one-half mile, three seconds to reach one mile, and seven seconds to reach two miles."

In these seconds there are many things a person can do to protect himself if he has the presence of mind.

The book suggests, if you are outside and that awesome glare occurs:

Don't look at the glare, drop to the ground, into a ditch or a slit trench if at all possible, or behind anything at all. Curl up to shade your face, neck, hands, arms and legs with the clothed part of your body. Stay that way at least 10 seconds. It won't keep you from radiation, but it will help against flash burns.

If you are in the street or on a road, drop prone or duck behind a tree or into a doorway if one is a step or two away. Bend over with back to light. Don't try to get to any shelter not right at hand, because most of an A-bomb's heat and radiation come in the first three seconds. Wait 10 seconds, then press tightly against a building or wall to avoid falling debris.

In the public mind, radiation is the most frightful aspect of an A-bomb attack. However, force and fire far exceed it as destroyers. In fact, exposure does not mean that you are going to die or even that there will be some permanent, peculiar after effects.

Book Is on Sale

The book says remove your clothing and scrub yourself hard with soap and water. Special methods are effective under special conditions, but soap and water are almost always around and they are pretty good universal decontaminators. Pay particular attention to skin folds, areas around body openings, fingernails and toenails and hair—and don't cause skin breaks.

The government warns any kind of a shelter in the home might save you—a reinforced wall, a corner in the basement strengthened against collapse of the ceiling, a storm cellar or cave. But be sure to provide an emergency exit if possible.

Space prohibits full discussion of the book, but it is on sale by the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C., for $1.25.

Radiation Changes Cell Structure

The new book discussed the effects of radiation and suggested that persons exposed to damaging radiation such as from an atomic bomb—might be wise to refrain from begetting children for several months.

Radiation can change the structure of cells of the body which carry hereditary traits. A period of two or three months might enable nature to repair the damage to the parents' cells, the book said.

Writer Needs Local Color, Goes to Jail to Get It

PASADENA, Calif.—A writer, Mrs. Eloise Andrae, needed some local color for some radio crime stories she was writing. She needed to get in jail, so—

She took out a temporary driver's license under the name of Susan Ann Little and used it to cash a check for $25. Nothing happened.

Next she charged a $3.95 slip to a friend who didn't have an account. Still no policeman.

Then she went back to the store and pulled the same stunt for $15.47

Detectives hauled her away to a cell with lots of local color and booked her on suspicion of forgery.

USING FERTILIZER IN FALL NOT BEST

That Is True Except Under Some Conditions

Fall applications of fertilizer recommended by Iowa State College agronomists are limited to special situations pending results of further experiments now in progress.

Results so far have indicated that spring-seeded crops respond most favorably to fertilizer applications made in the spring, reports M. A. Anderson, extension agronomist at the college.

On the other hand, he says there are a few Iowa situations where fertilizer applications can be practical in the fall.

O. K. On Fall Seeding

Phosphate fertilizers applied where needed on ground to be used for fall-seeded legumes may be a profitable air in establishing a good stand and getting higher yields, the agronomist says.

On land where wheat is sown in the fall a good many Iowa farmers have found that superphosphate or nitrogen-phosphate fertilizers such as 6-24-0 have given good response.

Another place where fertilizer may be applied in the fall with good results is on bromegrass stands—especially those being kept over for seed production next year. However, slightly higher yields are being turned in by college bromegrass plots where nitrogen is applied in the spring instead of the fall, Anderson says. He adds that where nitrogen is applied on bromegrass during the autumn months, it may be put on as late in the season as plant growth continues.

Get Pamphlet

Recommended rates of fertilizer applications to be used in various parts of the state are outlined in the pamphlet, "Using Fertilizers Right," available at county extension directors offices.

Iowa farmers who wish to take advantage of this fall's ample fertilizer supply for use next spring will want to make sure they store it properly, Anderson says. He advises putting it in a dry location under a good roof and keeping it raised up off of floors that may be damp between now and next spring.

ALFALFA ROOTS NEED STORED FOOD FOR THE WINTER MONTHS

Alfalfa and squirrels have something in common. They both need to store up food before the winter months ahead. This can be done in alfalfa only if plants are allowed 3 or 4 weeks of uninterrupted growth this fall.

Paul Henderson, county extension director of Hancock County says that winter killing is often caused by the lack of stored food in legume roots. Lack of food makes plants more susceptible to winter killing. It also tends to shorten the life of individual plants.

Good alfalfa management allows an 8 to 10-inch growth late in the growing season. Shortly before frost a part of that can be cut for hay, Henderson explains, because the food will be stored in roots by then.

The same thing applies to alfalfa for pasture. Livestock should be taken off for nearly a month during fall growth. Then the legume can be pastured just before frost without any harmful effects. That's provided it's not grazed down too short.

Roots full of plant food will be all ready to push rapid growth in the spring, Henderson says. So there should be more tons of hay per acre next year.

MARVIN MEINTZ GROWS ONE KIND OF POTATOES—ALL BIG ONES!

Tuesday Mrs. Marvin Meintz brough to the Times office 8 potatoes from their garden. The 8 spuds weighed 10¼ pounds.

The potatoes were Cobblers and Red Pontiacs. One of the Cobblers weighed 1½ pounds and one of the Red Pontiacs weighed 1¼ pounds! And those are really whoppers.

Not all of the Meintz potatoes are that large, but all run to giant sizes and are the largest we have ever seen raised in this part of Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Meintz have potatoes that make the famous Idaho spuds look like peanuts!

Those 8 potatoes will just about take care of the winter potatoe eating needs of the editorial family.

Mrs. "Rusty" Schaefer brought the wire to The Times office and it is now on display at Lay Bros. Store.

It's Time To—

GO TO SCHOOL

Meeting the teacher for the first time is an important experience for the child who is just starting to school. It is also important to help your child make social adjustments before entering school.

The first day of school is here at last and it's a pretty big event for your child. For days, months, and maybe even a year he has probably been saying "when I go to school." But whether he adapts himself to this new situation depends largely on you, his parents, says Alma Jones, child development specialist, Iowa State College. Have you given your youngster the pre-school experiences and attitudes he'll need when he enters school for the first time?

It is up to parents to give their child an accurate picture of what to expect when entering school where everyone needs to think of others, as well as look out for himself. Tell him what he is going to have a chance to learn. Be careful not to paint too rosy a picture of school as a place where the child does nothing but play uninhibited by any rules, warns Mrs. Jones.

Care Of Self

Train your child to take care of himself. Teach him to know his own name, age and address. Help him learn to attend to his own toilet needs and to wash his own hands and face. Give him clothes that are easy to get in and out of without any help, and that are not too different from those worn by others in his room.

Safety rules are especially valuable to children who don't understand the dangers of unsafe habits. Teach your child how to cross the streets safely by looking in both directions, and to obey the commands of older persons who watch traffic at busy corners.

A child's health is one of the most important factors to be checked in preparing for school. He should have a physical examination and have any defects corrected for eyes, ears, nose and throat. Also, teach your child good health habits such as using his handkerchief when he coughs or sneezes, using his own glass to drink from, and not touching the school fountain with his mouth.

Knowing how to share and to get along with other children is very important during preschool days. Your child needs to make social adjustments. Help him to meet other children and adults in a friendly manner without embarrassment, and teach him respect for his own property and that of the school and of other children.

Develop Skills

Help him acquire certain motor skills which will enable him to adjust to school problems and also to hold his own in play situations. See that he can do the creative work that other children do, and can run and jump and keep up with the other youngsters. These skills depend on giving the child a chance to experiment with many materials in play.

Your boy or girl should have a wide background of experiences. A young child in school gets a great thrill in telling about his visit to the zoo, or about the time he watched the trains switching at the railroad yards, or the trip he took when he built sand castles on the beach and played in the ocean. This background experience will help the child to desire to investigate, question and discuss things he has done, and makes him want to continue such interesting learning experiences.

Abovt all, teach your child that school is a wonderful experience and not one to be feared.

FENCE IN WINDBREAK TO KEEP ANIMALS OUT

A livestock and poultry-tight fence around windbreaks is essential to keep animals and poultry from opening a door that will let frigid winter winds come through.

Ed Gardiner, extension forester at Iowa State College, says that livestock and poultry can wreck a good windbreak. By killing just a few trees in a 3-row windbreak, they can make the planting ineffective.

Chickens pick off new buds and expose tree roots by digging out dust baths at the foot of the trees. Geese will completely strip young evergreen foliage.

Gardiner recommends building the fence this fall for windbreaks to be planted next spring. Iowa State College bulletin P88, which tells all about planning, planting and caring for windbreaks, is available at the extension forester's office at the College, or at the county extension directors' offices.

FROSTED SUDAN CAN BE USED AS HAY OR SILAGE

While there is danger of prussic acid poisoning in livestock pastured on sudan grass that's been hit by frost, the sudan can be made into hay or silage that is safe to feed, says Ed Dyas, extension agronomist at Iowa State College.

He cautions against allowing animals to graze on frosted sudan. However, most authorities agree that it's safe to put up frosted sudan or sorghum for hay or silage and then use them as late as possible in the feeding program.

Dark green shoots that appear when plant growth is resumed in sudan or sorghum after frost or drouth are generally blamed for prussic acid poisoning in livestock.

When prussic acid poison strikes, a veterinarian should be called as soon as possible, because death usually comes rapidly. Although an intravenous injection will save the poisoned animal if administered in time, the best way to stop livestock losses from prussic acid poisoning is to keep danger crops fenced off after frost hits, Dyas says.

TAKE STEPS IN FALL TO CHECK SMUT ON CORN

Smut that's now forming on corn ears, leaves and tassels will again menace cornfields next year unless proper steps are taken to check it, reports A. F. Sherf, extension plant pathologist at Iowa State College.

In sweet corn and popcorn, which are usually hardest hit by smut, the disease can be dealt a hard blow by cleaning up all of this year's corn growth during the fall. This is difficult to do with large fields of corn so Sherf recommends fall plowing to cover up the stalks.

Crop rotation will also tend to keep down smut outbreaks. Smut remains alive until the following year in the ball enclosure. Then wind scatters the spores when these balls break open in the spring. If corn is rotated it will be safer.

You'll Want A Portable
CHORE-CLOTHES RACK

Do you have a hard time finding a place to hang up work clothes? A portable chore-clothes rack that can be moved from place to place is a "must" in any farm home.

Many homemakers have lots of trouble finding room for storage of clothing. There just never seems to be enough space anywhere. And every farm needs a place to hang children's and adults' shore clothes, says Naomi Shank, home management specialist at Iowa State College.

This rack for chore clothes is portable and ideal for your home. For greatest convenience locate it near the wash-up center and the door used most often by membersof the family when they come in from chores, school and play. This might be on an enclosed porch, back hall or work room. You might even like a second one in the basement.

Easy To Make

A portable chore-clothes rack is easy to make and inexpensive as well. A saw, hammer screw driver, screws and glue are the only tools actually needed to put it together. Providing convenient storage need not be expensive. This rack, for example, can be made out of either new or scrap lumber.

In making this storage unit, use slatted racks for ventilation and drying of wraps, boots and caps that are cold, wet or damp from perspiration. Plan for ventilation at the top and bottom of each door, if doors are added. Doors really are not necessary. In fact, the family will hang clothes up more regularly if there are no doors.

It's a lot easier to hang chore clothes on hooks than on hangers. Hooks at different heights, a low cap rack for growing children, and a tray for mittens and gloves will save a lot of time in locating articles. Space the hooks to avoid crowding winter wraps.

A low shelf as well as the top shelf is handy for keeping lunch pails and little aricles out of the way. Your children will appreciate having a hook all to themselves and they will be more willing to hang up their own clothes, too.

Boot Shelf

Build the rack with a raised boot shelf so you can clean the floor below without moving the boots. To make cleaning easier, keep 4 to 6 inches cleaning clearance between the floor and boot rack. Also, to simplify the cleaning-up problem even more, build the rack over a floor drain if possible.

This sturdily built chore-clothes rack, when equipped with casters, can be moved from one house to another or from one location to another within the same house according to seasonal needs. If such a rack is built into a new or remodeled house, casters may be omitted and the dimensions adjusted to fit the space and the number of garments.

The Iowa State College Extension Service has prepared information containing the bill of materials needed and the directions for making this portable rack. This material may be secured from the Bulletin Office, Iowa State College, or from your county extension office.

Electricity Does Away With Corn Shoveling

Corn shoveling days are on the way out for a lot of Iowa farmers with electricity. They're putting kilowatts to work and elevating 100 bushels of corn into the bin for the price of a penny.

This is only the cost of electricity, but Harold Beaty, Iowa State College extension agricultural engineer, says that 1,750 bushels of corn can be elevated for $1.12. This allows for the cost of the motor and controls and it's based on the expected life of the equipment. The expense can be reduced a lot more if the motor is used as a power source for other work like grinding and elevating small grain.

An electric motor mounted for grain elevating does away with the time and bother of lining up the belt between tractor and elevator. The tractor can be left hitched to the wagon if it's being used to haul grain, and no pulleys need to be attached nor any equipment removed to get the tractor ready to connect to the elevator. So besides saving power costs, an electric motor saves farmers both time and work.

Garner Saddle Club To Hold Horse Show Sept. 17

FAN IN ATTIC REMOVES HOT AIR, COOLS HOUSE

It's like sleeping alongside a hot water bottle in the summer time." Thats how Harold Beaty, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, explains the effect hot attics have on sleeping comfort during summer months.

After blistering sun beats down on the roof during the day, attic temperatures rises to 130 degrees or more. Then when Iowans try to sleep at night this heat radiates down over them. So Beaty suggests that ventilation is a good way to make summer sleeping more comfortable.

A large fan in the attic can whisk out hot air and replace it with cooler, outside air. Night air is usually from 15 to 20 degrees cooler than daytime air. So speedy air replacement is important when families want the benefit of cooler air. A large fan placed in the attic not only removes the hot air, but it sucks air through the whole house and shoots it out through louvers in the attic.

One of the most common mistakes is to use an attic fan that is too small, the engineer warns. For the average house the attic fan should have the same capacity as the cubic air space in the house. That means all of the air in the house can be removed within a minute. In a small house the fan should change air 1½ times per minute. Large, slow-turning fans will ventilate the house and theyll do it quietly.

Electricity costs for running these fans ranged from $4.47 to $27 in Texas experiments, depending on the size of the fan. The 55 fans tested were from 30-inch to 54-inch sizes.

Take A Look At

FALL FASHIONS

It's time again to take a look at fall fashions. Again this year the "casual" look will be featured. Fall clothes are coming in so it's well to start planning for your fall wardrobe.

It's never too early to start thinking about fall fashions, so the wise shopper will want to visit her ready-to-wear department soon. The fall styles are coming in now so if you preview "what's new" you will know how to round out last year's wardrobe and bring it up to date.

"Fortunately, styles are much the same this year as they were last," explains Lucille Rea, extension clothing specialist, Iowa State College. The casual look will be very popular, with flannel, corduroy and wool jersey as the big three in fabrics.

Wool Jersey

Wool jerseys are back on the clothing racks in dresses, blouses and skirts. Jersey blouses with eyecatching details are especially popular. There are all types—some with long sleeves, three-quarter length sleeves and sleeveless styles. Some of them will even have a sweater look with knitted cuffs and collars and waistband that comes below the waist. Big and little pockets, collars and cuffs are being made of velveteen and other contrasting fabrics, some with braid trim or trimming of white pique. Many small smoky buttons will accent collars and cuffs as well as being used for front and neck openings.

Skirts this year are narrower but not pencil-slim. The average skirt length will be determined by what is becoming to you. Wrap-around skirts provide walking ease and still retain a slender line are very popular for the coming season.

The big favorites in fabrics are flannels trimmed with bright colors, gay tartan plaids, velveteen, tweeds, corduroy and wool jerseys. Combinations of textures are coming into the spotlight. Tartan plaids, bright wool jersey and rich velveteens combined with flannels are very popular, says Miss Rea. These texture combinations are a hit when linked by one color or color scheme.

New exciting color for fall are a plum purple, pine green, dull gold, wine, carmine reds, warm browns, copper tones, grays, bronze and burnt orange. Emphasis again is on navy blue. Black is very good and will be used in big checked tweeds.

Belts And Trims

It's the little things that count in '50 fashions. Designers are making use of leather pipings, bandings and waistbands on all the basic fall fabrics. Braided belts and other braided trims, velveteens, collars, cuffs, belts, and bands for rich contrast, ribbing used in new ways, and lots of new scarf-tie tricks will make your fall clothes take on a new look.

Faille and crepe are "tops" for the dressy dresses. Rich yarn-dyed satins, taffetas and velveteens are tremendous favorites for college date dresses, while metallics will be used in much greater variety.

The general trend this fall is for a continuation of this summer's softer, sheerer fabrics. Rich satins and taffetas along with the many novelty fabrics are outstanding for evening fashions. Softer fabrics for everyday as well as evening wear will be in demand.

There is a definite Spanish influence this year too. Dancer's ruffles dipping low in the back, boleros, and many braid, tassel and gold-colored metal decorations show this influence. Spanish lace will decorate evening gowns and also be used for insects in the new low-neckline dressy suits.

CARBON DIOXIDE FORMATION MAY MAKE YOUR SILO DANGEROUS

Farm silos can be a death trap, warns Hancock County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

The main hazard of work in the silo is carbon dioxide. It shuts off vital oxygen that's necessary for human life.

Carbon dioxide is a gas that's formed when silage ferments. It is heavier than air so it settles above the silage and pushes the air upward unless there are openings to the outside at the silage level. Since carbon dioxide is heavier than air, it will "flow" out of the silo if a low door is opened right above the silage.

Open all silo doors down to the level of the silage before entering a silo, Henderson cautions. This will be hard to do during silo filling. But if the blower on the cutter is run for a few minutes it will blow out the carbon dioxide and make it safe for person to go inside.

Anyone who is going inside a silo to clean it out should first lower a kerosene lantern. There's no danger of explosion, Henderson says, but if the flame goes out when the lantern has been lowered that's a sign that there is not enough oxygen present. If lower doors can't be opened, the carbon dioxide can be baled out with a bucket or basket that's fastened to a rope. Carbon dioxide, because of its weight, can be bucketed out of a silo much the same as water.

The lantern test should be used before entering any hole that is deeper than the persons height who is entering that hole. Even a cistern or trench silo can be dangerous Henderson reports.

Carbon dioxide formation will start as soon as silage is put into the silo. A dangerous amount of gas can accumulate while the blower has been stopped over the noon hour or during the night.

The silo is an especially dangerous trap after silage has been allowed to settle over the weekend. Then the silage level is often lower than farmers expect it to be and there are no open doors at the silage level to release the carbon dioxide.

FEED DRY COWS GRAIN FOR MORE MILK LATER

Dairy cows will pay big dividends for grain fed during the time they are dried up, reminds Bob Finchman, Iowa State College extension dairy husbandman.

Cows that are kept in good flesh while they are dry will put more milk in the bucket after freshening. It's important to remember, Fincham says, that the new calf makes two-thirds of its total growth during the last 2 months of a cow's pregnancy. This means extra feed is required if the cow is expected to produce a good calf and keep up her body maintenance.

During pregnancy cows have three jobs to do, the extension dairyman explains. He refers to milk production, body maintenance and calf production. Dairy cows need a full ration of feed to efficiently carry out these three jobs. Finsham recommends using the cow's production as a yardstick in figuring out how much feed she needs.

Dairy cattle usually produce more per year if they are dried up for 6 to 8 weeks before freshening. That's the period of the fastest calf development.

GOOD CITIZEN

Principles of Good Citizenship Must Be Practiced in Own Home

This is the last of a series of 10 articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

The ninth promise of a good citizen: I will practice and teach the principles of good citizenship right in my own home.

Our country, when you come right down to it, is just a lot of families.

In the family are cradled the cardinal virtues that enable good families to add up to a great nation—standards of conduct, respect for the rights and property of others, loyalty, health, tolerance, cooperation, self-reliance, good breeding and a sense of the fitness of things.

In principle, the family must be the keystone, the microcosm, the atom-that-can't-be-split of our republic.

Democracy must be based on homes where the interests of man, woman and child receive equal consideration.

Whether in a crowded rooming house or on the farm, the answer must come from men and women of intelligence and good will who look on the successful maintenance of a family as one of the greatest acts of good citizenship.

Just as democracy starts in the home as an obligation, it ends there as a reward. To the degree that all the other duties of citizenship have been fulfilled, your home will be your castle, secure from the threat of confiscation, and those in it safe from detention camps and firing squads.

OTIS WIESE, editor of McCall's Magazine, said in an article, "The home, we all agree, is the foundation of the social structure. And women are the bed rock under that foundation. Any woman who achieves success as a mother has a more pervasive influence over the next generation than any cell of Communists. And her mother's mite certainly outweighs in social significance the manufacture of millions of can openers.

"The home, in effect, is the transmission belt of our culture, for it is there that the child learns its first lessons. It is the place where our social health is either insured or undermined insidiously . . ."

* * *

IN CONCLUDING this series of articles, one way to measure the results of our system is to add up our physical and cultural gains in everything from bathtubs to symphony orchestras. Although it has only 6 per cent of the world's population and less than 6 per cent of the world's land area, the United States has:

Seventy-two per cent of the world's motor vehicles, one for every four people. 286,000 miles of paved roads.

231,481 places of worship, representing 55 religions or denominations.

More than 61 per cent of the world's telephones, one for every 4½ people.

209,235 public schools, 1,720 colleges and universities — schools for nearly everybody.

Forty-eight per cent of the world's radios, one for every 2½ people.

Ninety-two per cent of the world's bathtubs, one for every six people.

6,511 public hospitals.

Eighty-five per cent of the world's commercial air traffic.

258,465 miles of railroad trackage, more than all Europe, including Russia in Asia.

Sixty-four major museums of art, science and history. Twenty-three symphony orchestras. 650 music societies.

31,015,000 homes wired for electricity.

12,578 newspapers and magazines. Nearly 2,000 radio stations.

Fifty million savings accounts; 200 million life insurance policies.

This article is Chapter 9 and the last of a series of ten from the booklet "Good Citizen" produced by The American Heritage Foundation, sponsors of the freedom train. A complete book may be obtained by sending 25 cents to The American Heritage Foundation, 25 West 45th Street, New York, N. Y.

Star Dust
STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

ABBY LEWIS appears regularly on four NBC shows—"Road of Life," "Eternal Light," "The Big Story" and "Storyteller's Playhouse," portrays cooks, crooks, young girls and old women with equal ease. She sometimes does two very different characters on the same air show. Abby gives the credit for this ability to her father, who was a preacher and missionary in New Mexico when she was a child. She often tagged along on his missionary trips, and afterward impersonated the people she'd met that day.

"The Goldbergs," which has already been on radio, television and the stage, and is now being made into a picture by Paramount, will crop up next as a novel. Gertrude Berg, its author and star, will write the book.

"Information Please," granddaddy of the quiz shows, might better have remained in retirement, if the programs heard since its return to the air are an indication of what we may expect. That painful, futile effort to be funny gets pretty tiresome. In comparison with shows like NBC's "Who Said That?" and American Broadcasting's "Cliche Club" it comes out badly.

THE FICTION CORNER

STRANGE SPECTACLES

By Richard H. Wilkinson

ON THE MORNING of Aug 4th, Sandra Hunter glanced through her bedroom window and saw a strange spectacle. Between the great white house and the street was a wide expanse of lawn, and this lawn was at present occupied by a young man pushing a lawnmower.

3-Minute Fiction

Sandra didn't know what to make of it. She remembered that her mother and father were away for the weekend and that the servants were in the rear of the house.

By the time she had dressed and ventured outdoors, the young man had finished his mowing and was resting in the shade of the veranda.

"Will you kindly explain what this is all about?" said Sandra.

"I just mowed your lawn as it should be mowed."

"Should be mowed?" Sandra puckered up her brow. "What do you mean, 'should be mowed'? Who are you? And where is Rufus, our gardener?"

"I'm Jerry Leonard. I bribed your gardener this morning to let me mow your lawn. You see, I have to drive by your house every morning on my way to work, and every morning I've noticed that Rufus cuts the lawn unevenly."

"Well of all things!"

"Besides, I've been wanting to meet you since last June."

"Meet me?"

"Yes. My mother and I moved into the old Saunders place last June and, the day after, I saw you and decided I had to meet you.

"I've been hoping you'd speak to me for ever so long," Sandra said, "but you gave the impression of being rather high hat."

I noticed your lawn and thought of the idea of bribing Rufus. It was like killing two birds with one stone." He grinned. "I knew your father and mother were going to be away."

"Why, the very idea! I—I can't believe you're serious."

Jerry Leonard scratched his head. "I was never more serious in my life. Shucks! I'm sorry if you feel the way you look."

"The way I look!" Sandra began to wonder how she did look.

A dozen retorts came to mind but they all seemed flat and inadequate, almost silly. She hesitated for an instant longer and then turned abruptly and strode back to the house.

Jerry Leonard watched her go and into his face there came a look of disappointment.

THROUGHOUT the day Jerry was conscious of a forlorn misery. All his carefully formed plans had proved fruitless. At 5 o'clock he drove home via a route that did not take him past the Hunter estate. Leaving his coupe outside in the drive he entered the cottage by the rear door and found a note on the kitchen table, left there by his mother, which advised him that she had gone to a church supper and that if he didn't want to come too he'd find some warmed-over things in the oven.

Jerry moodily ate the warmed-over things and afterward stepped outside to smoke a cigarette. He was about to ease himself comfortably onto the doorstep when he chanced to glance toward the drive. He blinked, rubbed his eyes, swallowed. "What the devil!" he said.

As he approached, the girl who had been washing the automobile's wheels straightened up and stood off, to survey her work. It was Sandra Hunter.

"What the dickens," said Jerry, "are you up to?"

"Oh," she said. "Hello." She gestured toward the coupe. "Dirty wheels. Been getting on my nerves for weeks."

"Wha—what?" said Jerry.

"I've noticed you driving by every day from my bedroom window. Rest of the car looks fine, but you always seem to forget the wheels. Very annoying."

Jerry puckered up his brow. He peered at the girl very intently. His face was grave. He said, "Is that all?"

"No," said Sandra. "I've been hoping you'd speak to me for ever so long, but you gave the impression of being well, rather high hat. This seemed like a logical method to promote friendly relations," she grinned. "You see, I knew your mother was away."

Hearty Meat Dishes

FALL'S THE SEASON with the crisp, cool mornings, splashes of red and yellow on the tree tops, the back to school parade, football games and, of course, bigger and better appetites!

It's time to start thinking of those bigger and heartier meals, those which are built around stick-to-the-ribs quailty like meats.

Our recipes in the column today borrow seasoning tricks from abroad as well as from regional cooks. No matter what kinds of foods please the family, these are bound to be a success because they're so extra good.

HERE'S AN American version of a famous Italian dish that's very popular among folks in this country because it's nicely seasoned. The list of ingredients is rather long, but the dish is not difficult to prepare. Serve with crisp French bread and a tossed green salad, and you'll have a meal to repeat often because it's truly special.

Veal Scallopini
(Serves 6)

1½ pounds veal steak, cut ½ inch thick
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
½ cup salad oil
¼ cup lemon juice
1 clove garlic
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ cup flour
¼ cup shortening
1 medium onion, sliced thin
1 green pepper, cut in strips
1 can (10 ounce) chicken bouillon
½ pound mushrooms
1 tablespoon butter
6 pimiento olives, sliced

Cut veal into serving pieces. Make sauce by combining salt, paprika, oil, lemon juice, garlic, mustard, nutmeg and sugar. Beat thoroughly. Lay veal flat in baking pan and pour sauce over it. Turn meat to coat with sauce. Let stand for 15 minutes. Remove garlic. Lift veal from sauce and dip into flour. Brown in heated shortening in skillet. Add onion and green pepper. Combine bouillon and remainder of sauce and pour over veal. Cover and cook slowly until veal is tender, about 40 minutes. Clean and slice mushrooms. Brown lightly in butter. Add mushrooms and olives to veal, basting meat as you add them. Cook for five minutes longer. Serve veal with sauce.

FROM NEW ENGLAND comes a full-of-flavor pot roast. Try it for a hearty meal with fluffy mashed potatoes, cole slaw salad with soured cream dressing and fruit cobbler.

Yankee Pot Roast
(Serves 8)

3-4 pound pot roast of beef
3 tablespoons lard or meat drippings
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup sliced onions
2 tablespoons water
1 minced, garlic clove
8 peppercorns
¼ cup vinegar

In a heavy covered kettle, melt lard. Add roast and brown slowly and thoroughly on all sides, allowing about 30 minutes for the process. When browned, add salt, pepper, onions and water. Simmer three to four hours slowly on low heat until meat is tender. About 45 minutes before meat is tender, add garlic, peppercorns and vinegar. When meat is tender, remove it to hot platter and make gravy from drippings.

* * *

FROM DOWN SOUTH comes the recipe for these pork chops which are served with rice and creole sauce. The menu can be rounded out with mixed green salad with French dressing to which a little curry is added, crusty rolls and an apricot whip with custard sauce.

Pork Chops a la Dixie
(Serves 6)

6 loin or rib chops, cut 1-inch thick
Salt and pepper

In hot frying pan, brown chops slowly and thoroughly. Season chops with salt and pepper. Add creole sauce and cover; cook slowly until tender, about one hour. Serve with fluffy rice and sauce.

Creole Sauce: Heat together 2 cups tomato juice, 1½ tablespoons worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, dash of tabasco sauce, 1 teaspoon lemon juice and ¼ cup chopped green pepper.

RAGOUT is the French word for stew, and here is the glorified version inspired by that country.

Ragout de Veau
(Serves 6)

2 slices bacon
1 large onion, sliced
3 green onions, chopped
3 tablespoons butter or substitute
2 pounds boneless veal, cut in 1½ inch cubes
2 tablespoons flour
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon oregano
½ cup water
1 cup sour cream
Parsley and chives, chopped

Cut bacon into one-inch pieces. Cook and stir in heavy skillet until lightly cooked but not brown. Add onions and butter. Cook and stir until onions are cooked but not brown. Dip veal in flour mixed with salt, pepper and oregano. Add to skillet and brown. Add water; cover and simmer for an hour, being careful not to burn. When veal is fork tender, push to one side. Stir sour cream into drippings. Stir all ingredients together, cover and heat for 15 minutes to blend flavors.

Several sprigs of parsley, snipped with scissors and added to the cream sauce for creamed chicken in a casserole will add lots of color and fine flavor to it.

For those cubed or minute steaks which you broil or pan-broil, add a sauce made of equal parts of melted butter and chili sauce. No cooking needed.

In addition to just plain bananas and orange sections with coconut for ambrosia desserts, add some canned fruit cocktail also, and you'll multiply flavor and color.

LYNN SAYS:
Good Flavors Make Favorites of Simple Foods

If the family shows signs of getting weary of chocolate pudding, try serving it with coffee-flavored custard sauce. You may add instant coffee to the sauce, or make it with part of the liquid, leftover coffee.

Cream cheese and soft maple sugar make a delightfully different spread for lunch box sandwiches or for dainty tea time snacks. A nut bread with this spread is certain to bring calls for seconds.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

Uncle Charlie's Luck Is Bad, Bandit Crosses Him Up

By BILLY ROSE

Last Friday night on the way home from his weekly pinochle session, my Uncle Charlie was held up a few blocks from his home on Allen Street and a wallet containing $13 was taken from him. This misadventure, strangely enough, has made my Aunt Frieda very happy, and with your leave and license, I'd like to tell you why . . .

To begin with, to hear my uncle tell it, Frieda is crazy like a fox about most things, but when it comes to fortune telling and allied superstitions she's crazy like a crazy. This, of course, in Charlie's own words, "drives him to destruction," particularly when my aunt shells out good money for such charms and amulets as lucky horse-tail hairs and pieces of string with seven magic knots.

"I can't understand," I once heard him tell her, "how a distinct twenty-century type like you could potsky around with such superstitions."

Billy Rose

"Century, schmentury," Frieda answered. "What was good enough by my grandmother is good enough by me."

"So why didn't you marry your grandfather?"

"So when I look at you, that's who I'm thinking I married."

* * *

THE MATTER CAME to a crisis last Friday when Charlie arrived home from the shop and Frieda asked him for 10 dollars.

"Only last week I am giving you 10 dollars," he exploded. "What you making, a down payment on a Cadillac?"

"A catalogue I am not needing," Frieda sassed back. "Today I am purchasing from a certain Gypsy a brass fish with the sign from Zoroaster which is absolute guaranteed to make a party healthy, wealthy and wise, and also rich!"

Charlie examined the brass object. "To me it looks like a tin herring," he said. "Where is living this Gypsy?"

"In the back of a store on Suffolk street, and her I am trusting complete," said Frieda. "F'rinstance, when Mrs. Feitelson was expecting, the Gypsy told her to sew up the stuffed derma with black thread for a boy and white thread for a girl, and when she used the black, you saw what happened —a boy."

"It occasional takes place," said my uncle patiently, "that a boy comes in the world without black thread in the stuffed derma."

The upshot of the argument was a decision to put the magical fish to a practical test, and when Charlie went out that night for his weekly pinochle session, the good-luck charm was in his wallet. If he lost, it was agreed Frieda would stop patronizing Gypsy establishments; if he made a killing, however, he was to have more faith in her theories.

WELL, AS IT turned out, my uncle won ten dollars which, added to the three he started out with, gave him a take-home total of thirteen. Reluctant to face gloating Frieda, he took a roundabout way home.

A few doors from a drugstore on Rivington Street, a hoodlum stepped out of an alley and stuck him up.

"Could you return, please, the pocketbook?" said Charlie "Is genuine alligator leather."

"Scram," said the hold-up man, "or I'll bust in your head."

"A pleasure," said my uncle politely. "Cherry-ho."

When Charlie got home, Frieda was considerably shaken by the story of the stick-up, and was forced to admit that the brass geegaw was a flop. But the next morning she gave my uncle the horse laugh when the mailman dropped off a small parcel with the wallet in it, its contents intact. There was also an unsigned note.

"Dear Mister — When I see you got the Fish of Zoroaster, I decide to send everything back because I have dealings with such fishes before and don't want no part of them. Besides, when I count up the money I find 13 dollars exactly. I know when I'm licked."

"See?" said my aunt. "On account of the brass fish, everything is turning out hunky-totsy."

"Maybe," said my uncle, "but to me it still smells from herring."

DASH FOR COVER . . . Two American soldiers, somewhere in Korea, run for safety after their egins to burn in a ditch. The fighting continued violent as the United States insisted that any Nations peace program for Korea must include among its objectives creation of a unified and in- ent country. Two Master Golfers Should Meet

By GRANTLAND RICE

IF THERE IS A NATURAL in the golf world today it would be a meeting of Ben Hogan of the U.S.A. and Bobby Locke of South Africa.

Hogan is U. S. open champion. Locke is British open champion. Hogan has won the last two opens he played in, 1948 and 1950. Locke has won the last two British opens. Hogan has been acknowledged as the one to beat in most of the leading tournaments he has entered, before and after his accident. Locke has not only ruled South Africa and Great Britain but he has also left a wider trail of devastation through the United States than any foreigner that ever played—including Harry Vardon and Ted Ray.

It was Bobby Locke who lured Sammy Snead to South Africa a few years ago and gave Virginia Sammy a steady walloping over this faraway terrain.

Both Hogan and Locke are great golfers. Their styles are wide apart but each is a master of fundamentals. Both are consistently straight off the tee, but I like Hogan's iron play better. Locke has a shade around the greens where he can turn out near miracles on certain occasions.

Hogan, Snead and Mangrum have dominated play in the United States this season and the game over here can stand another face—the same being Bobby Locke's. Hogan, with his motion-picture work ahead, has a busy schedule. But the call to contest usually finds Ben more than eager to return to action.

Locke has now made his peace with the American P.G.A. and he can find far richer hunting over here than England offers at the moment.

We have had similar duels in the past—Hagen vs. Jones — Hagen vs. Sarazen, Barnes and Hagen, to mention only a few.

The Sarazen - Hagen clash was the most spectacular. These two had the better right at that time to be called the two top men. Both Hogan and Locke are fine competitors, as well as being consistently fine golfers. It would be a new boost for general golfing interest to bring them together in a series of matches. In this connection it might also be mentioned that Lloyd Mangrum lately has been setting a dizzy pace.

Red Sox and 1950

Just about mid-July last year the Red Sox were 12 or 13 games off the pace. They were that far back of the Yankees. They are not quite that bad this season, but with Ted Williams injured they face a terrific job if they hope to better their position. So far under two different managers they have been an ineffective lot.

Only their hitting has kept to the high road. They passed the Fourth of July with a team batting average of .305. This was by all odds the highest mark in both leagues. It is high enough to win two pennants, with only fair pitching. Here's the main trouble with the Red Sox—if you care to listen. There are three departments of baseball — at least main departments. These are pitching, hitting and fielding.

The Red Sox are the supreme hitters of the game. They have second-class pitching. They have close to second-class fielding. For example, their infield is a powerhouse at bat. It isn't any too hot defensively. In fact, it is second division defensively. I've heard too many opponents speak about the number of easy hits that slip through the Red Sox infield.

This infield has power—offensive power—but no defensive speed. It can't cover ground to choke off opposing rallies. Once again I get this information from other ball teams.

This makes it tough on the pitchers. They have hits charged against them that a Rizzuto would kill off—or another faster-moving infielder would knock down.

The trouble is that too many people look only at batting averages—at home runs and runs driven in—where the Red Sox excel. They overlook pitching. They overlook defense. They overlook spirit.

They all say they'd rather play for Tom Yawkey. Who wouldn't? The Red Sox have taken four years to discover that power alone doesn't rule baseball.

LaMotta and Robinson

It remains to be seen whether or not Jake LaMotta can be lured into the ring with Ray Robinson. But this is the only fight of any importance that could be made this summer.

Tiberio Mitri failed to come up to earlier predictions. The Italian is a good boxer—not a great one—but he can't punch.

If a fighter hasn't a knockout punch he must at least have enough kick in either his left or right fist.

It will be an entirely different matter in facing Robinson, a better boxer than Mitri and a far different puncher.

Jim Norris has worked hard enough to keep the fight game going but at the moment it is badly stalled as far as any outdoor action is concerned.

Prisoner Refuses to Serve Time Without Pet Gopher

FORT WAYNE, IND.—City and county jailers had a problem on their hands with John Clayton, who brought a gopher along with him when he was arrested for nonsupport.

The gopher slipped out of Clayton's pocket and the other prisoners protested until the jailers put the pet in a pail.

When Clayton was transferred to the county jail he refused to go without his gopher.

Select Boulder, Colorado, For High Altitude Study

Physics and astrophysics — natural sciences that have captured public imagination since the atomic-power revelations—are taking to the hills these days. The selected site for the proposed new radio-propagation laboratory of the U.S. bureau of standards is in lofty Colorado, the state with the country's highest average elevation of 6,800 feet.

Boulder, Colorado, where the laboratory is to be built is 5,350 feet up, notes the National Geographic society. This resort and college town, home of the University of Colorado, is cradled in the high Rockies, about 25 air miles northwest of Denver.

Such mountain heights offer special advantages to scientists studying the mysterious actions of cosmic rays and the manifestations of the sun as it affects radio communications.

The greater the altitude, it has been found, the stronger are the cosmic rays—those invisible, highly penetrating particles that are constantly bombarding the earth. Hence, a few years ago, a permanent cosmic ray station was set up by cooperating universities on the summit of Colorado's 14,260-foot Mount Evans. It is 36 miles from Boulder.

At Climax, Colorado, 85 miles southwest of Boulder, is the Harvard - Colorado university coronagraph. This apparatus is a specially designed telescope which produces artificial eclipse conditions by blacking out direct sunlight, and thus permits scientific observations and photographs of the sun's surrounding gaseous glow.

Why Rubber Bounces

What makes a rubber ball bounce? This is due to its elasticity, which is the ability of rubber to restore itself to shape after it has been deformed. Where the ball touches the ground, the rubber is pushed toward the center. Then the elastic forces push it back, raising it off the ground again. Some energy is lost, by frictional heating inside the rubber. So even in a vacuum, with no air resistance, the ball could not bounce as high as the point from which it was dropped. Materials like ordinary putty are inelastic. They will not bounce because when they are deformed they tend to stay that way.

United Nation's Building

Along the banks of East river on the Island of Manhattan between 42nd and 48th streets the Secretariat building of the United Nations is towering to the sky as workmen are rushing it to completion so that it can be occupied before the end of the present year. The structure will be 39 stories high. It is one of four units that will complete the headquarters as a "workshop for world peace." Contracts for the other three units have not yet been let but it is believed they will be completed during 1951.

Eniwetok Atoll Ranks High Among Battered Land Spots

When the history of the 1941-1950 decade is written, Eniwetok Atoll will take top rank among the most bludgeoned of Pacific land spots. Typhoons, World War II bombs, and atomic weapon tests will have pooled their awesome power to put it there.

Eniwetok, soon again to feel atom blasts in its role as proving ground for the Atomic Energy commission, has already been battered by all three of these forces in the now waning decade.

This northwest outpost of the scattered Marshall Islands, 2,725 miles southwest of Honolulu and about the same distance southeast of Tokyo, was home to 138 island natives two years ago when its destiny in the atomic program was announced. The inhabitants were moved to Ujelang, 150 miles southwest of Eniwetok, a few weeks before the first secret atomic tests at Eniwetok in the spring of 1948.

They left with little regret, since the main islets containing Japanese installations had been razed to their coral bases and denuded of trees by heavy bombardment in mid-February, 1944. That attack culminated in a quick conquest of Eniwetok by U. S. amphibious forces.

Cigarette Use Tapers Off After Long Upward Trend

Although U.S. smokers used three and one-half billion more cigarettes in 1949 than in 1948 there was a decrease of about one package of cigarettes per capita says the U.S. department of agriculture. The bureau of agricultural economics reports suggests that the demand for cigarettes may now be leveling off after a series of record breaking years.

Last year, the BAE reports, that the increase of three and one-half billion in use of cigarettes was about 1 per cent, bringing the total for the year to 352 billion. But population increased more than 1 per cent. The increase in cigarettes for the first half of the year was about 2 per cent, and for the last half was just about even with the 1948 consumption for those months. With an estimated population increase of more than two and one-half million, this figures to a per capita supply of 2,435 cigarettes in 1949 as compared with 2,455 in 1948.

The steady and sometimes sharp upward trend in cigarette consumption in the United States has been under way for many years, the BAE records show. Only one drop in civilian consumption has been noted. In 1944 the civilian use ran below the 1943 record. But the bureau says that "when allowance is made for the great volume consumed by large numbers in the armed forces and overseas personnel, total consumption in 1944 substantially exceeded that of 1943."

During and since the war, cigarette smoking has continued to gain. The figures for the last half of 1949 are the first indication of a break in the climb.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Pick Your Winner

Joe Purdy and family drove down to the Iowa State Fair a couple of weeks ago.

"Greatest stock show in the world," Joe reports.

"I got a special kick out of the way those exhibitors stick up for their particular breed. I heard a Hereford cattle owner arguing, hammer and tongs, with an Angus owner. I couldn't help chuckling, because both men looked pretty prosperous. So both breeds must be right good."

Isn't that true of most people's tastes and preferences right here in our town too? Neighbor Ed may prefer roses in his garden, while I like perennials. Ed is a great believer in buttermilk, and I prefer a temperate glass of beer. There'd be no more sense in our getting hot and bothered over such preferences than there would be in a Hereford man taking picks on an Angus man.

Both are right. And in this good, free country we can be thankful that we can always make our own choice.

FROST LIKELY TO GET SOME CORN

North Central Iowa May

A big question among Iowa farmers this fall is whether their corn will mature before frost. R. H. Shaw, agricultural climatologist at Iowa State College, has been working with figures the last few days, and he's come up with some results that show what chances Iowa corn has of maturing before killing frosts.

From the U.S. Weather Bureau Shaw obtained information about the chances of having frost on different dates throughout the state. Then he estimated what percent of the corn would be left to mature at that particular time.

Chance of Early Frost

For example, the northwestern part of Iowa usually can figure on a 50-50 chance of having frost by October 1, according to weather bureau figures. Shaw says that about 92 percent of the corn in that section of the state ordinarily would be mature by then. But there's always the chance of early frost. The story then is different. According to data copiled by the U. S. Weather Bureau for more than 30 years, there's one chance out of four that northwestern Iowans will see frost by Sept. 23. Shaw estimates that 83 percent of their corn will still be immature at that time.

Moving to central Iowa, the climatologist reports that there is a 50-50 chance of having frost by Oct. 4, but he expects the average corn to be all matured by then. By Sept. 24, there is one chance out of four that there will be widespread frost damage. This would catch nearly 70 percent of the corn immature.

Southern Iowa Safest

Southern Iowa can expect to be mostly safe on the average date of the first frost, Oct. 9th. Shaw says that the average fields of corn there should be well matured then.

It's north central Iowa that may be hit the hardest if figures are any indication. Shaw estimates that about 13 percent of the corn will be immature when there's a 50-50 chance of frost hitting. This chance ratio occurs on October 3rd.

The climatologist estimates maturity of corn by adding 50 days to the period when 75 percent of the corn is in the silk stage. He forecasts maturity dates for corn all over Iowa in this way, since about 300 fields throughout the state were checked for the silk stage.

Maximum Dry Weight

Shaw has found through three years of experiment that corn reaches its maximum dry weight 50 days after silking. Results were the same regardless of whether the varieties tested were early or late.

Maximum dry weight or maturity does not mean that the corn can be safely cribbed. It refers to the period in corn development when the inflow of plant food to the kernels has stopped.

Mr. And Mrs. Dwight Hummel Entertained Guests Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Hummel entertained to a 4:00 o'clock dinner Sunday afternoon Mrs. Hulda Johnson Greene of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Johnson and daughter of Renwick; O. D. Potter and family and George Johnson of Mason City; Art Johnson, Art Kudje and family and Mrs. Hilma Johnson and Bertha of Klemme. In the evening Melvin Pearson and family and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Pearson came and showed the moving pictures Carl Pearson had taken on their trip to Sweden last year.

Klemme's newest addition to Main Street is Thada's Shopping Center. This fine building is a double-front tile-brick building 48 feet wide by 88 feet in depth. A center entrance is a feature with one door leading into the store and the door to the left being the exit door.

At the rear of the building is a six-room apartment, home of the Ed. Thompson family consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Thompson and their two daughters. The apartment has three bedrooms, living room, bath room and modern kitchen There are storage closets for the bedrooms. A stairway leads to the basement for the laundry.

The interior of the store has a light green mottled tile floor throughout and well lighted with florescent lights. Low-type steel shelving and islands provide space for the large stock of groceries. Modern refrigerated equipment includes a combination walk-in and reach-in storage, refrigerated meat case, frozen foods case and ice cream cabinet.

The store features self-serve and the isles are wide to provide plenty of room for shoppers pushing the carts around. A check-out counter is provided near the entrance and exit of the store in front.

The dry goods and notion department shelving, tables and display cases are finished in light green.

TERRACE DEMONSTRATION VERY SUCCESSFUL

The terracing demonstrations on the farm owned by Jake Blumer was very successful with 105 attending. The demonstration under the direction of Vernon Moss and Ernest Fernly S.C.S. technicians was completed on approximately 1800 feet of terraces. These were constructed by three of the machinery dealers in Hancock County. A whirlwind terracer was used by the Urich Implement Co. of Garner. A disc plow was used by the Ford tractor Co. of Britt managed by Matt Harbacheck. The Ford also used a moldboard plow on another terrace. The Case dealer in Garner, Joe Lamp, used a moldboard plow to construct his terrace. The finished products of the three companies were all checked by S.C.S. engineers as very satisfactory terraces.

These were level terraces used on soil that will soak up a lot of the water falling in the area. They will hold and conserve this moisture for crop growth rather than have it run off rapidly causing erosion.

Others assisting with the demonstration were Joe Kelly an employee of the Hancock Co. extension director, was on hand to answer questions and assist with the program.

Anyone wishing to see these terraces may do so by contacting Mr. Blumer at his farm. This farm has a Soil Conservation Plan and Mr. Blumer is following this plan with Crop Rotations, Contouring, Drainage, Terraces and Contour farming. Any of these practices may be observed at the farm.

Mr. Thorgesen, District Chairman from Lake Mills will be the speaker. All interested are invited to attend.

Legion And Auxiliary Plan Skating Party Sept. 27

Next Wednesday evening, on September 27 should be rather eventful at the Roller Rink at Forest City. That is the evening that the local Legion Auxiliary and their families take over. No doubt there will be some experts, and then . . . Thursday morning should see a few cripples on the streets. It is hoped that none of the injuries will be permanently disabling.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Here the highway story ends, or detours, at least - for this writer has been recalled to active duty with the Air Force, So, what follows is an attempt to pay in a public manner a few of the debts of gratitude we owe, a somewhat easier trick than paying our private debts, we freely admit.

Thanks, first, to the newspapers who have seen fit to print this column. By doing so, they contributed much of the most valuable property any newspaper has - its column inches - in the hope of saving lives on our highways.

And, while it has never been a practice to publicize names, this last one would not be complete without the name of Al W. Kahl. During his time as state safety commissioner he was all a public servant could have been - and then some.

Pearl W. McMurry, who became commissioner Sept. 1, has already shown the interest and energy needed in a job that is far from a rest in the shade.

And, to Governor William S. Beardsley, thanks for his real sincerety in calling into being the Iowa safety congress, and for his interest and support in the movement. It's been stimulating. For, to the people involved daily in the promotion of safety, the business sometimes comes to seem about as profitable as passing advertising handbills in a graveyard.

There are many more to be thanked - Chief S. N. Jespersen and the highway patrolmen who supplied many of our past stories - but space is short.

Don't listen too sharply for the sound of an ax being ground in all this, for we don't believe it is there. It is simply that we have had the opportunity to work with some men who have honesty of purpose, and we wanted to mention it.

Let the highway story end with this bare comment one Iowan made on his accident report recently. In one respect, it holds the hope that all things eventually will come together. He said, "I was come south and he was come east and we meet."

Will Take Up New Work With FBI In Washington

Jerold A. Finders, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Finders, has received an appointment with the Federal Bureau of Investigation and will leave September 20th where he will begin his work as a clerk.

Jerry had recently enrolled in the Fort Dodge Labin Business College but discontinued his studies to accept the appointment.

AUXILIARY FAVORS U.M.T.

Tuesday evening, September 12, the American Legion Auxiliary met in the Council Room with Mrs. Carrie Schwichtenberg, presiding.

Mrs. Irene Barz reported on the gifts and cards which had been sent to members on the sick list. Mrs. Lena Lewis gave a list of the articles of clothing including shoes and raincoats, which have been purchased for the child we are sponsoring.

It was voted that the secretary, Mrs. Helen Stille, sending a letter to National Headquarters, urging the passing or Universal Military Training. A vote of the members present showed a 14-1 margin in favor of U.M.T.

Plans were discussed for Woodward Day, September 19. It is hoped that a carload from Klemme will be able to go and tour the Institution on that day.

The president announced the sale of one more Stop Sign of the Safety Council Program. The Girl Scouts are making the weekly poster changes.

The unit decided to purchase the Holiday Coin Cards to be used by the members this year. Other money-making schemes were discussed.

Mrs. Carrie Schwichtenberg and Mrs. Helen Stille attended a presidents' and secretaries' school of instruction at the home of the county president, Mrs. Henry Myhr, in Clear Lake on August 30th.

The door prize was won by Mrs. Lena Lewis.

We Are Sorry

The name of Miss Isabelle Gibbs was omitted from our list of college and University students published last week. Miss Gibbs is a student at Morningside College at Sioux City and has returend there to resume her studies.

If there are any other names which we omitted from the list, please call the Times Office.

THIS BEETS ALL!

Frank Zrostlik, farmer northwest of Klemme has a 32-acre field of beets that are about the tops in production. Frank's beets will probably run about 13 tons or better per acre.

Harvey Hubbard brought one of Frank's beets that weighed 13 lbs. This was one of the little ones, most of the others weigh around 16 lbs. each.

Frank also has a fine patch of potatoes that will run about 350 bu. to the acre. He raises triumphs and cobblers.

Mr. Zrostlik has beet harvesting down to a minimum of labor now as he has a machine that lifts the beets out of the ground, cuts off the top, shakes the excess dirt from the beets and elevates them into a wagon.

WOODLAND OWNERS ARE IN FAVORABLE POSITION

Lumber prices shooting upward will mean good returns for woodland owners in Hancock County who have been taking good care of their timber, according to County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

He says they'll get the highest returns by using the lumber on their own farms so they won't have to buy the higher-priced types at the lumber yards. The tight lumber situation during the past several years has brought a lot of this home produced type into use, and it has proved to be entirely satisfactory.

The demand for lumber for commercial markets and logs for speciality products is also holding up and will probably increase, according to information received by Henderson from Dick Campbell, extension forester at Iowa State College This offers the woodland owner a ready market for material he doesn't need on his own farm.

However, it's important to have a thorough understanding of all the terms of the agreement before timber is sold in this way. Usually only the best trees are useable when timber is sold speciality uses. The results is the harvesting of good trees and leaving the poorer ones. This will eventually result in an inferior stand of timber.

Much useable material also is often left to waste, when this method of harvesting is followed. Th reason is that usually only the best of the trees can be used. Every effort should be made to make sure all the useable material is taken.

If these terms of the agreement are carefully checked and understood by both parties, the woodland owner will get more from his woodland area, and it will be left in a productive condition for future harvests.

URGES ALL-OUT FIGHT TO ERADICATE RATS

While the dog, horse, cow and a number of other animals compete for the title of "man's best friend," the rat stands alone as man's worst enemy, says Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College entomologist.

He advocates an all-out campaign on Iowa farms this fall to get rid of the animal that is credited with doing 200 million dollars' worth of damage each year.

No other mammal does such an over-all effective job of carrying disease of both livestock and humans, devouring and contaminating foodstuffs and doing general damage to buildings and foundations, stored goods and materials in the city and on the farm.

In fact, the rat depends almost entirely on food and shelter supplied to him by man—and then he's wasteful about the way he uses that, Gunderson says.

Because of these habits, rat populations can be kept down by removing their hiding places, killing the rats that are present and then cuting off their food supply, he points out.

Control measures are practical not only because they remove a health menace but from an economic standpoint as well.

Gunderson cites the work done by Stewart Elson on a farm in Dallas County. A poisoning and rat-proofing campaign that netted 1,100 dead rats and saved an estimated 2,500 bushels of corn cost Elson a total of $99.99—1 per cent less than $100. Other rat control campaigns have yielded similar results.

Since now is the time to eradicate a rat population—while cornecribs are empty and can be repaired and ratproofed—the entomologist suggests that farmers interested in rat control get campaigns underway before cornpicking starts.

Information on poisoning measures and methods of rat-proofing buildings may be obtained from county extension director's offices or by writing Gunderson at Iowa State College.

Boys Who Pilfered Herman Back's Car Now In Mason City Jail

Last week Tuesday night thieves robbed Herman Back's car of a set of new seat covers and took the clock out of the dash board and apparently were trying to get the radio when they must have been disturbed in their operation and fled.

Sheriff "Dutch" Brower was notified of the theft. About the same time a car at Garner was pilfered also, and we understand that also a spot light was taken from John Albers pick-up truck.

Two boys from Thornton were picked up by the Cerro Gordo county sheriff for stealing from cars. Sheriff Brower checked with the Cerro Gordo county authorities and ran down the thefts committed here. Both boys are lodged in the Mason City jail.

World Evangelist

Lesson for September 24, 1950.

IT IS not only the ignorant and the prejudiced who claim that Protestant Christianity did not start till the 17th Century. Even Protestants can make this mistake. The real founder of Protestantism is Saint Paul. What the Reformers of the 17th Century did was to re-discover Paul. The doctrines of Protestantism are not some peculiar invention of Luther, not a vagary nor a quirk, still less a heresy; they are simply Christianity according to Saint Paul. If for no other reason, Paul is one of the most important figures in Christian history, perhaps in all history.

Dr. Foreman

* * *

The World is My Parish

THERE is another reason why Paul is important. It is not too much to say that if it had not been for him, there never would have been any Christianity, as a world-religion. It would have died as a Jewish sect.

What the history of the world would have been in that case, God only knows. But although our so-called Christian era is still not exactly Christian, it is vastly different from what it would have been if Christianity had been no more (say) than Essenism, a word you would have to look up in the encyclopedia, an antique and forgotten sect.

To many un-named Christians, but to Paul more than any other one person, we owe the fact that ours is a religion with a world-outlook.

First Great Missionary

PAUL was not a typical Christian any more than George Washington was a typical American. To this day, missionaries can hardly be called typical Christians. They are far too few, and their quality is far too high, to stand for the "average" Christian—who in fact does not even understand missionaries, as a rule. Nevertheless, the missionary now as in Paul's time is the burning-point of Christianity, the front-line patrol, the cutting edge . . What made Paul a missionary makes missionaries today

One thing was his vital experience of Christ. Jesus, for Paul, was not somebody he had read about in a book, he was not a statue on an altar or a picture in a museum, he was not a definition in a catechism. Jesus was Some One he had met on the Damascus Road.

Second, Paul loved people, all kinds of people. (After his conversion, not before!) He could see in the most pitiful little moron of a slave-girl, the meanest jailer, a sister or brother for whom Christ died, as he put it. Nowadays you sometimes hear church people saying about others outside the church, "They're not our kind. They wouldn't make good Presbyterians (or Baptists or whatever the speaker's church may be)." It never occurred to Paul that anybody would not make a good Christian, if only Jesus Christ got hold of him.

Furthermore, Paul had a world-horizon. There are hole-and-corner Christians and there are world Christians. Paul was a world-Christian. He "thought big." To this day, the wide-horizon, big-thinking Christians are either out there on the mission field, somewhere, or they are supporting missions with all their might.

Bibles Across the Sea

THERE is one thing which you, reader of these lines, can do right now, if you have some of this world-vision. This week, today, you can help in a great missionary enterprise which is not confined to any denomination.

Over in Japan, General MacArthur says, Christianity and the Bible are the dykes holding up the flood of Communism. Dr. Shiro Murata, a Japanese Christian, also says: "The eyes of Japan are fixed on two books. One is Das Kapital by Karl Marx. The other is the Holy Bible. Japan is at the crossroads."

A campaign is being conducted this year to send to Japan five million Bibles and Testaments The Japanese can read; they have the largest non-Christian population in the world reading one language. Through your local church, or even by yourself, you can contribute to this great undertaking to bring the Bible to a people sorely needing it.

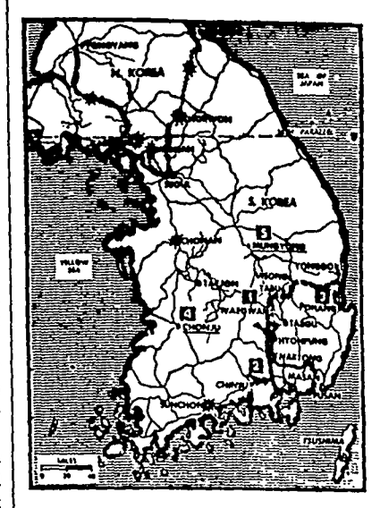
Air Strikes



As North Korean troops regrouped along the comparatively quiet Wegwam-Tabu-Uisong (1) front, B-29 bombers and fighters continued strikes against rail marshalling yards, bridges and supply depots (bomb burst symbols). Communist attacks west of Mason (2) were countered and the South Koreans met a new drive on the east coast (3). Two main enemy headquarters are at Chonju (4) and Mungyong (5).

KOREA:

British Troops Arrive

Crack British troops—1,500 strong landed in Korea as U.N. forces continued to battle an increased Communist offensive from the north in the area of Pohang.

The British reinforcements were from Hong Kong and had been in training for mountain fighting for 16 months. They will operate under the command of Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of U.N. ground forces in Korea.

Meanwhile, bitter fighting on the east coast continued, in what military observers reported as a move by the invaders to cut in behind the vital communication center of Taegu. Frontal assaults on U.N. positions in that area repeatedly failed in recent weeks.

The Reds were reported using 40,000 troops along the jagged northern front, slipping strong patrols through the mountains to within 18 miles of Taegu.

In the air, United States planes continued to pound Red supply and manufacturing centers and give close support to ground forces.

The U.S. air force had flown 20,500 sorties since the beginning of the war and was credited with severely crippling the enemy. Confirmed destruction of 111 Red tanks was among the results listed, with no evaluated estimates on the number knocked out in more than 600 attacks on tanks, armored cars and half-tractor vehicles.

SOVIETS:

A New Trend

A new trend of thought has effused from the Korean war. It is based on the assumption that the struggle now has entered the critical stage and the battle lines are fairly well stabilized, and, that the men in the Kremlin now must know beyond question that North Korean forces are doomed to defeat.

The new thought is simply this: The Communists have decided what their next major move is to be and are getting set to make it.

Western diplomats believe the Soviets and their satellites have three courses open to them at this point.

First, they may occupy North Korea in an effort to prevent the U. S. - U. N. forces from crossing the 38th parallel and moving in close to Manchuria and the Russian port of Vladivostok.

Second, being confronted with the prospect of a North Korean defeat, they may make an effort to settle the fighting in some manner acceptable both to Russia and the west.

Third, they may send armed forces into the fight on the side of the North Koreans in open defiance of the U.N.

Many United States officials believe the first of the three courses is the most likely one to be employed by the Soviets. These officials believe that Russia is still anxious to avoid moves which might lead to a general war.

Employment

As the Korean war entered its tenth week the United States was experiencing a steadily tightening labor market. Unemployment was relatively low and more than 61 million persons had jobs.

In some instances there were reports of labor "pirating" and other industries, especially aircraft, sent out scouts for skilled technicians. The situation was not likely to improve.

RAILROADS:

Strike Called Off

An unexpected strike threat, involving 131 major railroads and an estimated 1,700,000 rail workers, was called off by the unions after President Truman issued an executive order for federal seizure of the railroads.

Acting quickly to prevent a national emergency, the President ordered Secretary of the Army Frank Pace to take over the rail lines and operate them "in the name of the United States government."

Within an hour the unions issued a statement: "The men we represent will work for the government gladly under government operation of the railroads during this period of crisis until this dispute can be settled on its merits through mediation."

For the past 18 months rail unions and management have been deadlocked in a wage and hour dispute The unions have demanded a 40-hour week and a 31-cent-an hour wage boost for yard workers to keep their take-home pay the same as it has been for the present 48-hour week.

Observers pointed out it was the fifth time in 32 years that the government has stepped in to take control of the nation's rail system. And most members of congress gave quick approval of the President's order.

The unions considered the government seizure of the roads a victory for their side, but any jubilation was quickly dampened with the announcement by White House press secretary Charles G. Ross that "the government doesn't intend to conduct negotiations with the union." Such negotiations will continue between unions and railroads with a federal mediator available "if needed."

APPROPRIATIONS:

Staggers Imagination

The house sent to the senate two appropriation bills that staggered the average American's imagination and caused many to ask: "Where's the money coming from?"

One was an emergency bill of $16,771,383,379 to help rearm this country and its allies, passed by a roll call vote of 310 to 1, and the other, a general appropriation bill of $35,554,490,425.

The senate approved the general appropriation bill the following day and sent it to President Truman for his signature.

The emergency bill included the big appropriation to purchase 5,333 warplanes and boosts to more than $30 billion the military outlays set up for this year.

As an idea how the money will be spent, the bill included $260 million for work on the hydrogen bomb and the atom bomb. $598,637,370 to stockpile strategic terials, $4,535,400,000 for the rce, $2,648,029,000 for the na and $3,063,547,000 for the army.

In addition, there was $62,655,850 to strengthen the state department's "Voice of America" program.

The general appropriations bill carried a proposed $62,500,000 loan to Spain. It was approved by a standing vote of 165 to 90. No administration leaders spoke against the measure, which was surprising since President Truman and the state department had strongly opposed it and it had never been approved by the congressional committees having charge of foreign policy.

Representative Smith of West Virginia made a bitter attack against the Spanish loan, pointing out that "we have here an almost ridiculous situation where an attempt is being made to write foreign policy in an appropriation bill on the floor" of the house.

Crime Probers

David Lubben, Hillsdale, N.J., candy maker, is shown chatting with Jack Elich, investigator for the senate crime committee. Lubben testified that "hoodlums" working for Frank Costello muscled him out of a business worth almost a million dollars a year. His testimony was taken in connection with a hearing into activities of New York gangsters accused of operating a $10 million black market in sugar.

COLLISION:

18 Persons Dead

The navy hospital ship Benevolence was rammed and sunk by the freighter Mary Luckenback in a dense fog just outside of San Francisco's famous Golden Gate with a loss of 18 lives. The navy announced 489 persons were rescued.

The Benevolence sank on her side within 20 minutes after the collision as she returned to port from a trial run.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Cities May Be Bombed

IF, BECAUSE of Russian aggression, this nation becomes involved in a third world war there is every probability that for the first time in history American cities and strategic installations may be bombed. Every agency of government making plans for every eventuality considers this probability.

Certainly, despite the desperate haste in erecting radar screens, in employing hundreds of thousands of ground spotters, in developing a tremendous system of warning signals and communications, the Russians will attempt to knock out American production and military installations either through conventional bombing or by use of the atomic bomb. This is the opinion of our military and civilian defense agencies and every possible defense against such attack is being evolved.

Nevertheless, despite all such defenses which may be erected there can be no fool-proof or air-tight defense against such attack. In the light of this knowledge, made crystal clear by the experience of Germany, England and Japan during World War II, it becomes the responsibility of the rural counties of the United States to make ready literally to become our brothers' keepers.

While the federal government, through the national security resources board, is drawing plans and specifications for all-out civil defense, a task to be shared by all levels of government, the joint committee on atomic energy was told by Paul J. Larsen, director of the office of civilian mobilization of the NSRB that "the detailed planning for specific communities must be done by local governments. Civil defense must be based on self-help. Effective community action in time of disaster requires the development, in peacetime, of a sense of community responsibility for self preservation. When a disaster strikes, immediate action may prevent complete calamity."

16 Preferred Targets

What, then has been done or is being done in your state, in your community on civilian defense? Cities and metropolitan areas of more than a half-million population likely would become preferred targets for Russian bombs.

There are 16 such communities in the nation in which are squeezed some 25,000,000 people as well as the principle industrial, commercial, business and governmental activities of the nation. Taking the exeperience of England, Germany and Japan as examples, this means that in overall civilian defense in case of bombing attacks on these targets, approximately half the population would necessarily be evacuated leaving the other half to remain on their jobs at all costs and at any danger.

Rural Aid Necessary

Where would these people go? Most likely to nearby rural counties. Take Chicago as an example. Suppose only one atomic bomb was dropped in Chicago or in Chicago's environs of Whiting, East Chicago and Gary where are concentrated massed steel mills, refineries, oil depots and other necessary industrial production for war.

It would mean that within a radius of 10 blocks from the center of the bomb burst all life would be extinct and 90 per cent of buildings and other installations destroyed, and within a 20-block radius the loss of life and destruction would be awesome. It would mean the probably immediate evacuation of more than a million and a half persons, women, children, older people from their city homes.

It would mean that probably in Porter county, Indiana, or in Kankakee county, Illinois, or in some other nearby rural county, housing, doctors, nurses, health, food, clothing, water, utilities and other facilities must be provided to take care of these displaced persons, with the idea of keeping families together. It would mean tremendous hardship and sacrifice on the part of the more fortunate residents of these rural counties, even though they were not in sight or sound of the bomb burst.

NSRB Policy

The NSRB has formulated a nation-wide policy for this civilian defense which must be accepted by states and local communities. No doubt emergency legislation and appropriation will be necessary from the congress.

But the national security act of 1917 under which NSRB operates gives authority for the federal planning, to assist states and local communities to train volunteers, to evaluate requirements.

TIMES FORCE SPENT WEEK END IN CHICAGO AT EXPOSITION

The Times was well represented at the Graphic Arts Exposition held in the International Exposition Building in Chicago over the week end. R. A. Jorgenson, Ray Jorgenson, Jr., "Bud" Montgomery, "Woody" Geary and C. G. Waterman all left early Friday morning for Chicago.

C. G. Waterman went along for the ride and to visit with his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Axel Hofgren at Winnetka. Also it was a good idea to have a banker along on the trip.

This exposition is only held about every 10 or 15 years because of the tremendous expense involved in moving in machinery, setting it up, operating it and then tearing it down and re-shipping.

The building, which is over a block and a half square, was crammed full of just about every kind of machine and equipment used in printing. There also were presses and other equipment there from foreign countries: England, Holland, Germany and Italy. All of the presses and hundreds of items of equipment were all in actual operation. One of the largest muli-color offset presses in the world was in operation printing material for Life Magazine. This press was purchased by a large Chicago firm and will be moved to their plant after the Exposition is over this week end. Another large two-color letterpress will be shipped to the Meridith Publishing Co. at Des Moines.

Daily crowds averaged about 25,000 people and on Saturday there was perhaps between 50 and 75,000 at the Exposition. The Exposition was open only to the printng craft and allied industries.

It was the largest assembly of printing equipment ever brought together in the world and it was estimated that it cost the manufacturers some over two million dollars to ship and assemble and operate their machines for the two weeks of the show.

Other north Iowans who attended the Exposition were Gordon Aasgaard and three of his force from Lake Mills; George Carmen of Buffalo Center; Bert DuSold and Bill BeCauley of the Mason City Globe Gazette and Allen Patton and one of his men from the Kayenay Engraving Co., Mason City.

Why Wool Shrinks

What makes wool shrink when it gets wet? The wool fibres are both kinky and scaly, and the scaliness ordinarily prevents them from sliding over each other. When wool is wet the scaliness is greatly decreased and during the washing process the fibres may slip over each other and become more kinked. This may result in a new arrangement of the woolen yarn and a shorter length. If the garment is dried in this condition the scaliness again becomes important and it cannot be stretched back to its original size. This is the reason for "blocking" a sweater, drying it on a frame that stretches the fibres so that the original shape is resumed Shrinkage may also be caused occasionally by the action of alkalis in strong soaps, which cause actual chemical changes in the fibres and make them shorter.

Settling of Hawaii

Hawaii, which may someday be our 49th state, was originally settled by Polynesians, the romantic "South Sea Islanders," about 500 A.D. They brought to the uninhabited islands many of their own plants and animals, including hogs and poultry Strange as it seems, the next emigration took place about 1300 years later, when a group of New Englanders landed there to settle and convert the natives to Christianity. In the century following 1819, many varied groups settled the bountiful islands, including Chinese, Japanese, Koreans, Polynesians, Portuguese Spanish, Americans, Germans Puerto Ricans, Filipinos, and others.

"Static" in Dry Cleaning

The friction of the clothes and the solvent as they are agitated in the washer is the cause of static electricity in dry cleaning. The solvent is a poor conductor of electricity, so electrical charges may accumulate until they reach quite a high voltage, and hazardous sparks may result. Serious fires have been started in this way. If the metal washing machine is connected by a wire to the ground such charges may leak away before they become dangerous. Sometimes commercial filter powders are added to the solvent, in order both to absorb the dirt from it, and to make it a better conductor, and thus help carry the charge away

Important Peacetime Uses Found for Schmidt Lens

It was a German optical scientist named Bernhard Schmidt who, in 1930, invented a lens ten times faster than a high-speed camera lens. Ironically enough, that lens helped the United States to win out against Germany in the second World war, confirming Dr. Schmidt's fear that it would be used to kill and destroy. In general, scientific achievements are international property, and that rule has contributed enormously to the well-being of the whole world, even though it has occasionally extended the destruction of warfare

The Schmidt lens was needed for wartime military devices. But no method had been discovered for producing its intricate curves except by hand grinding, whereby months were required to make one lens. Finally, a way was found in this country to imprint the desired shape in a mold of refractory clay. Then a piece of optical glass was placed over the mold and both were heated until the glass softened and dropped into the mold, reproducing the curves of the wonderful lens.

Schmidt lenses have found a number of important uses in peace-time. Fitted to television projectors, they make big, bright, clear pictures. They are used with X-ray equipment to make better pictures of the interior of the lungs and stomach, revealing cancer or tuberculosis or ulcers. One of their widest uses is in public-health examinations for tuberculosis.

Perhaps most spectacular of all, a 48-inch Schmidt telescope is perched in the Mt. Palomar observatory, California, near the great 200-inch instrument. The Schmidt lens is now making an atlas of the heavens which will reveal swirling nebulae, fiery gases, island universes, clouds of interstellar dust, and probably some 500 million stars.

Slow Return to Routine For Jaundice Patients

Patients convalescing from jaundice, particularly those recovering from an inflammation of the liver, should only gradually return to their previous diet and activities.

Many of these patients have to restrict the intake of fatty foods and alcoholic beverages.

They should be careful to avoid exposure to excessive strain, infection, or other influences which may decrease their resistance and lead to possible recurrence of the hepatitis (inflammation of the liver). Patients with cirrhosis particularly must watch their diet and abstain from alcohol indefinitely

All such patients have a certain degree of liver damage and should be treated with an intensive liver regimen. Regardless of the type of jaundice is is advisable that the patient should be put to bed and kept there until the course of the disease or the cause is well established.

Zither Stages Comeback

The zither has come into its own again. According to research experts with the World Book encyclopedia, this is the second time the multi-stringed Bavarian instrument has appeared on the American scene. It enjoyed some popularity in the late 1800's and then faded into obscurity. The reason for the zither's sudden popularity is a movie in which the instrument is used to provide unique background music. Cities where the movie has played report an unprecedented demand for zithers, and prices have doubled and quadrupled in pawn shops. Few music stores stock zithers, and any that they did have sold like hot cakes.

"Gimme a Dill, Dill"

Dill L. Pickle, 24, Rolling Fork, Miss., has been given a dilly of a job as a pickle salesman by a southern pickler. Pickle's pickle territory includes Mississippi, Louisiana and several other southern states. Pickle first gained attention in newspapers, national magazines and on the air as picklers' "Man of the Year" in 1948. He achieved the title of all time "Man of Distinction" during National Pickle Week. Until recently, however, Pickle worked in his father's grocery store in Rolling Fork where he developed numerous friendly laughs and sales from customers who enjoyed greeting him by saying, "Gimme a dill, Dill!"

Farm Tractor Maintenance

Tractor maintenance is a farm operation that pays big dividends to tractor operators. Even if the tractor has had a major overhaul during the winter, the extension engineers say it should still receive daily maintenance. Carburetor adjustment alone can save 10 per cent of the fuel consumption. Using fuel on which the engine was designed to operate will eliminate many valve troubles. Proper care of the air cleaner will lengthen the time between overhaul jobs. Transmission gears will last longer if the grease is changed at least once a year. All these points will help to lengthen the life of the tractor and will keep it in condition for steady use during the busy season

Helpful Tip For—

SCHOOL LUNCHES

A big meat or cheese sandwich and a bottle of milk are two of the most imporant essentials for school lunch. Every school lunch should contain sandwiches, fruits and vegetables, something hot, something sweet or "treats," and milk in some form.

"My lunch was good today, Mom." That's one of the nicest things a school child can say to his mother. It is her duty to prepare for her children lunches that are delicious and nutritious.

A good school lunch should contain the following: a hearty sandwich of whole wheat or enriched bread with a generous filling of some protein food, at least one raw food—fruit r vegetable—milk in some form, something hot if possible, and a simple dessert, says nutritonists at Iowa State College.

Sandwich Fillings

But now comes the question of what to put in the lunch. Use a filling that will provide good food value and not just variety. Fruit and vegetable-filled sandwiches are ecpecially nice to include with pieces of chicken or meat. Meat sliced, chopped or ground, cheese, eggs or peanut butter with or without dressing give the essential proteins that are needed.

For fruits and vegetables use fruit cups with a variety of fruits, carrot sticks, celery curls, spiced crab apples, cabbage wedges, whole tomatoes, pears, peaches, and apples.

For the "something hot" part of the lunch use creamed or vegetable soups, baked beans, vegetable casseroles or meat and fish casseroles.

Custards and puddings, especially those made with milk and eggs, are very tasty and nutritious. Cookies, popcorn balls, a bit of hard candy or fruit candies make delightful extras.

The best container for a school lunch is made of metal that is light in weight, durable, easy to carry, and easy to scald and clean thoroughly. Each food should be parked so it will be attractive yet carry well.

Line the box with clean white wrapping paper. Put liquids such as milk, soups or fruits in a jar with a tight lid. Wrap sandwiches, cakes, cookies, meat or cheese carefully in oiled paper to keep fresh and clean. The paper provides a holder for eating.

Pack Carefully

Wash and dry fruits before packing. Place the firm, heavy foods at the bottom, and pack foods compactly to avoid shaking. If spoons are required, pack them at the bottom of the container. Include two paper napkins on the top of the lunch, one for a desk cover on which the foods are to be unpacked.

Many schools share in the responsibility of school lunches with the school lunch program, which strives to provide an adequate lunch for every school child. These hot lunches are complete meals providing one-third to one-half of one day's nutritive requirements. Standards for these lunches may serve as a guide for homemakers who pack lunches at home.

The government program type A lunch includes: ½ pint whole milk as a beverage (which meets the minimum butterfat and sanitation requirements of state and local laws); 2 ounces fresh or processed meat, poultry, cooked or canned fish or cheese, or ½ cup cooked dry peas, beans or soybeans, or 4 tablespoons peanut butter; 6 ounces raw, cooked or canned vegetables or fruit; one portion of bread, muffins, of other hot bread made of whole-grain cereal or enriched flour; 2 teaspoons of butter or fortified margarine.

Supersonic Wind Tunnel Designed for Heat Study

A new supersonic wind tunnel may help solve some of the problems connected with the tremendous heat generated by aircraft at speeds above the sonic range.

This is one of the first tunnels to be used for temperature studies. The heat of friction between air and aircraft is one of the biggest problems facing aviation now that the sonic barriers has been cleared, it is generally conceded.

The problem in travel at supersonic speeds is best illustrated by a meteor, which bursts into flame from friction with the earth's atmosphere. Although present craft are a long way from the speed of a meteor coming into the earth's atmosphere, speeds that may be possible shortly may cause a temperature rise due to friction of as much as 670 degrees Farenheit.

The new tunnel is of a conventional design with air being drawn through it by means of a vacuum created at one end. Speed of the air traveling through the tunnel will have a range of 1,100 to 1,450 miles per hour. Various sizes of nozzle blocks, through which air enters the test section, determine the rate of flow of the air.

Envisions Chemical Utopia

Chemocracy, a new world order in which science will abolish war by ending man's struggle for natural resources, is predicted by Dr. Jacob Rosin in an article in "Chemical and Engineering News." In the chemocratic society which he pictures, chemistry will replace agriculture by manufacturing food and fiber from cheap chemicals, as well as coal from air and building materials from earth and seawater The chemical Utopia envisioned will transform man's entire mode of life, freeing him from dependence upon plants and creating a world of continuing abundance in which overpopulation and hunger "will become things of the past, belonging to a barbaric age."

Interested Spectator

The telephone company removed about eight packing cases of switchboard equipment from its old office at Iowa Falls last week. An interested spectator on the sildwalk was Jim Ashman, who had helped move that same equipment into the building some 45 years earlier.

Best Friend

Ernest Bahlmann of Tripoli agrees that his dog Joe is his best friend. When Bahlmann was knocked down and gored by a young Holstein bull, Joe heard his master's cry for help and came to the rescue. He quickly chased the bull away from Mr. Hahlmann. The latter received a fractured vertebrae when the bull tossed him into the air but Joe arrived in time to prevent further injury.

Separator Accident

An Alton farm-wife was injured in unique fashion last week, by her cream separator. It was her custom to stop the spinning bowl of the separator by grasping it with a quick motion, using a cloth to protect her hands from friction. This time she us ed the hem of her dress. She does not remember what happend next but recovered consciousness a few minutes later, lying on the floor with her skirt wound into a tight ball. Apparently the skirt became wound up in the bowl, pulling it from the spindle. Her thighs were badly burnt, indicating the bowl was pulled off its spindle by the dress and continued to turn, inflicting deep burns.

DDT DOESN'T CAUSE BROWN SPOTS ON CORN

Reddish brown spots that are showing up on Iowa corn leaves this year have no connection with the DDT in corn borer spray, reports A. F. Sherf, Iowa State College extension plant pathologist. Some farmers have wondered if DDT caused the spotty discoloration on corn leaves.

Pathologists suspect that a new race of rust may have developed that attacks commonly grown hybrid corn varieties in Iowa. Or it could be unusual environmental conditions. The rust usually has been restricted mainly to small grain varieties.

Although this rust seems to be closely related to races of rust that attack small grain, it cannot come from, or go to small grain, Sherf explains.

Crop rotation is not apt to do much good in controlling the rust since the neighbors' cornfields will still be near by. But in the case of garden sweet corn, Sherf thinks a rotation might help. He also recommends deep plowing for the field and garden as a method of fighting it.

No definte controls are known for the corn rust, but fortunately, Sherf says, it isn't causing much damage yet.

Phone your news to 12.

OAK WILT NOT LIKELY TO WIPE OUT TIMBER

Oak wilt disease spreads slowly and there is no indication that it is going to wipe out the remaining oak stand in any short period of time, says Richard Campbell, extension forester at Iowa State College. The woodland owner should not let himself be high-pressured into selling his oak timber just because of the "oak wilt scare."

Any oak woodland owner would do well to give the matter serious consideration before allowing his oak woodlands to be indiscriminately cut just because the oak wilt disease is present in the vicinity or even in his own woodland area, according to the extension forester. The disease spreads slowly and attacks only individual trees or small groups wholesale through an area killing the stand.

Campbell says oak wilt poses its most serious threat to our yard and ornamental oaks and to the oaks in our parks and other public grounds at the present time. Because of its slow rate of spread, it is not likely to seriously threaten farm woodland areas of oak or extensive oak stands in the near fuure—at least, not to the extent of causing the remaining stands of oak timber to be harvested before the oak wilt supposedly kills them anyway.

Until more is known about the disease and possible means of its control, Campbell says the best course for the woodland owner to follow is to salvage the trees as they become infected or die. Leave thrifty trees to put on maximum growth for future harvests.

JOLLY WORKERS CLUB MET AT HELPS HOME

The Jolly Workers Club met at the home of Alvina Helps on Wednesday, September 13. Fifteen members answered roll call.

The club women have pieced and quilted a quilt. They now have the quilt finished and ready for sale. We decided at the meeting for the club members to sell numbers on the quilt at the price of 2 for 25 cents. We are going to sell the tickets in Klemme some Saturday night this month and the quilt will be on display in Wellemeyer's window before the tickets are sold. You do not have to be present to be the winner. The quilt will be given away at Ruth Trampel's club meeting in Oct.

The Christmas cards and stationery was shown and orders will be given at the October meeting. Each member is to pay for their cards when they are ordered.

Recreation was enjoyed by all and Nettie Roths was in charge of the games. A lovely lunch was served by Alvina with Jenny Nelson being her co-hostess. Irene Waddingham will be co-hostess for Ruth Trampel in Oct.

CRIB SILO RECEIVES WIDESPREAD FAVOR BY FARMERS IN IOWA

A temporary silo that has received widespread favor among farmers throughout Iowa is the upright snow fence or cribbing silo, says county extension director, Paul Henderson.

Although this type of silo must be built in the proper manner for the best results it's been found to fit into widely varying feeding programs. The cribbing silo can be used to take care of excess silage after the permanent upright is full. Temporary silos such as the cribbing silo often save corn crops from destruction by providing ideal storage facilities for soft corn.

Cribbing silos fit in well where soil is not adapted to pit or trench silos. Cribbing silos are handy for tenants since the silo can be easily stored and moved. They also served their purpose well by providing storage space for grass silage to be fed during the dry period in the summer when grass is hard and short, Henderson points out. This silage can be kept only a few months.

He recommends that slat cribbing, snowfence or heavy welded lawn fence be used in these silos. This should be lined with two thicknesses of sisalkraft paper.

Cribbing or fence walls need to be reinforced with No. 9 wire so silage pressure won't break them out. Silage should be carefully packed so the silo is well balanced up to the top. About 3 or 4 silos run from 12 to 16 feet across, depending on the amount of livestock on the farm.

If temporary silos are fed out before weather comes, the spoilage will run only a little higher than in permanent silos, C. H. VanVlack, Iowa State College agricultural engineer, reports. A slight disadvantage may be the trouble from freezing. But aside from being harder to handle, frozen silage is as good for feed as unfrozen silage.

Extension Circular 202, "Temporary Silos," gives details for building all of the commonly used types of temporary silos. This bulletin is available in Henderson's office or from the Bulletin office at Iowa State College.

BEGIN ATTACK NOW ON GULLY EROSION

Suggest Starting Bed Of Reed Canarygrass

The attack on gully erosion—which is carving big chunks out of Iowa—can start now. Reed canarygrass has shown unbelievably fine results when planted in late August or early September, says H. D. Hughes, Iowa State College agronomist.

Grass taken from sod banks and sodded in now will be established in good shape by winter. Then it will be ready to hold the soil when spring floods start their erosive destruction. Many Soil Conservation Districts in southern Iowa have their own sod banks. Where these plots aren't handy, farmers may need to grow their own, so Hughes has a few tips for starting a sod bank.

Fall Seeding Best

Seeding a sod bank can be done anytime now before the middle of September. Farmers can also do it in the spring, but fall seeding has the advantage of being established and ready for use by the following fall.

Sow about 8 pounds of seed per acre to establish a sod bank. It can be seeded on poorly drained ground of at least medium fertility. It's from these sod banks that the plants should be taken for gullies. An easy way to harvest the sod crop is to plow up the amount needed and then disk it into small pieces.

Heel Pieces In

These pieces can be planted in small washouts with a spade. Heel plants in firmly to brace them for the first heavy rain. Plants that are put in about 2 inches below the soil surface will withstand washing better than surface planting. Hughes advises spacing plants about 18 inches apart for quick gully coverage.

Deep ditches covering large areas will have to be handled differently than small gullies. The deep ones need to be filled in first and thoroughly firmed. The agronomist suggests spreading pieces of sod with a manure spreader, using a power scoop for loading. Thorough, heavy rolling is extremely important when following this practice, since packing will firm the soil around plant roots and speed the establishment of the new planting.

Twenty Years

This was in 1930 that Walt Thada took over the first floor of the Wellemeyer Store Building, and Arthur continued with the management of furniture, linoleums, rugs and funeral service.

Ed. Thompson grew up in this store, and after the death of Mr. Thada, gradually took over the active management of the Thada Store.

After a few years of "Hard Times" both businesses began to grow and expand, we both needed more space. We talked this over repeatedly, wondering whether to enlarge the building with a lean-to or what to do.

Luckily, Ed. Thompson purchased the Jacobs' lots across the street south of the Wellemeyer Building and has just completed a beautiful new store building, which solved the problem for both Thadas and us.

Now that Thadas have moved out I notice that the floor in our building is worn very thin and will need extensive repairs. So many customers coming and going thru the store wore out the floor.

To get even with Ed. I hope that he has many customers in his new store and that they wear out his new floor too.

My best wishes to the Thadas in their new location.

We have had two mid-term tests already and the results have been quite satisfactory.

Our gym class was held inside on Monday of last week because of the weather and we enjoyed ourselves playing dodgeball.

Perfect attendance has been achieved for the past two weeks. So far we haven't had any dental cards handed in but are trying for 100 percent before Jan. 1st.

Our favorite motto this week is:

"Friends, like all good things in this life, can be had by anyone who wants them.

There is only one simple rule to follow; it is this: To have a friend, be one yourself.

Times have changed as the above picture taken 10 or 11 years ago indicates. The store arrangement was typical of the better stores at that time. Dry goods and notions were on display in the front of the store. The grocery department extended clear across the back of the store. Groceries were stocked on high shelving and separated from the customer by counters.

About 4 or 5 years ago the interior arrangement of the store was again changed. The high grocery shelves were taken down and replaced with lower shelves and "islands." This arrangement made the grocery department a semi-self service arrangement and was right up to date.

New Chemical of Value Controlling Garden Pests

Advice for gardeners, now in the midst of their annual battle with bugs and worms, is given by Wayne J. Colberg, North Dakota agricultural college extension service entomologist.

Colberg says that the new poisons are generally the best—DDT, rotenone, methoxychlor, chlordane and toxaphene, for example.

He offers this reminder, too. "Most preparations that kill bugs in the garden will also have harmful effects on the gardener. Be sure to handle them carefully. Read the directions that come with the poison you buy for use in your garden."

Here are some definite poisoning recommendations from the entomologist: For flea beetles—these are the little, fast-moving insects that leave "buckshot" holes in the leaves of your garden plants—use a spray or dust of DDT, methoxychlor or rotenone. The Colorado potato beetle is bigger than the flea beetle and generally is troublesome only on potato plants, but the same poisons will give control. The cabbage maggot, a worm-like pest that makes life tough for cabbages, can be controlled with DDT or rotenone. For the corn earworm, dust or spray the tops of your corn plants at silking time with DDT or rotenone.

The webworm, distinguished by the web it makes around the plants, can be killed with toxaphene. Chlordane will handle the white grub cutworms, that do much of their damage at night. The cutworm can be killed by spraying or dusting the ground completely with DDT late in the afternoon.

Colberg adds that "those pesky grasshoppers can be taken care of with either toxaphene or chlordane."

Steam Locomotives Scrapped As Diesel Gains Popularity

After playing a leading role in America's progress for about 125 years, steam locomotives are diminishing in number. Many of them are being cut for scrap. The trend toward the increased use of diesel locomotives is one of the most dramatic aspects in mechanical development.

While some railroads are scrapping only worn-out engines, instances are reported of large engines scheduled to be cut up soon that were built in the early 'thirties—not a long life in comparison with most locomotives.

From the scrap yard most of the metal soon reaches a steel mill. A few parts, after careful inspection, may be saved to repair engines of a similar type. However, a discarded locomotive, including tender, could yield as much as 360,000 pounds of scrap if little were salvaged. Most of this scrap is of good, heavy melting grade. So the shiny black giant that awed the countryside with its whirling rods yesterday may, via junk yard, steel mill and locomotive shop, be used tomorrow in a gaily painted diesel.

Despite the contribution of many steam locomotives to the scrap supply, as well as old freight cars, automobiles and many other things, the total supply of steel scrap has not become large. Stocks in the hands of consumers (steel mills and foundries), dealers and automobile scrap yards, at the end of 1949 still were less than 5,000,000 gross tons, equal to slightly over one month's consumption at the rate of use prevailing in the nine months prior to the steel strike, according to bureau of mines data and trade estimates.

Outstanding Astronomers Discuss Galaxy Structure

If you can visualize a large spiral pin wheel—100,000 light years across—and made up of 100 billion stars intermingled with clouds of dust and gas you have a picture of our galaxy commonly called the Milky Way.

All the stars visible to the naked eye are part of our galaxy. It is an island universe surrounded by other galaxies out in space. Because the earth is located within and on one side of this great spiral pin wheel astronomers have had difficulty in studying the structure of the galaxy

One method of studying it, is to investigate galaxies of similar type. Walter A. Baade of the Mount Wilson and Palomar observatories in California, followed this procedure by studying the Andromeda galaxy, which is among the closest of all galaxies to our own. Baade reported that the Andromeda galaxy seems to be the same type as our own and may serve as a model of our galaxy

The Andromeda galaxy has also been studied by Nicholas U. Mayall of Lick observatory in California. He found that it is rotating similar to our island universe. The outer stars in Andromeda galaxy are rotating around its center like the stars farther out rotate around the center of our galaxy.

There is a massive concentration of stars in the center of the galaxy Further evidence of this concentration was given by R Minkowski of Mount Wilson and Palomar observatories in reporting on planetary nebulae in the vicinity.

Word Blindness

What causes word blindness is a mystery. It is not mental dullness for some of the victims have a high I.Q., while certain imbeciles can read fluently. Some school children who have reading difficulty may be good at arithmetic. Nor is poor reading ability always connected with poor vision. The eyesight specialist can and does correct visual errors but the causes of word blindness must be looked for elsewhere. It is now generally believed that these causes are psychological. During the first four or five years of life a child may be subjected to fear, anxiety, rivalry, inferiority complexes or loneliness. As a result, the reading "door" may fail to open in his mind.

There are approximately 5,000 honey bees to the pound.

Penguins use their wings for swimming.

DAMAGED SOYBEAN SEED PRODUCE POOR STANDS

Poor soybean stands can sometimes be traced back to mechanical injury during harvest. Tests run at Iowa State College show that seed with cracked coats will produce fewer and poorer sprouts than good seed.

Uninjured seed germinated 92 percent as compared to 56 percent germination from seed with cracked coats that was taken from the same bin.

Soybeans that are cracked during harvest not only have lower germination but they may also bring a lower price on the market. Dale Woolsoncroft, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, reports that no more than 10 percent of the soybeans can be cracked if they're going to meet the U. S. standard for No. 1 soybeans.

Woolsoncroft lays the blame for cracked mainly on high cylinder speeds on the combine, improper concave setting, and too many tailings returned to the cylinder.

Since soybeans should be hard and fully matured before combining, they crack easily. So the first thing to do is reduce the cylinder speed to about one-half the speed used for oats threshing. Speed should be reduced by changing pulleys or some adjustment other than slowing the speed of the tractor engine.

Concave adjustment will depend on the condition of pods coming out of the combine. All the concaves or rub bars may need to be removed and replaced with blanks, Woolsoncroft says. In extreme cases a few beans must be left in the pods if cracking is to be held to a minimum.

Folks at Madrid think the "meanest man" was in their city recently. Some one stole the Sunday school collection at St. John's Lutheran Church recently. A mysterious stranger who was in the building for a few moments only was believed to have taken the money.

Unhurt In Fall

Irvie Campbell, Maquoketa truck driver, escaped unhurt recently when a steel bridge spanning the Maquoketa river collapsed under the weight of his truck. The truck was loaded with two horses. Campbell was unhurt in the 30-foot drop to the water, but one horse was killed and the truck was wrecked.

Meet the Paradise Bird With Twin-Feathered Tail

U. S. ornithologists have the unusual opportunity of studying at home two specimens of the rare ribbon-tailed bird of paradise, a spectacular creature with a trailing twin-feathered tail some three times the length of its body.

The first ribbon-tail ever to reach this country arrived not long ago in the rich haul of the scientific expedition to Australia's primitive Arnhem Land sponsored by the National Geographic society, the Smithsonian institution, and the Australian government.

The ribbon-tail, or Astrapia mayeri, lives only in the high Mt. Hagen district of east-central New Guinea. Black, with iridescent bluish-green cap and throat, and short beak topped by feather pompon, it is a striking sight trailing two feet and more of white feathers through the deep forests.

Before the remote island region of New Guinea became accessible by plane, following establishment of landing fields used in World War II, none of the ribbon-tails had been seen alive outside the homeland.

It was as recently as 1935 that an Australian patrol officer saw flitting about his more than 6,000-foot camp an unfamiliar bird of paradise, wearing a long ivory-colored train. A few years later, the odd tail feathers, minus the bird, were noticed in the headdress of New Guinea natives by a collector working for the London zoo.

The ribbon-tail is still the latest to be added to the 40 or so species of the bird of paradise family. Ornithologists say it probably will be the last. The uplands where the white-tailed birds are found offered about the only uninvestigated territory of the home of paradise birds in New Guinea, its offshore islands, and northeast Australia.

Animal's Diet Important In Disease Resistance

The amount of protein an animal eats has a direct bearing on its resistance to disease. The disease-fighting antibodies found in the blood are made from proteins. And, if an animal's diet does not contain enough proteins, the body is unable to manufacture sufficient antibodies to protect itself against invading disease germs.

Studies of protein-deficient rats show that they cannot withstand infections as well as normal rats. Neither can they be vaccinated satisfactorily against contagious diseases, since vaccination should produce a good supply of antibodies in the blood.

Proteins alone, however, are not the whole answer to disease resistance. Unless other nutritional elements are fed to an animal, its body is unable to store up supplies of protein for future use.

In other cases, even though the diet is adequate, various types of illness may prevent protein storage, leaving an animal easy prey to infectious diseases.

Protein deficiency does not develop quickly if an animal has been well nourished in the past. Warm-blooded animals hold on to their protein reserves with "tenacity." Only after prolonged malnutrition do animals lose their defenses against infections.

Anglers Like Steel Rods

Steel fishing rods, solid or tubular, are coming into wider use. One concern makes more than 250,000 annually, ranging from fine tackle to low priced rods for chain store retailing. Steel rods may even serve dual purposes. For example, the solid stainless steel antenna rods on army field service radio sets are similar to rods now in demand for salt water fishing. Tubular steel for featherweight casting rods may be a chromium - molybedenum alloy. Fifty-one inch lengths of tubing are cold drawn through dies in various diameters so that further working does not spoil the action of the rod. Wall thickness of the tubular tip may be as little as 0.012 inch. The thin tubes are carefully heat treated to preserve the quality of the steel.

Rubber Industry

For hundreds of years the potentials of raw rubber had been appreciated by science and industry. But nobody had been able to correct its tendency to become sticky goo in hot weather and brittle in cold. In 1839 Charles Goodyear, who had spent six years experimenting, accidentally spilled a concoction of rubber, sulphur and white lead on a hot stove. He peeled off the blob and found the answer. He patented the vulcanizing process in 1844. Rapid development of the rubber industry followed. His invention was the basis of the rubber industry today.

Testing Terry Towel

Holding a terry towel up to the light will give some indication of the strength or weakness of the underweave. Tiny and regular pin points of light will shine through a weave that is uniform and good. But light will show through unevenly in a loose inferior underweave. The better the construction of the towel, the less light that will shine through, though more light will, of course, shine through white towels than colored ones.

Say Executives Take Care Of Autos, Neglect Selves

The average business executive gives his automobile a periodical check-up but neglects the working machinery in his body for which there are no replacement parts.

This conclusion was expressed in a joint report of Drs. Sidney A. Portis, Irving H. Zitman and Charles H. Lawrence of Chicago.

The Chicago physicians reported on an analysis of the last 50 business leaders under 50 years of age who came to them individually and of 55 sent to them by corporations as a part of a management check-up program. They paid particular attention to fatigue complaints.

They found that at least 60 per cent of the patient group complained of being tired and that approximately two out of every five in the fatigued group showed a rapid disappearance of sugar from the blood when studied from a standpoint of sugar tolerance. In 10.9 per cent of the patients referred by corporations, fatigue conditions were encountered.

"The brain is very highly susceptible to changes in nutrition," they pointed out. "The most important food that the brain uses is sugar. Our studies in fatigue states reveal that when there is an inadequate amount of glucose circulating in the blood, the brain does not function properly.

"The patient becomes highstrung, easily fatigued and the body goes on a 'sit-down strike'. The tired young business executive experiences a loss of zest, boredom, he exhibits antipathy for his job, business superiors and fellow associates. This disturbed life situation was a more or less constant feature in most of our patients."

Our Steel Furnaces Pour 1,900,000 Tons Per Week

During a great surge of output in April and May, steel companies for the first time in history were pouring more than 1,900,000 tons of steel a week. They held their production at that high level for over six consecutive weeks.

That was more steel in a week than many countries make in an entire year. For example, it was more than the 1949 output of Australia, Sweden or India individually.

Steel's unprecedented feat, made possible by the companies' huge programs of expansion and improvement in recent years, reflected general business activity. Automobile production was running ahead of 1949, the record year. A boom was underway in the housing industry. Household appliances were being turned out at a record rate. Numerous other lines of business were unusually active. Total national employment rose sharply until nearly 59 million persons were at work. The United States generally was enjoying one of the greatest production eras in its history.

More steel was made in May than in any previous month. The May output exceeded 8,500,000 tons. It was the fourth month in history in which more than 8,000,000 tons had been made, the others being January and March, 1949 and April, 1950. In April, steelmaking furnaces, operating at 100.2 per cent of capacity, made 8,196,000 tons.

Early Indian Traders

When Lewis and Clark made their historic expedition into the wilds of the Missouri and Columbia rivers just after the beginning of the nineteenth century, the limitations of primitive transportation kept their baggage to bare essentials, one of which was iron. "The Indians were so eager for iron," said one historian, "that they would give six or seven gallons of grain for a piece four inches square." This meant that in making axes the Indians were suddenly lifted from the Stone Age to the Iron Age. For this great advancement they were willing to trade almost a bushel of corn, of which they had a meager supply. A corn grinding mill, which the explorers left with the Indians when the first winter camp was abandoned, was soon broken up by the Red Men so that its iron could be made into arrowheads.

Real Bar-B-Q Flavor

Barbecued Chicken is a delicious, easy-to-fix summer meal that takes no fancy revolving spit or extra cooking gadgets. It's easier to do than fried chicken, and has a chef's flavor touch. You can bake it in your range oven. Here's how: Halve two to two and one-half pound broilers or cut a three-pound chicken in serving pieces. Blend one-half cup enriched flour, one-half cup fat, two teaspoons salt, pepper, and one tablespoon paprika. Spread this coating over chicken pieces. Arrange in shallow pan and pour Barbecue Sauce over them. Bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees) until tender, about one hour.

Bikini's Natives

Bikini, where the first postwar atomic bomb tests were conducted, is Eniwetok's neighbor 190 miles to the east. Both lie not quite 12 degrees north of the Equator. Their now-displaced natives, like all Marshall islanders, were good fishermen and navigators, and lived by fishing, raising pigs and chickens, and picking coconuts. The soil-less sand gave them little chance at vegetable cultivation.

The town of Bussey received a nice "Thank You" note from Pearl Nelson, Wisconsin flyer, recently. Red Oak police are accommodating. DEPARTMENT OF STATE

United States' Oldest Executive Department Began Duties 1789

By WALTER A. SHEAD

This is the first of a series of six articles on the department of state of the United States and its personnel as written by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The department of state of the United States of America is the official channel through which the American people conduct their relations with the other peoples and governments of the world. It is the oldest of the executive departments of government and went into action in 1789 with Thomas Jefferson as the first secretary of state.

Because of the fact that this nation was traditionally self-sufficient and isolated and aloof from the rest of the world until the advances of technology conquered time and distance, the people of this nation probably know less about the state department than any other branch of government.

However, since World War I the state department has been growing, not only in its dealings with the rest of the world, but in the impact of its actions and its policy upon the everyday life of every individual American citizen.

What the American people are concerned with now is just this: What about the department of state today? Who are the men and women who comprise its personnel roster of some 22,000 employees? Where do they come from? How are they chosen for the tasks assigned them?

And above all, what is the foreign policy of this nation and how is this policy formed? This series of articles, of which this is the first, will attempt to deal objectively with this subject and answer some of these questions.

ses upon which to spotlight the

THERE ARE TWO main premi- state department. First, the department proper has about 8,000 employees, most of whom are stationed in Washington. These comprise the general management and functional and operational segments of the department. Then second, there are about 14,000 persons in the foreign service who staff the more than 280 embassies, legations, diplomatic missions and consular offices maintained by the United States in some 75 countries.

DEAN GOODERHAM ACHESON
SECRETARY OF STATE

Born April 11, 1893, in Middletown, Conn., son of Eleanor and Edward Campion Acheson. Schools: Groton; A.B., Yale, 1915; LL.B., Harvard, 1918; honorary M.A. Yale, 1936; honorary L.L.D., Wesleyan, 1947. Married Miss Alice Stanley, May 5, 1917. Children—Jane (Mrs. Dudley W. B. Brown), David Campion Acheson; Mary Eleanor (Mrs. William P. Bundy). Private secretary to Louis D. Brandeis, associate justice of the U.S. supreme court, 1919-21; with Covington, Burling and Rublee, 1921-33; appointed under secretary of treasury, May 19, 1933, resigned November 15, 1933; member Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson and Shorb, Jan 1, 1934-Jan. 31, 1941; appointed assistant secretary of state, Feb. 1, 1941; under secretary of state, Aug. 27, 1945-July 1, 1947; secretary of state, 1949. Ensign, U.S. Navy, World War I.

The next main subject to remember is that the conduct of the foreign affairs of a world power like the United States with a population of more than 150 million people requires a highly specialized organization, specially trained about political, social, cultural and economic aspects of the world.

These are further broken down into specialized subjects such as finance, aviation, human rights, labor, agriculture, commerce, tariffs, reconstruction, standards of living and other technical fields so that the department not only represents the people of this nation in other countries, but it acts as foreign representative of all other departments of government.

And since World War II and the organization of the United Nations, duties of the department have tripled. For instance, during 1949 representatives of our state department took part in 6,000 international meetings and received 340,000 reports from its representatives from throughout the world, all of which had to be analyzed and evaluated as a basis for policy decisions and correlated in each case with those of other interested government agencies.

Today, headed by Dean Acheson, the department of state occupies more than 20 separate buildings in Washington scattered about the city, with the beautiful new building at 320 21st Street N. W. as the hub of its activities. The old state building at 17th street and Pennsylvania avenue, adjacent to the White House, now houses only the library, and the rest of the building has been taken over by executive offices of the presidential staff and some other agencies.

As he does every department of government in the executive branch, the President heads up the state department and is responsible for the foreign policy adopted. The secretary of state is a member of his cabinet and is the chief executive officer of the department.

Immediately under him is the Under-Secretary of State James E. Webb of North Carolina; Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup of New York; Deputy Under Secretary of State for Administration John E. Peurifoy of South Carolina; and Deputy Under-Secretary Elbert G. Mathews.

ILENE WOODS, singer on the CBS "Steve Allen" show and the voice of Walt Disney's "Cinderella," was a radio personality in Portsmouth, N. H., her home town, when she was 11. For singing on two local programs she was earning $11 a week. She was on a network show before finishing high school; then Paul Whiteman engaged her. Two Hollywood-produced shows took her west. Her husband is a musical arranger there, and they have a two-and-one-half year old daughter. Miss Woods' break in the "Cinderella" movie came as a result of her helping one of the Disney organization staff make some test records. Hers was perfect.

THE FICTION CORNER

FRESH FISH

By Richard H. Wilkinson

"IN HEAVEN'S name," Tommy Hunter cried, "why can't we get married? We love each other! There is nothing that stands between our complete happiness, but the consent of a bl——"

"Of my father, Tommy," Dolores interrupted him gently. "That is a big obstacle, my dear. In my country, girls do not marry without the consent of their parents. It is tradition, Tommy."

3-Minute Fiction

"Rats!" said Tommy. "You mean you won't break it! You don't love me!"

"Tommy!"

"All right," he said. "I can't see it your way, but I guess I've got to take it and like it."

He left her abruptly, crossed the sun-bathed patio of the old Spanish hacienda and entered the door on the opposite side.

Inside the small room Tommy saw a white-haired old man taking his ease in a chair near a window.

"Senor Jacinto," the youth began, "I come to you again and for the last time and in all humbleness to ask the hand of your daughter. I—"

"And for the last time," interrupted the old man angrily, "I refuse. My daughter is descended from a noble and proud family. She deserves a husband of distinction and wealth."

"You mean," said Tommy, "that you will sell your daughter to the man who will lend you enough money to increase your measly fish business. A fish peddler dishing out stuff about noble ancestors! Bah!"

"Get out of my house, you American adventurer! And if you come back once more, I will turn you over to the police!"

Back at his hotel Tommy's spirits

On the eighth day Senor Jacinto stopped him on a deserted street. "This is an outrage! Ortegna is not big enough for two fish dealers," he said.

sank to a low ebb. He had not the remotest idea how to persuade Senor Jacinto to consent to his marriage to Dolores.

Suddenly Tommy leaped to his feet. He could not provide funds to help Dolores' father expand, but on the other hand. . . .

Early the next morning the streets of Ortegna rang to the cry of "Fish! Fresh Fish!" delivered in a strange and foreign dialect. Housewives rushed to their doors and smiled over the odd sight of a blond-haired American youth pushing a cart in front of him on which reposed a canvas tarpaulin covering great quantities of fresh fish. Curious, they stopped and questioned him, were astonished to learn that his price was far below that of Senor Jacinto.

NEWS of the oddity spread rapidly and before noon Tommy had sold out his supply. On the next day it was the same, and again on the day following.

A week passed and Tommy had worked up a nice business. Occasionally he saw Senor Jacinto, but the old man passed him by with never a word, but glowering looks.

On the eighth day Senor Jacinto stopped him on a deserted street. "This is an outrage! Ortegna is not big enough for two fish dealers. One of us will have to go."

"What a pity you are planning to leave the land of your birth where you own a fine house and have many friends."

Senor Jacinto choked with rage. "It is you who will go. I was here first. I built up the fish business here. You will have to go!"

"Gladly," said Tommy. "The moment you consent to my marriage to Dolores. I am not a fish dealer by trade. I am a surveyor. I would like to continue to be a surveyor, but not alone."

"Never!" shouted the angry man.

Tommy shrugged and shook his head sadly. "It is a pity. Fish!" he called at the top of his voice. "Fresh fish!"

Senor Jacinto nearly burst a blood vessel. "Stop!" he shrieked. "The very sound of your voice is like a knife in my side. Take my daughter and the devil with you both! Only leave me in peace!"

Dolores was waiting in the patio when Tommy came for her.

"You are a very good fish peddler," she said. "Will you always be a fish peddler?"

"Only," said Tommy, "if your father should change his mind about consenting to our marriage."

Well Made Plans of Men Go Wrong – Without Murder

By BILLY ROSE

If you've nothing better to do for the next three minutes, let's play a game called "Answer Yes or No."

Question: If a doctor were accused of allowing a mean old man to die who only had a week to live anyhow, and you were on the jury, would you find him guilty of murder?

A dopey question, you say, because it leaves you no choice? Well, let me brief you on the events leading up to the crime and then put the question to you again . .

The mean old man—let's call him Andrew Horton—was a millionaire of the almost extinct rough-'em-up Jay Gould school, and among the people he delighted in pushing around was his son, Andrew, Jr. To round out the picture, it must be admitted that the youngster pretty much rated this treatment: He was a weak-chinned and weak - willed society kid who in his teens had developed a cordial dislike for two things—(a) work, and (b) his father who insisted on it.

Billy Rose

A few months after the boy's 21st birthday, the old man came down with a heart attack that all but did him in, and the specialist who was called in informed the son that his pop didn't figure to live more than a week or so.

THAT NIGHT, to celebrate his coming of fortune, the young man went out and tied on quite a package, and on the way home drove his car through a plate-glass window on Madison avenue. He was arrested and promptly bailed out, but the story hit all the front pages.

When his father saw the papers the next morning, he almost had another stroke, and it didn't help when the boy faced up to him and blurted out that in a short time he'd be doing as he darn well pleased.

When his son left, the millionaire sent for his lawyer. "I'm going to teach that kid of mine a lesson," he told him. "Fix up a new will where he doesn't get a penny and bring it back this afternoon. The doctor can witness my signature."

"What beneficiary do you want to name?" asked the lawyer.

"Make it out to one of those outfits for medical research," said the old man.

THAT AFTERNOON the will was executed in the presence of the doctor.

"That's a fine gesture," the physician told his patient when the lawyer had gone. "That amount of money will finance a lot of important work."

"Only idiots leave money to institutions instead of their own kin," said the old millionaire. "I didn't bother telling that fool lawyer, but the will you witnessed is only intended to throw a scare into my son. Tomorrow or the next day when he comes to his senses, I'm going to tear it up and reinstate the old will."

Late that night the patient had another attack, and when the doctor examined him he knew it was touch and go—given the proper medication, the old skinflint might be kept alive long enough to reinstate the original will; a slightly different dose, however, and he didn't figure to survive the night.

Well, as I get the story, he died a few hours later and his millions were used to set up one of the important research centers in the East. As for the son, he turned out to be as big a bum without money as with . . . .

Now to get back to my original question: With the facts before you, would you find the doctor guilty or not guilty of murder?

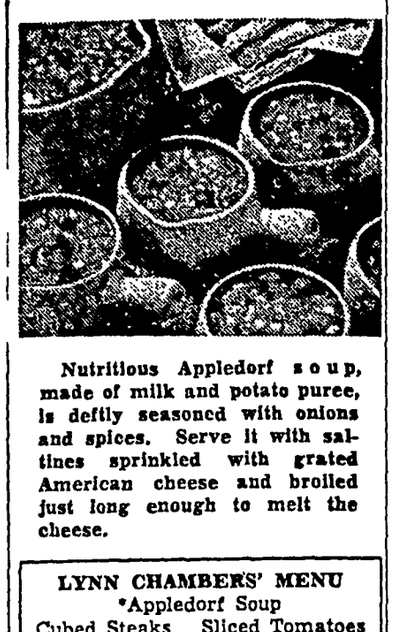
LYNN SAYS:
Avoid These Common Errors in Cooking

If you omit cream of tartar or corn syrup from a boiled frosting, a dry, sugar crust will form on standing. These two ingredients aid in the prevention of crystal growth on standing.

When you brown flour for gravy, you'll have to use more of it than unbrowned flour or the gravy will be thin and watery This happens because the starch in flour loses thickening power on browning.



Nutritious Appledorf soup, made of milk and potato puree, is deftly seasoned with onions and spices. Serve it with saltines sprinkled with grated American cheese and broiled just long enough to melt the cheese.

Meat cooked at high temperatures becomes tough and dry because heat causes protein in meat to toughen. Cook for a longer period but use low temperatures for juicy meat.

When equal amounts of cornstarch are substituted for flour in puddings and fillings, the product is too stiff because starch has twice the thickening power of flour. Use only one-half the amount of cornstarch.

Souffles over-baked at high temperatures shrink and collapse when removed from the oven because protein shrinks and forces air out. Set souffle in pan of hot water and cook only until set. This insures low and even temperature and prevents over-cooking.

ONE OF ONE THOUSAND

Small Towns First in Ownership Of Rare Model American Rifle

Smaller towns are first in the ownership of a newly discovered rare variety of American rifle that has almost over night sky-rocketed to fame and become one of the country's most sought-after collector's items.

Of the 22 historic "One of One Thousand" variety of the Winchester model 1873 rifle thus far reported in a nation-wide search, 16 were found in towns of less than 50,000 population and an even dozen in towns of 10,000 or less.

These scarce rifles of which only about 130 were produced from 1874 to 1881 were bought by their present owners for as little as $4.50. One owner reported he had been offered $1,000 for his rifle.

Collector's Item

Since the search for these rare rifles started in May of this year, the ordinary model 1873, known as "the gun that won the West," has also doubled in value. Winchester produced 720,610 of the model 1873 from the year 1873 until 1924, according to James C. Hartley, director of research of the Winchester Repeating Arms company division of Olin Industries, Inc. How many are still in existence is anybody's guess, Hartley said.

Prior to May, ordinary model 1873's were sold at from $18 to $25., depending upon condition. Then an article announcing the search for "One of One Thousand" rifles appeared in the American Rifleman. Today the ordinary 73's have graduated to collector's items and are quoted at double this price, depending upon condition. With the great attention now being paid to all 73's, it will not be surprising if the price goes even higher, according to Robert Abels, well known New York dealer in antique firearms.

The unsuspected value of rifles owned by thousands of persons who were unaware that their old Winchesters were valuable may be the start of a renewed interest in the hobby of gun collecting and any one who owns a model 1873 Winchester has the start of a collection, Mr. Abels says.

Just how much will be paid for a genuine "One of One Thousand" depends upon what collectors will pay for them, based largely upon the condition of the individual rifle. Yet, with only about 130 of these rifles manufactured, and only 22 known to exist, it is likely that the prices will be substantial, Mr. Abels said.

Used by Bad Men

The "One of One Thousand" search uncovered hundreds of model 73's. Many had colorful histories and were used by famous bad men as well as famous good men. One was taken from the Dalton gang, another was used by Granville Stuart, discoverer of gold in Montana. Still another was described as "the gun that won the South."

Following is the list of owners of authentic "One of One Thousand" rifles: Lloyd Bender, Galion, O., James T. Fowler, Osawatomie, Kan., Louis A. Ostendorp, Berywn, Ill., Scott Merry, Tacoma, Wash., Stanley W. Ollason, Hollister, Cal., D. W. Peckham, Middlefield, Conn., F.P.L. Mills, Old Deerfield, Mass., Glenn E. Ellingson, San Bruno, Cal., James R. Smith, Seattle, Wash., Granville Stuart Abbot, Lewistown, Mont., William W. Kessler, Whitmore, Cal., Charles A. Alden, St. Petersburg, Fla., Thomas H. Oster, Cloverdale, Cal., John D. Morley, Lodi, Cal., Sam G. Bachelder, Santa Cruz, Cal., Richard Larsen, Visalia, Cal., Phil M. Brown, Watseka, Ill., T. R. Jordan, Seattle, Wash., Oliver R. 'GREENWOOD PLAN'

Grass Roots Drive Proposed to Counter Russian Propaganda

From the small southern city of Greenwood, S. C., located about 75 miles northwest of Columbia, has originated a plan that amounts to a grass roots campaign to promote peace and combat Russian propaganda.

Greenwood, settled in 1800, is a town with a population of less than 14,000 people. Situated in a hilly region, it is the trading center of an area producing cattle, dairy products and small grains, peaches and cotton. Its main industries are the manufacture of cotton textiles, cotton oil, shirts, dresses and men's underwear.

Greenwood Mills have worked on a 3-shift basis since the end of World War I and in 1948 were operating "the largest single unit manufacturing spun rayon cloth in the world." One of the more unusual industries is a bell carillon foundry, a branch of the Dutch foundry that produced the Callie Self Carillon.

Ideas From Small Towns

It is one of the grass root towns of America and from it has come a plan that is claiming the attention of the nation.

Sponsored by the Greenwood chamber of commerce, the 'Greenwood Plan' is an expansion of the 'Marshal plan of ideas' as suggested by Sen. William O. Benton of Connecticut, and would be set up on a nationwide level.

As envisioned, a 'Greenwood Plan' committee would be established in every community in the nation. To this committee would be sent the ideas of the average citizen for telling the American story to the peoples of the world, especially those behind the iron curtain of Soviet domination.

The local committees would screen the ideas and forward the best ones to a national committee in Washington, which would put the ideas to work.

The plan was originated with the belief that many excellent ideas for piercing the iron curtain and promoting permanent peace could be had from Americans in small towns.

Sell America Abroad

A typical suggestion from a stenographer as received by the 'Greenwood Plan' committee in Greenwood: "I suggest that the Voice of America select refugees and displaced persons now in this country and schedule them on Voice of America broadcasts beamed to their respective countries. These refugees and displaced persons would have great influence on the people in the areas from which they have come and could and would effectively 'sell' America to their countrymen abroad."

The Greenwood chamber of commerce is serving as the central clearing agency until an overall Marshall plan of ideas organization is set up in Washington to do the job.

Winchester Rifle Won Fame in West

Many of these guns, now worth as much as $5,000, played important roles in the settling of the west. Some of them were owned by famous gunmen and outlaws while others were used by officers. One was taken from the Dalton gang when it was finally wiped out.

One of the greatest feats of marksmanship, only nine misses out of 72,500 at wooden blocks, was accomplished by Ad Toeppenwein using a model 73 Winchester rifle.

Keep Him Caged

When she was four, her parents decided it was time to take little Anne to church. So the following Sunday she accompanied them to services. The minister, up high in his pulpit, was earnest and vigorous. His voice rolled out over his flock in loud tones and low, as he waved his arms and twisted his torso. And he completely fascinated small Anne. Finally, clutching her father's arm, she asked worriedly, "What do we do if he gets out?"

Household Hints

To prevent raisins from sticking to the chopper and the bowl, set the chopper in a hot oven for a few minutes and pour boiling water over the raisins before you start chopping.

There's no need to color margarine for baking purposes. Add as much coloring as that amount of margarine requires right to the batter. The cake, or whatever you're making, will come out exactly the same color as it would have if you had colored the margarine itself.

The night before baking day, wrap your shortening in waxed paper and put it into the freezing compartment of your refrigerator. In the morning it'll be hard enough to shred on a metal grater. This makes mixing it with the flour and other ingredients much easier.

Do you know how to get home from school? If you have a school driving permit, there is nly ne right way

A school driving permit allows you to drive from home to school and from school back home by the most direct and accessible route. Now that last is legal language, but it's clear enough. It means you must drive straight to school and straight home afterwards - no 'round-about joy riding during the noon hour or after school.

At first glance, this law may seem confining, but, actually, it is set up for the convenience and protection of you young drivers.

Fourteen and fifteen year-olds are allowed to apply for a school driving permit, with their parents consent, to help solve the problem of getting to school in time over long distances.

And the ". . . direct and accessible route" part of the law is designed to give young drivers the least possible exposure to heavy traffic.

The young holder of a school driving permit may drive at other times but he must be accompanied by a parent or guardian who has a valid drivers license and who is actually sitting in the seat beside the young drver.

START IMPROVING OLD PASTURES NOW

Stockmen can start now to increase feed for their livestock by improving old pastures The first step is to open up the gates to the old pasture and graze it down to the ground.

Short grazing, while usually ruled out, is recommended in this case. It offers farmers a chance to utilize all available pasture, explains Ralph Krenzin, extension agronomist at Iowa State College. Besides, short grazing weakens the sod so it's possible to prepare a good seedbed when the time comes to work the soil.

Farmers who took soil samples and had them tested are in a position to order their lime now so it will be ready to apply just before the sod is worked up this fall. This gives the lime a chance to start reacting with the acid condition in the soil right away.

Plow On Contour

The best time to work up these old pastures is just before the ground freezes, Zrenzin says. Where there's a heavy sod he recommends shallow plowing on the contour. A disk just won't tear up the sod enough except on steep areas where the sod and topsoil are thin There a heavy disk or field cultivator will do the job.

Farmers who plow will want to keep several things in mind. Besides plowing shallow as possible and on the contour, it's wise to do the work late in the fall and leave the ground rough. These are all precautions against soil erosion which may cause trouble unless steps are taken to prevent it.

Krenzin also reminds pasture renovators that natural waterways in the pasture need to be left alone. If these are worked up, the pasture will be left wide open for gullying.

CLOTHING IS 4-H PROJECT FOR 1950-51

The Hancock County 4-H girls will start October 1st on the 1950-51 project which is clothing.

Elsie Mae VanWert, County Extension Home Economist, says that project will include: making plans for your wardrobe, sewing—to complete your wardrobe, care of your clothes, and Good Grooming. At the close of the clothing project the 4-H girls have a chance to show what they have learned and made by entering the 4-H girls good grooming contest and the Style Reveue Contest. Of course the County 4-H Achievement Show held in August gives them the priviledge of exhibiting the articles they have made during the 4-H year.

The 4-H Girls of Hancock County wish to extend an invitation to any girl in Hancock County between the ages of 10 and 21 to join the 4-H club in her community. Contact the 4-H leader or any of the girls and attend the October meeting so you can get an idea of what to expect in 4-H clubwork. 4-H is for you and we need you in 4-H work. Mothers are urged to attend the first meeting in October to become acquainted with the 4-H project.

If any girl does not know who to contact in her own community club to find out about 4-H meeting she may contact Miss VanWert at the Farm Bureau Office in Garner.

October is 4-H enrollment month. Here is your opportunity to become a 4-H club member. The 4-H girls in Hancock County hope to give every eligible girl in the county a chance to become a 4-H member this year

HANCOCK YOUNG MEN TO BE INDUCTED OCT. 19

The following Hancock County young men will leave Britt at 10:38 A. M. on Thursday, October 19, for induction into the armed forces:

Cliffor L. Moldenhauer - Corwith
Arthur T. Peck ------ Klemme
Carel J. Oxley ------ Kanawha
Dennis J. Haverly ----- Wesley
Cletus A. Liska -------- Garner
Milton A. Friedow --- Kanawha
Wayne E. Rasmus ----- Garner
Robert Emil Ollenburg - Ventura

Also leaving with this group will be Denny J. Johnson of Britt who is registered with the Emmet County Local Board but has transferred to the Hancock County Local Board for induction.

The following story is the first of a series on the Stromer Kennels and Pony Stables. The story and pictures are through the courtesy of the Mason City Globe Gazette.

Motorists driving along highway 69 1½ miles north of Klemme aren't likely to miss seeing the well kept, white painted buildings on the Verner Stromer farm. It can be quickly identified by the large sign, "Stromer's Kennels and Pony Stables," above the new building which houses the dogs and ponies. Dog and pony buyers from all over the nation find their way to the Stromer kennels and stables.

"There's never a day when we don't have visitors," Stromer says. In one week of August, he sold dogs to buyers in New Jersey and California. Visitors from India and Japan have stopped at the farm.

Perhaps the most distinguished person ever to stop at the Stromer kennels to buy a dog was F. W. Fitch, renowned hair tonic manufacturer. Stromer still remembers making the sale to the prominent old gentleman.

Fitch sat in his limousine while his chauffeur and Stromer brought dogs from the kennels for his inspection. After considerable running back and forth, the visitor purchased one of Stromer's English Shepherd pups.

Activity at the Stromer farm usually hits a peak on Sunday afternoons during the summer. That's when the Stromer boys work out their ponies on the small track in front of the stables. Neighbors and people from Garner often stop at the Stromer farm to watch the activity. Children, especially, like to visit with the Stromers and ride in the pony carts or on the ponies.

The picture was taken on such a Sunday afternoon. The new building which houses the dog kennels and pony stables can be seen at right. It was erected about a year ago.

"We either had to expand or go out of the business," Stromer explains. Before the new kennels were erected, the Stromers had dogs in the haymow of the barn, basement of the house, garage and any other place on the farm where a dog could find protection.

The new building is 86 feet long and 20 feet wide. Stromer has a 16x12 foot office in the end of the building nearest the house. A basement beneath the office provides space for him to do his surgical work.

He never hires anyone else to operate on his dogs. In 19 years of dog raising, he has learned how to perform just about every

STRETCHY CATTLE MAKE BEST USE OF FEED

It's the stretchy, good-boned cattle that generally eat more, gain faster and make the most efficient use of their feed, says Rex Beresford, Iowa State College extension beef cattle specialist.

Although gaining ability and efficiency in the use of feed are largely inherited, the fine-boned pony type of cattle usually can't complete with their more husky and roomy feedlot frieds.

Calves are the most efficient users of feed in the fattening lot, judging from the various tests that have been run, Beresford says. And the ability to convert feed to meat seems to diminish as animals get older.

Plain or off-bred cattle may gain about as well as better bred ones, especially on short fed, the beef cattle specialist points out. But to do this they must be roomy and thrifty, and even then there is danger that they will put on weight in the wrong places.

Insurance Offer To County

An important announcement another page of this issue of the paper gives detailed information concerning the Hospital & Surgical protection which will soon be available to resident of this county.

The National Benefit Insurance Company, with the Home Office in Des Moines is the author of the Hospital & Surgical program to be introduced to the residents of the county.

This plan of protection against the expense of hospital an doctor bills has benefited residents of many other communities. National Benefit is now in its 44th year of service and this county has been selected as one of the counties to participate in this Hospital & Surgical program.

The protection has been widely endorsed for its liberal coverage for hospital and surgical bills. Many residents of this state have received benefits for hospital and doctor bills incurred because of operations.

Since a high percentage of residents require hospitalization every year, a need for a better plan of hospital & surgical protection is indicated. It is expected that participation in the program here will be extensive. The National Benefit plan is well known and has achieved popularity.

One of the most effective means of combating socialized medicine is the ever-increasing number of families who are protecting themselves by participating in a voluntary plan of hospital and surgical protection. Many authorities believes that the American people, most especially those in the Midwest, want to choose their own plan of protection against hospital and doctor expenses, rather than be forced into a system of government controlled medical or hospital care.

The announcement carried elsewhere in this issue will give residents of this county an opportunity to participate in such a voluntary program providing protection against hospital & surgical expense. It is pointed out that families living in the rural areas will be contacted during the next few weeks and they, too, will be given an opportunity to avail themselves of this protection.

Many more farm families require hospitalization than city residents of the higher incident of accdents on the farms. Usually farmers do not have the opportunity to obtain adequate hospital & surgical care because they are self-employed and the benefit of an industrial group plan is not available to them.

According to the company officials, the response to the National Benefit Hospital & Surgical plan of protection has been enthusiastic in other localities. It is the intention of the company to give all residents of the county who can qualify an opportunity to avail themselves of the Hospital & Surgical Plan. National Benefit representatives point out that, in so far as possible, both city and farm homes will be contacted in this county.

The need for protection against heavy hospital and doctor bills appears to be increasing according to latest available figures. It is believed that nearly 10 percent of the entire population of this county will require hospitalization in 1949. That means that, on the average, a number of every second family can be expected to enter a hospital during the year.

Residents will be interviewed by an authorized staff representative who will carry proper credentials signed by an officer of the company. The protection offered by the National Benefit plan will be available to both individuals and families who are eligible. Residents of the county show their support of this program by giving the authorized staff representative a few moments of their time when he calls.

LOCAL SPORTSMAN RETURNS FROM HUNTING IN JACKSON HOLE, WYOMING

Wm. Greiman And Carl Messeldine Shot Moose, Elk And Antelope

Wm. F. "Bill" Greiman of Klemme, and Carl Messeldine of Belmond returned home Monday from a ten days hunting trip into the Jackson Hole country of Wyoming where they bagged 2 fine elk, 2 antelope and one fair sized moose.

The moose was a sixteen pointer and weighed between 1200-1300 pounds. The elk were also of good size and weighed between 1,000-1,100 pounds on the hoof. Their antelope dressed out over 80 pounds net weight.

At the camp where the men were staying, the hunters in one day brought down 5 moose. It took the guides with 8 pack horses to bring the moose back to the camp. Bill is especially proud of the antelope he shot as it is known as an "ivory point" antelope, having beautiful ivory tips on it's horns. He is having the head mounted as it was one of the finest ever shot in the Jackson Hole country.

Hunters make their trips out from the camps on horseback as the terrain is very rugged and would be difficult walking a great deal.

This was the third season that Greiman and Messeldine had made the trip. They encountered some cold weather up in the mountains where the snow was 4 inches deep and the thermometer read a chilly 18 degrees! But hunting was excellent and they enjoyed every minute of their trip. On one of the "off" days Bill tried his luck at trout fishing and caught some large cutthroat trout and won a prize for the largest brought into the camp.

The men brought their game back on a trailer hitched behind Mr. Greiman's car. No need to say, the trailer really had a big cargo of fine meat aboard.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Luke 10:25-37.

Christian Living

Lesson for October 1, 1950

READER, do you have your New Testament handy? Get it down and let us go over a few paragraphs of it together. What we are looking for is an answer to this question: Is there anything special, anything different, noticeable, about the Christian way of life?

* * *

Act on the Word

FIRST, look at James 1:22-27 "Be ye doers of the Word," he says, "not hearers only." Moffat's modern-English translation says: "Act on the Word instead of merely listening to it." At the end of this section James offers the only definition of religion given in the entire Bible. Note that it is altogther in terms of action, behavior, life both inward and outward.

Dr. Foreman

"Act on the Word"—he means the Word of God, of course. In verse 21 he has already told us the Word is like a seed sown in our lives, a seed expected to grow

Now look at Phil. 1:27-30. If you have the King James version, which is over 300 years old, that word "conversation" in verse 27 will mislead you.

What Paul wrote (in Greek, of course) was not conversation, but a word meaning manner of living. Moffatt brings out the meaning more pointedly: "Do lead a life worthy of the Gospel of Christ." What God wants us to do as Christians is to live like the best sermons we hear. Live lives that match the story of Jesus.

Life of Grace

NOW turn to the story of Barnabas in Acts 11:19-26. Barnabas was commissioned by the mother-church to inspect and report on the new congregation at Antioch. Were they Christians or not? Barnabas saw two things about those people, and he was glad: it was a congregation of believers, and he saw also the grace of God.

Christian living is a life of faith and a life of grace. It is a life tied with God, blessed by the grace of God. Now this is not automatic. It is not something that happens whether we wish it or not.

Observe what Barnabas told those new Christians at Antioch: "Remain faithful to the Lord with steadfast purpose" (v 23, Revised Standard Version). The Christian life is one of devotion, a life of steady purpose, it is no drifting, sinking life, it sails by the Star of God.

World Not Christian's Orange

NOW turn to a group of passages too full, as all of these are, to be gone over here in detail. You will have to take time yourself to read and think seriously about them: Matt. 5:1-20; 18:21-35; Romans 12:9-21. The theme running through all these is the same: The Christian's life is marked by a special kind of attitude toward other persons.

There are different ways in which people regard others. The criminal looks on all men as his enemies. He is out to beat them down. "Git or git got" is his motto. The "average citizen" who is no Christian, and even some who claim to be Christians but never got the hang of it, are not so brutal as the criminal, but their main idea about other people is much the same, though they are more polite about it.

As one of these has said: "The world is your orange—squeeze it!" What can I make, what is my cut, what will you give me, where do I come in, how can I use you? But the Christian's attitude to other people is totally different. What it is—well, read these passages from Jesus and Paul, and find out.

Without Ceasing

THERE is one more point about the Christian life It keeps on. It grows. Look up I Thessalonians 5:15-25. Listen to the note of perseverance singing through it all. There is a preacher who sometimes says: "You cannot be a Christian today. You can begin today, because that takes only an instant. But you cannot be a Christian today. That takes a lifetime."

The phrases of Paul—"ever follow . . . evermore without ceasing . bold fast . " were not mere phrases He had lived them.

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM

Use Chewing-Gum Laxative—REMOVES WASTE...NOT GOOD FOOD

● When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative — do as MILLIONS do — chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon...right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy . . . you feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

Tin roofs need more frequent check-ups than any other kind because they are unusually subject to rust. The under side of such a roof should be painted before it leaves the sheet metal shop; the upper side must be kept protected with good quality paint as well. Before painting tin for the first time, the surface needs to be wiped with a rag wet with benzine or turpentine. That removes the palm oil film with which the tin is coated.

NATIONAL KIDS' DAY

Kiwanis Boosts Project Assisting U. S. Underprivileged Children

Communities throughout the nation—wherever there is a Kiwanis club—will observe National Kids' Day on Saturday, September 23. Many of the cities will stage concerts, motion picture entertainment, parades, essay contests, father and son banquets, street parties and a host of other activities—all designed to focus attention on the broad problems of underprivileged children.

National Kids' Day is sponsored by more than 3,150 Kiwanis clubs throughout the United States, Canada, Alaska, Hawaii; and the National Kids' Day Foundation.

The Foundation was organized in 1948 by James M. (Jimmie) Fidler, the Hollywood columnist and radio commentator, and has as its three major objectives:

Major Objectives

1. To assist underprivileged children to obtain some of the benefits normally enjoyed by more fortunate boys and girls.
2. To focus attention upon the accomplishments of youth.
3. To interest the general public to a greater degree in the problems of juvenile delinquency and to help its victims become useful citizens.

Kiwanis clubs throughout the United States and Canada have been working on the problems of underprivileged children at the local level for many years. Most clubs have what is known as a "committee on boys and girls work."

With the formation of the National Kids' Day foundation, equipped to function only at the national level, the two organizations joined forces in order to prevent duplication of effort. As a result more than 1,200 Kiwanis clubs sponsored an activity on Kids' day in 1949, and more than 239,000 children throughout the United States and Canada took part in those activities. And while accent in the 1949 celebrations was put upon activities rather than fund raising, approximately $200,000 was contributed to be spent locally for underprivileged children.

A Community Problem

The problem of assistance to which varies from community to community. It must, therefore, be treated as such. In some towns and cities, juvenile delinquency has grown to such proportions that it dwarfs all other social problems. Some communities, however, feel the need for more properly-equipped and supervised play areas for children of all ages. Hearing aid or sight saving clinics for boys and girls who otherwise could not obtain this medical attention are needed in many areas of the United States and Canada.

For this reason money is the key to solving some phase of the underprivileged child problem. Much of the activity of Kids' Day, 1950, will be devoted to raising funds to finance clinics and other underprivileged child work.

Unlike so many special days on the calendar, National Kids' Day is not a commercial device. The only ones who will profit from it are the underprivileged children. Funds raised through activities in connection with the day will be spent in the community in which they are raised.

News on the national campaign can be obtained from the public relations department of J. Walter Thompson Company, 410 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Affection of a Pet May Allay Many Juvenile Problems

Wolf packs . . . teenage punks . . . vandals! Black-jacks . . . brass knuckles . . . knives! These are glaring headlines on shocking juvenile delinquency—all too currently familiar for us to be repetitious, says Raymond J. Hanfield, executive secretary of the National Dog Welfare Guild, official non-profit sponsor of National Dog Week, with headquarters in New York city.

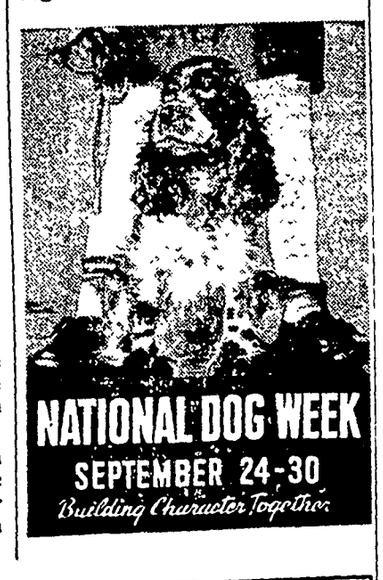
In his opinion, if we could climb up into the family trees of these unfortunate youngsters, we would discover why they are out on a precarious limb. Most of them come from broken homes where there are no mothers and fathers, home where there is drunkenness. And mostly from the slums of big cities where the children have so few privileges and are starved for affection.

'Double-Track' Approach

The statement from Mr. Hansfield added that if these so called dead-end kids had some dog pals, some warm, breathing creature for which they felt responsible and respected they would have affection, friendship, happiness and a feeling of security. By day they could play and run and let off the steam of young energy. By night they would be nice-tired and safe as their dog pals curl up at their bedsides. The world, too, would be spared much of the heartbreak and shame of vicious juvenile delinquency.

The Guild's 1950 program has a "double-track" approach—that is, it concerns both children and dogs. As a team they bring out the finer qualities of each such as sympathy, kindness and respect. Put them all together and in any man's language they spell character development, better citizenship and less juvenile delinquency.

National Dog Week, this year, will be observed September 24-30. The official poster (below) was executed by artist Albert Staehle who is the owner of the famous cover dog "Butch."



Building Character Together Is Theme

This year's National Dog Week has as its theme "Building Character Together" emphasizing that a dog's companionship is a strong key to a child's character. The seven points include: 1. A good home for every dog. 2. Elimination of stray dogs from the streets. 3. Better informed dog owners. 4. Teach consideration for dogs and all animals. 5. Emphasize the dog's use as a companion, helper and home protector. 6. Secure fair laws for dogs and their owners. 7. Teach respect for the rights of non dog owners.

New Vegetable May Edge Out Spinach

Faithful, old spinach, the nutritious vegetable whose edibility has been challenged by generations of children and many of their parents, may be pushed off the American dinner table.

A new green vegetable from Java which tastes better than regular spinach will be marketed in a limited way for the first time this year, frozen or canned.

The contender is called Florida spinach, but will grow over most of the United States in spite of its name. It is low in fiber, high in vitamins and has no oxalic acid the chemical which makes spinach and beet greens hard to digest for some people.

Packing Peaches

Peaches or pears that must stand between peeling and packing should be placed in cold salt water to prevent discoloration. Add two teaspoons of salt to each quart of water. Rinse in clear, cold water before packing. Or use a Vitamin C tablet or special ascorbic acid preparation now available

At Last! It's Now Possible to RELIEVE THE CAUSE of YOUR NEURITIS ACHES and PAINS

When Due to Vitamin B_1, B_2, Niacin and Iron Deficiencies
HADACOL—One of the Greatest Blessings of the Times!

A Big Improvement Is Often Noticed Within a Few Days' Time!

We are delighted to tell the readers of this paper about the wonderful new HADACOL which is bringing radiant hope to such sufferers. Because now you no longer have to go on taking products which bring you symptomatic relief from cruel, stabbing neuritis aches and pains, when the REAL CAUSE is that your system is deficient in the important Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin.

Now, thanks to this wonderful new HADACOL, you can relieve the REAL CAUSE of these miserable aches and pains—when due to such deficiencies.

How HADACOL Works

HADACOL supplies deficient systems not only with extra quantities of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin but also helpful amounts of precious Calcium, Phosphorus and Manganese—elements so vital to maintain physical fitness and guard against such deficiency sickness.

Be fair to yourself. Be fair to your family. Why continue to suffer so and drag yourself around when relief is as close at hand as your nearest drugstore? Start taking this great HADACOL today. It's inexpensive—costs only a small amount a day.

And one of the many wonderful advantages of HADACOL is that continued use helps give you continuous complete relief and helps keep such miserable aches and pains from returning. Trial-size bottle, only $1.25. Large family or hospital size, $3.50.

These Are Just a Few of Thousands of Records of Folks Who Once Had Such Deficiencies

Mrs. Mabel Kitchen, 1650 Amsterdam, Cincinnati, Ohio: "Before I started HADACOL, I had aches and pains of neuritis in my shoulders, my back and arms. I could hardly move without having those terrible aches and pains. Then I heard about HADACOL from a very good friend of mine. After the second bottle the aches and pains were about gone. I'm just starting my fourth bottle and now I'm on top of the world. The aches and pains are completely gone. I recommend HADACOL to all my friends."

Harry Springer, 5608 Greer Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri: "I had neuritis pains for quite some time and tried expensive treatments but continued to suffer. Then I read about HADACOL in the newspaper and I bought my first bottle. Within a week I felt quite a bit better. After the third bottle I had no pains or trouble at all. I was always tired and listless, but after a few bottles of HADACOL I felt like getting out and doing things. I recommend HADACOL to anyone. Right now, five of my co-workers are taking HADACOL on my recommendation."

Why not start taking HADACOL this very day. Give it a chance to relieve the REAL CAUSE of your cruel neuritis pain when due to lack of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin in your system. YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF.

Why HADACOL Comes in Special Liquid Form—Why It Reaches Every Part of Your Body

Vitamins and Minerals to be absorbed by the blood must be in soluble or emulsion form. That's why HADACOL comes in this special liquid form so that its precious elements are more easily and quickly absorbed and assimilated by the blood stream—ready to go to work at once.

HADACOL even helps build up and fortify your red blood cells (when Iron is needed) to carry these precious health-building Vitamins and Minerals to every organ and part of your body—to the heart, lungs, liver and kidneys.

Often within a few days' time a remarkable improvement is noticed! Because remember you are now relieving the REAL CAUSE of such deficiencies and pains.

Sold on a Strict Money-Back Guarantee

If after taking HADACOL for a reasonable period of time, you don't notice a great improvement in the way you feel—if you aren't experiencing fine results—your money will be refunded. Could you ask for anything fairer? You stand to gain simply wonderful benefits—and you can't lose one penny. It's your own fault if you continue to suffer so.

type of surgical operation that goes with the dog business.

Right along that line, Stromer caponizes his chickens, too. Last spring, he lost only 6 out of 535 birds in his flock while performing the delicate operation. He says he can operate on about 300 8-week-old birds in a day's time.

Stromer has been raising capons for several years. He sells direct to a Chicago buyer, and has realized a sizable profit. The birds are ready for market at about 8 to 10 pounds in weight, and bring considerable more than market price for chickens.

At little additional expense, Stromer constructed a laying house with facilities for 400 laying hens on the 2nd floor of the kennel and stable building. He keeps hens in the laying house during winter months when the protection offered by the insulated building is particularly helpful to production.

Dog kennels occupy the center of the 1st floor of the building, and pony stables are in the end opposite the office. The hallow tile structure is completely insulated and temperature in the office and kennels is thermostatically controlled. An oil furnace provides heat.

The kennel section of the building consists of 20 steel pens, 10 on each side of the building. The pens are 3 feet wide. They are 6 feet long inside the building and extend 14 feet outside. Toy Terriers are kept on one side of the building and English Shepherds on the other.

Picture at bottom shows Stromer behind the kennels with a Blue Mountain Shepherd female which he purchased in the state of Washington. She is the only dog of that breed which the Klemme farmer owns. He also has a Border Collie in his kennels. The remainder of the dogs are English Shepherds or Toy Terriers.

KLEMME MUSIC MOTHERS HELD FIRST MEETING SEPTEMBER 20TH

This is an organization of mothers who are willing to give their time to promoting improvements along musical ways in the school. Every mother who has a child participating in band or Glee Clubs, or has a child studying a band instrument is considered an active member. The dues for the year is the small nominal fee of 50c.

The music mothers were very busy last year with Mrs. Roy Jacobs as president. They had bake sales, and ice cream social, sold calendars, served at the concert, served Farm Bureau dinner, Alumni Association banquet, and collected dues to increase the music fund. With this money, 10 new band uniforms were purchased, majorette suit, twirlers skirt, chair stand, bass drum and stand, baritone case and stand and expenses for the Spring Music Festival. As you see it is an organization of ambitious mothers and this year we hope to be as successful.

The new officers are as follows:
President --- Mrs. E. A. Gerardi
Vice-Pres. - Mrs. M. Neuberger
Secretary --- Mrs. Vern Bisom
Treasurer ----- Mrs. Fred Goll

Again we extend an invitation to all Music Mothers to attend the next meeting which will be held October 18th. This is all for your most cherished possession. "Your Children."

This week being National Dog Week, we in the second grade brought pictures of all kinds of dogs to put on our bulletin board. It was very interesting to see the dozens of dogs which were brought and try to tell what kind they were.

The caterpillar one of us brought, has already spun his cocoon, although it will be a long time before we can hope to see a butterfly emerge.

Eldon Nuehring brought his dental card back, making a total of three signed for the boys and none for the girls.

—Miss Brones

Third Grade News

Even though fall has just been here a short time the 3rd grade is already prepared for it. They have made maple leaves and oak leaves which are now bordering both windows.

In Art class we are making little men out of light bulbs.

Seventh Grade News

This past week has been another week of tests. We are preparing for our six weeks tests.

We are proud to say that for the past four weeks we have had perfect attendance. This is setting a fine example.

This week we had 11 out of 17 perfect papers in spelling. We are gradually becoming wiser in spelling.

The girls have finished their fine poster display of flowers. We have received many compliments on their work.

Then also this week, we enjoyed our class picnic. We had a grand time together.

Eighth Grade News

The eighth grade English class spent the past week studying and working with diagram fundamentals. It seems rather tough but give us a little time and we will master it.

We started our study of decimals this week and have been doing quite nicely with them. We all have our troubles but it doesn't take long to iron those out.

We now have one dental card in and evpect more in next week. Marlene Blumer was the first to get her card in.

Perfect attendance has been achieved for the third week in a row now. Let's keep up the good work.

Wednesday morning was a surprise for most of us, when Mr. Juhl sprang some intelligent tests on us. Most of us did very well in them.

Our favorite motto for this week, "Most people called lucky, planned and worked while the other fellow loafed and wished."

Eclipse Of The Moon Seen Here Monday Evening

Those who were out-of-doors Monday evening witnessed an eclipse of the moon, clearly visible all over north Iowa.

Frost Did Some Damage

Frost damage in North Iowa Saturday night varied greatly. The concensus seems to be that the corn was not greatly affected although leaves were killed in some of the lower fields. The stalk was not hurt, however.

Soybeans were more affected than the corn, especially later planted fields which in some places were killed and which had immature beans.

At Mason City the low of 30 degrees was registered at the KGLO transmitter.

NEW EWES SHOULD BE PUT THROUGH "CLINIC"

Sheepmen who have had experience with buying breeding ewes have found it pays to run new ewes through a "health clinic."

Drench newly bought low-altitude western or native ewes with phenothiazine as the first step through the clinic, advises Eugene Francis, extension animal husbandman at Iowa State College. This will control round worms, nodule worms and common stomach worms.

The ewes also may have ticks. This will call for a good spraying or dipping.

The next thing is to start flushing the ewes. A good green pasture will take care of this, but if pastures are hard, oats makes a good substitute, and daily feeding of ½ pound per head will put ewes in a gaining condition.

Sheepman have found that heavier, faster-gaining sheep can be raised by using a purebred, mutton-type buck, Francis says.

ay: "Hats off to our schools in Iowa!" They've made the most literate state in Union. They're teaching a fine d of citizenship, too — teach- tolerance, the ability to live work with our fellow men.

hey teach folks how to see gs fairly and get along together in the true democratic way.

And when we practice respecting the other fellow's viewpoint, considering the other man's rights and opinions, we have a better, stronger America.

It's as important as a man's right to choose his own politics or as simple as his preference for a temperate glass of beer, or the friends he likes.

Let's keep on teaching tolerance and broadmindedness, because that is the cornerstone of good citizenship.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Study of Department Procedure Leads to Recent Reorganization

This is the second of a series of six articles on the department of state and its personnel by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.

By WALTER A. SHEAD

Washington, D. C.—Considerable fun has been poked at the department of state in by-gone years when even the secretary of state did not have full executive authority, when appointments to the department were considered plums for some deserving or undeserving politician or the ambitious and socially climbing rich.

Conditions and traditions had grown up in the department wherein the foreign or career service was almost a law unto itself and this tightly knitted clique could bypass or defy the orders of the secretary of state.

Intensive studies as to reorganization of the department have been going on for the past dozen years and in 1944 the results of these studies began to take form and culminated in new legislation in 1947, giving the secretary of state "full authority" over the direction of the department and the foreign service.

The provisions of law which had vested authority in subordinate officials were amended and such authority now is vested solely in the secretary In addition, a complete reorganization of the entire set-up of the department has been completed which insures a direct chain of command from the top down to the operational units of the department.

When Dean Acheson was named secretary, he had been vice-chairman of the Hoover commission for reorganization of the executive branch of the government. He lost no time in putting into effect the recommendations of the Hoover commission.

Direct appointments to the department proper are made after full investigation and screening.

The personnel of the foreign service are selected even more carefully and only after their graduation from the foreign service institute, a graduate school of high scholastic standing operated by the state department itself and about which more will be said later.

REORGANIZATION of the department had two purposes in mind: one, to set up a machine to carry out U.S. responsibilities in the formulation and execution of foreign policy; and, two, to emphasize the department's work with congress and the public-at-large.

Immediately after the war the department of state absorbed several war agencies, among them the Office of War Information. In these agencies there were beyond doubt some friends of Russia, then our ally. There may have been some Communists or fellow travelers.

Through the history of this nation efforts have been made by other nations to penetrate the secrets of the state department. In the past, however, these spies have been largely professional spies and the department of state had counter - espionage and security methods to protect itself and the nation. During these post-war years, however, the spread of the fanatical, atheistic communism, the professional spy is competing with the amateur Communist.

JAMES EDWIN WEBB
UNDERSECRETARY OF STATE

James Edwin Webb, born Greenville county, N. C., October 7, 1906, son of John Frederick and Sarah Gorham Webb, A.B. from University of North Carolina, 1928; student at George Washington University law school, 1933-36. Married Patsy Aiken Doubles, May 14, 1938. Two children, Sarah Gorham and James Edwin Webb, Jr. Appointed executive assistant to undersecretary of treasury, 1946; director of bureau of budget, 1946-1949; appointed undersecretary of state, January, 1949.

One way to solve the problem of amateur Communist espionage was set up in 1947 under Gen. George C. Marshall, as secretary of state, under a directive of the President inaugurating a loyalty program.

Under the leadership of Jack Puerifoy of South Carolina, a long-time state department official and former West Point cadet, a security staff was set up consisting of 74 investigators. In addition, the FBI, under the direction of J. Edgar Hoover, cooperates wholly and all persons in the department have gone through a thorough screening. When Secretary Acheson came into power, he continued Puerifoy in the job.

This screening process is not based on the idea that all the people it investigates are crooks or spies. It is a process based first on protecting the United States and, at the same time, protecting the individual's rights, protecting their reputations, urging and permitting them to continue to serve the United States with loyalty and enthusiasm. If anything doubtful is found it goes before the loyalty board of the department of which Gen. Conrad Snow, a New Hampshire Republican, is chairman.

Whatever recommendation this board makes, whether it is to clear the individual or not, he then goes before the President's loyalty board headed by Seth Richardson, a former assistant attorney general under President Hoover, and if the individual is not cleared he is given an opportunity to resign. If there is direct evidence of disloyalty, the evidence goes to the department of justice.

Whatever the merits of the system, Secretary Acheson believes it is the correct way. "The wrong way is to smear everybody's character and reputation, to make charges which you hope will stick and in doing destroy confidence of the people in their government and its institutions."

THE FICTION CORNER

CAUSE FOR MURDER

By Richard H. Wilkinson

ANDREW RANDALL'S death was, obviously, suicide. Capt. Van Ness of the homicide squad went down to investigate, though he admitted the investigation was merely in the line of routine duty. I went with him.

"You can't make a murder out of this one," I grumbled. "Come on home. We're wasting each others time.

3-Minute Fiction

"Keep your shirt on, scribe. Let's look around the joint. I've always wanted to see what a millionaire's home looked like."

"You're still wasting time. Randall was just $999,999 short of being a millionaire."

This was true. Once a prominent member of the upper brackets, Andrew Randall's fortune had depleted steadily for the past dozen years. Even the house was mortgaged.

"Who's going to inherit this bunch of debts?" I asked Van.

"As far as I can figure there's only one living relative. A youngster named Barry Roister. A nephew by marriage. He lives in Michigan."

The drawing room of the old house contained three fairly good oil paintings. There were some silver and a few antique pieces and a car in the garage. Otherwise, young Mr. Barry Roister of Michigan was going to find it hardly worth his while to make the trip to New York to collect his inheritance.

I stared blankly. "That wasn't a murder. It was a suicide. What do you mean you've got the killer?"

Outside, Van sighed deeply. "What a pity! There was a chance for a swell murder case and it turns out to be nothing but an ordinary suicide."

"Lord, it's getting so a man can't honestly kill himself these days without some inquisitive copper trying to dramatize it.

I was sent up to Provincetown and then down to Miami to cover the air races. So it was more than two weeks before I returned to New York. The day after my arrival I dropped in on Van.

He looked brighter and satisfied.

"About the Randall murder," he said. "We've got the killer!"

I stared blankly. Then suddenly I remembered. "That wasn't a murder. It was a suicide. What do you mean you've got the killer?"

"Barry Roister from Michigan. Remember? The nephew by marriage. He did it."

"Now look, Van," I said. "Stop talking in bunches. Why would Barry Roister want to kill penniless old Andy Randall?

"Because of the paintings. You remember those three paintings we saw in the drawing room?"

"I remember that they weren't anything to kill an old man over."

"Ha!" said Van. "You newspaper men! Never get behind the news. Too superficial. I suppose you never heard of Caleb Trask?"

"No, I never heard of Caleb Trask."

"Well, he's an artist. Pretty good too. He painted those oils. They sold for about $50 each. Then Caleb died. So what always happens when a fairly good artist dies? The price of his paintings hits the sky So Caleb Trask lived in Michigan and Roister, being an art connoisseur and knowing that his distant uncle owned the paintings, began to think.

"Ah! is right. To Roister it looked like a set-up. Uncle Andy had every reason to commit suicide and who would ever suspect a distant nephew living in Michigan who would only inherit a bunch of debts?

"So Roister made a quick and murderous trip to Uncle Andy's and then returned to Michigan. And when he was advised he had inherited a lot of debts he came back and gave his uncle a decent burial and took the paintings and left everything else for the debts. And a week and a half later I read in the papers where the Trask oils had sold for $50,000 each." Van sighed and grinned. "What a pity you newspaper men don't try to get behind the news."

"What a pity," I snapped, "that you had to read in the newspapers about the paintings being sold."

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

White Horsemen of World War I Still Unexplained

By BILLY ROSE

As I've mentioned before, whenever I come down with a case of brain-blank I smash the crystal on a cheap wrist watch and mosey down to see an old watchmaker on West 11th Street. While he's tinkering with the timepiece, I gab with him about this and that, and by the time I leave my watch has a new crystal and I generally have the material for a column.

The other afternoon I noticed an unusual looking clock on his repair bench—one with symbols on the dial instead of numerals.

"It's a Bavarian miracle clock," said the watchmaker, "and each symbol stands for a different miracle. For instance, the little fish represents the miracle of the loaves and fishes."

Billy Rose

"Do you believe in that sort of thing?" I asked.

"Whether you think so or not," smiled the old man, "miracles happen all the time. For instance, take the fire in Canada a couple of months ago—the one that wiped out almost the entire town but didn't touch the church."

"It could have been air currents," I said.

"Maybe," said the watchmaker, "but how would you explain away the cross in the sky that two thousand Englishmen swore they saw during an air raid in 1944? Or would you rationalize the white horsemen who are accredited with winning two battles in the first World War?"

"TAKE YOUR TIME with the watch and details," I said

"Well," said the old gent, "the first time the horsemen appeared was in August, 1914, when the Germans were advancing through a big hole in the Allied line at Mons. One night when it looked as if there was no stopping them, the sky suddenly turned yellow and across it—heading straight for the Jerries—rode three white figures mounted on white horses, the center rider waving a gold-tipped sword. The enemy took one look, and that was the end of the advance."

"Sounds like somebody was seeing things," I said.

"Thousands of people were seeing things—and they ranged from privates to generals. And later that night when several hundred of the Germans were captured, to a man they reported having seen the figures, too.

"The white horsemen didn't show up again until four years later," the watchmaker went on, "and this time they brought along a lot of friends. It was during the last German push along the Bethune line, and when a Portugese regiment cracked up under the artillery fire a handful of British machine-gunners were rushed in to plug the hole. The gunners knew they didn't have a chance of getting out alive—all they could hope for was to keep the enemy busy until reinforcements arrived.

THEN CAME THE miracle. Suddenly the German guns switched their range and direction, and began blasting a patch of ground several hundred yards to the right of the machine-gunners—an area that was completely deserted. And then half an hour later, for no discernible reason, the Germans turned tail and began to run.

"At first, the British couldn't believe their eyes; then they figured it was some sort of trick—although under the circumstances it didn't make military sense to bother with a trick. Finally the English sent out a reconnaissance squad, and it brought back fifty prisoners from various parts of the line.

"Each prisoner was examined separately and, according to Captain C. W. Haywood of British Intelligence, each one told exactly the same story.

"When the Portuguese regiment retreated, the Germans began to chase after it and only stopped when they saw a detachment of cavalry riding forward from the Allied line to outflank them. This confused them because, for one thing, cavalry had long been obsolete on the Western Front and, for another, every member of the detachment was dressed in white and riding a white horse.

"The artillery was immediately ordered to bombard the horsemen, but when the men in white continued charging across the open field despite the curtain of shells, the Germans got panicky and fled."

"How about the English gunners?" I said.

"That's the strangest part of it," said the watchmaker. "Captain Haywood made careful inquiry among his men but he couldn't find a single British soldier who had seen anything in the empty space to the right—except space."

The Fan Likes His Hero Humble

By GRANTLAND RICE

IT HAS BEEN SAID and written often in the past that we have the habit of overboosting our stars. We crown them with too much laurel and flatten them beneath too many olive boughs. We lift too many average guys into more prominent spots than they deserve. To me, it seems it is often the opposite way. I happen to know how the British take care of their old heroes. The British are hero worshippers — "Old Bill" —"Good old Harry"—etc.

Grantland Rice

For the better part we knock their brains out. Even in their prime—Dempsey, Arcaro, DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Ty Cobb, Hans Wagner, Gene Tunney. I never heard anyone boo Babe Ruth—maybe they have—but I've heard them boom the others viciously.

There are several reasons for this. The average guy is just an average guy. He isn't going very far in any direction. He doesn't like to see anybody get beyond his reach.

"The reason 'Casey at the Bat' was so popular," DeWolf Hopper told me years ago, "was because the pitcher made a monkey out of the great Casey."

"A Babe Ruth strikeout drew even greater cheers than a Babe Ruth home run. The more popular writers knock everybody. They are not interested always in fact. They know the mob likes to read the rap —not the boost."

There was a night in St. Louis when I spent a few hours with Ted Williams. Ted was bitter. "I'm leading the league," he said, "in home runs — batting average—runs driven in. I'm hustling the best way I can. Why do they still boo me?"

"Just a minute," I said. I went back to my room and brought Ted back two verses The theme was—"They boo Arcaro and DiMaggio—why shouldn't they boo me?"

Ted laughed "I never thought of it this way," he said. "This is great."

But he was just as sore the next time they booed him. The only fine competitor I know who laughs at his knockers or booers is Arcaro.

"I know how stupid they are," Eddie says. "Stupid and dumb and crooked. They expect me to ride for them. To win every race. I give the best I have in every race. But there are times when you get a kick out of knowing they have lost a few dollars."

Introverts and Extroverts

You are what you are born to be. For example, the extreme in extroverts was Sweeney, the old Yankee catcher.

Sweeney always gave his best. This particular day he hustled but got the worst of the breaks. The crowds booed Sweeney with considerable venom. That night a few of us were telling Sweeney about the tough break he got.

"Ch, I did all right," Sweeney said. "Didn't you hear that fellow who was applauding me?" Here was one against five thousand.

That's extroverting to a high degree. Then there was the Red Sox-Cardinal world series. Ted Williams finally bunted to left field against the Cardinal defense, Ted was safe and when the inning was over the left-field stands gave him an ovation. They kept on cheering. Williams never tipped his cap.

"Why didn't you tip your cap?" I asked him that night.

"I tried my best," Ted said wistfully. "I wanted to show them how I felt."

What Makes the Phillies Win?

Mr. Robert Carpenter's and Mr. Eddie Sawyer's Phillies have quite naturally absorbed their share and a little more of the season's baseball gossip.

After their unexpected jump last season, they were expected by many to hold their third-place spot, and by just as many others to lose a notch and probably finish fourth. For, after all, they had the Dodgers, Cardinals, Braves and Giants to handle.

I know Eddie Sawyer was none too confident last spring at Clearwater that his team could finish third again.

A year ago, Roberts had won 15 and lost 15. Simmons had won four and lost 10 at the end of the campaign. Miller was still in the minors. But look at what happened: by the middle of August, Roberts, Simmons and Miller had won 39 games between them and had dropped only 15.

This, in the main, is the story of the Phillies for 1950. But it isn't the entire story for one reason—the rest of the team had also improved. Simmons and Roberts wouldn't have won all those games with the Phillies of 1949. They were with a much better ball club.

In what way? Well, for example, there's Del Ennis. A year ago Ennis hit 25 home runs and drove over 110 runs. By the middle of August this year Ennis had 27 home runs and had driven in over 100 runs.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Gives 8 Points for Peace; Reds Snap Defense Wall in North; New Wage Increases Are Reported

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

TRUMAN:

Statement of Policy

In an obvious attempt to erase some of the confusion that has developed around the American foreign policy since General MacArthur's statement on Formosa, President Truman made a report to the nation in which he stated eight aims of this country.

At the same time he announced plans for doubling American armed strength to nearly 3,000,000 men and asserted our productive capacity would be pushed to any degree necessary to attain a victory for freedom and the rule of law.

In his speech which was broadcast over a world-wide hookup, the President made it plain that a world war would not develop unless the Communists drove new puppets against the United Nations forces in Korea.

By this he meant, of course, Chinese Communists who have been reported as massing troops near the Korean border.

However, he made it plain that we would stay in the conflict if such a decision was made. He then attacked Russia for violating its pledges of international co-operation and preaching peace, but practicing aggression.

The eight points expounded in his speech:

1. We believe in the United Nations.
2. We believe Koreans have a right to be free.
3. We don't want the Korean fighting to expand into general war.
4. We particularly hope the Chinese people won't be misled into fighting the U.N and the American people who still are their friends.
5. We want none of Asia, Formosa included, for ourselves.
6. We believe in freedom for all far eastern nations.
7. We do not believe in aggressive or preventive war.
8. We want peace and "we shall achieve it."

KOREA:

Stab at Taegu

North Korean forces, in the greatest advance in several weeks, broke through the northern U.N. defense wall and sent two columns of tanks and troops within a few miles of Kyangju, 12 miles south of Pohang.

From there the columns could swing west and stab at Taegu from the rear, or continue to push for Pusan some 50 miles to the south. It was the most serious threat to U.N. forces in a number of weeks. Military men were wondering if the Communists had the strength to exploit their penetration.

On all other fronts U N forces were holding or counter-attacking. In the northwest U S troops continued to root out Reds dug in on a 3,000-foot ridge 12 miles north of Taegu and smashed several Red attempts to cross the Naktong river.

On the south-central front U N. forces further compressed the Red bridgehead across the Naktong near where it joins the Nam river.

In the southwest U.N. forces were back in old positions west of Maman and Mason after breaking up new red attacks. On this front the Communists reportedly lost 13,000 troops in four days.

In the air navy and air force planes continued to give close support to ground forces on all fronts, striking savagely with heavy explosives, rockets, napalm fire bombs and machine guns.

B-29's and B-26's continued to strike deep into Red territory.

LEWIS:

The Bear Growls

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and known in some quarters as the unhappy bear in labor's ranks, has growled again. This time the victim was A.F.L. President William Green.

Lewis told Green in no uncertain terms that his union would not be bound by a no-strike pledge during the war emergency.

He charged Green of bartering the rights of labor to appease his "innate craving for orthodox respectability" and added: "Restrict your pledges to your own outfit. We can do our own no-striking."

Some believed Lewis used this means of getting back at Green for not including the miners in unity talks between the AFL and the C.I.O.

EMPLOYMENT:

All-Time High

Employment in the United States was the greatest in the nation's history, the department of commerce reported with more than 62 million persons at work.

The only decrease noted in the entire employment picture was that of farm workers. A drop of 280,000 during the month, to 8,160,000, was reported.

The August total was 752,000 above the record set in July, 1948.

Conference

Chairman Millard Tydings (left), senate armed services committee, and house armed services Committee Chairman Carl Vinson, (right), are shown at the White House after conferring with President Truman on a new tank program which will cost an additional $500,000,000.

LABOR:

What's in the Future?

The Ford motor company tore up an unexpired contract with the United Automobile Workers and granted an immediate 8-cent-hourly cost-of-living wage increase. Previously, the Chrysler corporation had made a "voluntary" wage adjustment of 10 cents an hour. On top of this the White House announced the long dispute between the A.F.L. switchman's union and 10 western railroads had been settled with an agreement that gives the union a 23-cent-hourly wage boost.

With these facts in mind, economists are asking what's in the future for the American people? They came up with the immediate answer that it will force the nation into direct wage and price controls much sooner than would otherwise have occurred.

The Ford company's labor relations is always a pattern for the automobile industry. Other companies will follow this trend, most observers agreed.

Current hourly pay of the average automobile worker is estimated at $1.75. Rates for skilled craftsmen, such as tool and die makers, run about $2.50.

Most economists believed the new wage increases would be reflected in the price of automobiles within the near future.

Observers reported the over-all picture indicated a round of wage increases throughout the labor ranks. These increases in the past have been reflected in the cost of living in all fields.

Some economists, however, believe that as soon as the wage structure is equalized to make up for loss of purchasing power since Korea, the economy will go along on a plateau.

JOHNSON:

Refuses to Resign

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, under fire from many quarters to resign but still backed by President Truman, flatly rejected a demand for his resignation and said he had "no apology" for his record as chief of the nation's military chief of the nation's military forces.

In his unusual statement Johnson said many of the attacks on both him and Acheson were "primarily political" and were leveled "with an eye to the November election."

He likened himself to the late Defense Secretary Forrestal who broke down after repeated attacks by critics and later jumped to his death.

He said he was sure he still enjoyed the confidence of the President and the public and that "in the long run the solid facts of what the department of defense is accomplishing will stand out above the misinformation that various individuals and various groups, for reasons of their own, see fit to spread."

Among other things, Johnson has been accused of promoting a defensive war and working against the policies of the state department. Criticism of Johnson has been forthcoming from both Democrats and Republicans.

Casualties

A total of 6,886 Korean war casualties were reported by the defense department as the conflict got well into its third month. The total, however, did not include those suffered during the latest big Communist push.

The total included 443 killed in action, 3889 wounded, and 2,436 missing in action. The summary said 60 wounded have been returned to duty.

MANPOWER:

Doctors and Fathers

Thousands of men who had looked upon the draft as something remote, a mere possibility in the dim future, suddenly found themselves face to face with the probability of being in the armed forces.

The house armed services committee announced the draft would be extended to draft-age married men with dependents. Officials estimated there are 1,000,000 married non-veterans of draft age—19 through 25—and that up to 400,000 would qualify for induction.

Meanwhile, a senate house group reached a compromise on a bill to draft doctors and dentists through age 50. The bill upon which the conferees agreed is designed to put into uniform 5,600 doctors and 3,000 dentists who were trained at government expense during World War II.

Few doctors or dentists actually are expected to be drafted. Military officials are confident the threat of a draft will swell the ranks of volunteers. An added inducement is the fact that volunteers will get $100-a-month bonus while draftees will not. Doctors could be drafted with the rank of private; volunteers, would get at least a lieutenant's commission.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of national selective service, reported that nearly three out of five candidates for military service are being rejected.

SPY-WEARY HOUSE:

Votes Red Curbs

The house had approved by a roll-call vote of 354 to 20 a bill which subjects American Communists to heavy curbs, and the senate was expected to approve a similar bill.

The measure is unusual on the American scene in that it would force a political party to register its many fronts (organizations). It goes even further and would compel them to label their propaganda and deny them defense jobs, bar them from government employment, and deny them the right to travel abroad.

President Truman is reported to disapprove of the legislation on the grounds that it might impair traditional American liberties. From a technical viewpoint such legislation if applied to one party could be applied to another and thus restricts the individual's political and civil liberties.

According to the F.B.I., the legislation will hit about 550,000 Communists and fellow travelers. J. Edgar Hoover, director of the F.B.I., in a recent report estimated there are about 50,000 Communists and 10 times that many sympathizers in the United States.

DEWEY:

All-Out Attack

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, who was as dead as a fried mackerel — politically speaking — after his recent announcement that he was retiring, is back in the limelight. Dewey announced he would seek a third term as governor of New York.

His return to the ring would indicate the Republicans have found an issue. In his own words: "We will not survive this crisis (the Korean conflict) unless we have a strong and constructive opposition party to force correction of the errors and incompetence of the national administration and to compel it to take a larger view of our dangers and more effective action to meet them."

Political observers reported there can be no doubt now as to what campaign issues the Republicans will expound this fall. On all fronts it will be a sharp attack on President Truman's conduct of the Korean war.

Mistaken

Ex-New Dealer Lee Pressman, (above) admitted one-time Communist, in testimony before a house committee named three other government employees who were Communists in 1934 and 1935. Now Pressman says he feels he made a "mistake" by joining the Communist party and that he has cut all connections with them.

FORMOSA:

Confusion Increases

New confusion has been added to the Formosa question with President Truman's statement that it would no longer be necessary to keep the U.S. seventh fleet off Formosa once peace has been settled in the Korean war.

No one seems sure just what President Truman means. On the surface the statement would seem premature and adds to existing confusion.

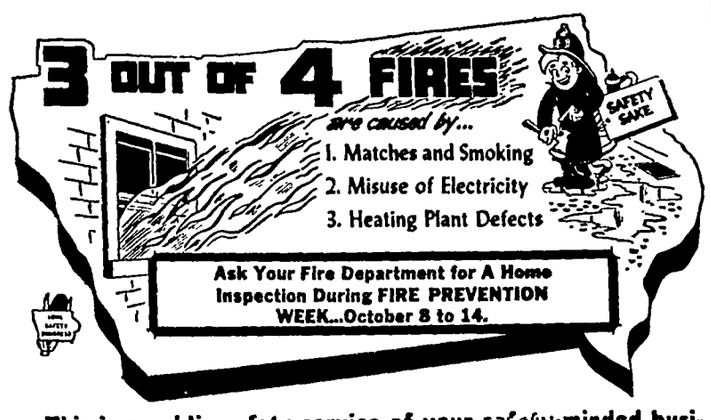
Begins Campaign For Office Of Clerk District Court

Arnold "Bub" Hampel of Garner, Democratic candidate for the office of Clerk of the District Court of Hancock County, this week began his campaign for the office. He was in Klemme Monday calling on the voters.



This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

That roof over your head - look permanent does it? And the walls of the house around you - seems they might stand for 50 years to come. Think about fire and look again. Maybe your home, your place of business is just standing on a day to day basis.

During the rest of this year in Iowa, home fires will strike one out of every 100 families. During the next five years, one out of every 20 families in the state will scramble for the telephone to call the fire department.

The most common causes of these fires will be carelessness with matches and smoking, misuse of electricity and defective heating plants.

These statistics, these common causes of fire, seem to bring the purpose of national fire prevention week close to each one of us. Fire prevention week begins Octobr 8. During this period the Iowa safety congress urges you to think of fire hazards and to correct them. Call your local fire department for a home inspection.

Your fire department is equipped and trained to put out fires, but only you are in a position to prevent fire in your home.

WELLEMEYER DOING SOME EXTENSIVE REMODELING OF BUILDING

Art Wellemeyer is doing extensive remodeling of his store building since Thada's moved out and into their own new building across the street.

At the present time Art has a force of men at work putting up partitions, putting in some new windows and an entrance and closing up the old west side entrance.

When completed the lower floor will provide a large room for Marie's Beauty Shop in the southeast corner. Directly beyond this to the north will be offices for a dentist and a large reception room which will also be used by Dr. Missman, who will have his office rooms at the rear and east of the building. A cement walk leads to the office roms on the east side of the building. The entrance is protected with a nice canopy.

The balance of the first floor will be used as additional room for Mr. Wellemeyer's furniture. His present office near the front will be taken out so that a clear view of the entire new furniture department can be seen from the street. A new front entrance to the furniture store will be built.

The job of remodeling will take several months.

FIGHT FIRES BEFORE THEY START

The lucky farmer is the one who never needs to use his fire fighting equipment, says Hancock County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

This doesn't mean that fire fighting equipment isn't necessary. But by doing away with fire hazards on the farm, there may never be a fire to fight.

A fire hazard check car is available for the asking at Henderson's office. Farmers can check down the list of hazards in this card and inspect the danger points on their own farm. Then remove those hazards, Henderson urges

Fire prevention is simply a job of finding these hazards and doing away with them. Most of the fires that will wipe out property in Hancock County during the next year will be caused by a hazard that turned into a fire.

The best way to fight fires to fight them before they start, and fire prevention week, Oct. 8-14, will be a good time to make a special hunt for hazards, Henderson observes.

CENTRAL STATES INSTALLS DIESEL ENGINE AT BRITT

The capacity of the Britt generating plant owned by the Central States Electric company has been doubled by the installation of a second 1,500 horsepower pneumatic diesel engine, hitched to a 2,000 kilowatt capacity three phase transformer, built in one unit.

Enough electrical energy can be manufactured now in the Britt plant to supply the territory for a radius of 20 to 30 miles.

HUNTING LAWS NOW AVAILABLE

Supplies of the 1950-51 hunting law leaflets are now being distributed to local conservation officers, county recorders, and other license sales agencies, and hunters may obtain copies free from those agencies, as well as from the State Conservation Commission offices in Des Moines. The new leaflets contain pertinent information on open seasons and laws governing the taking of game, game birds, and fur-bearing animals.

Friends Of Scouting Oct. 17

FRIENDS OF SCOUTING CAMPAIGN TO GET UNDERWAY OCT. 17

On October 17th, the 1951 Friends of Scouting Campaign mill get under way in Hancock County with an early bird kick-off breakfast in every town in Hancock County. It is on this date that we want to unlock the doors to more and better scouting. Those of you who are interesting in scouting hold the key. The doors to 1951 are locked and only a successful "Friends of Scouting Campaign can open them."

In the days ahead make Scouting your business by recruiting more friends for this all-important youth program. The power to extend Scouting to more boys depends on this campaign.

The Winnebago Council, of which Hancock County is one of nine counties, must raise $42,-275.00 if the program is to be carried out according to the Council plan.

The scouting program has as its chief aim the building of men of character and good morals who will become the type of citizens that will keep our nation strong in the years ahead. It is cheaper to build such a man than it is to try and reclaim one who hasn't had the basic qualities of good youth training.

The citizens of Hancock County should resolve now to put their shoulder to the wheel and help make this campaign a success. The Scouting program needs you and is depending on you and you need the Scouting program.

Mark October 17th in your mind and on your calendar. Tune in radio station KGLO at Mason City at 7:45 A. M. and hear the scouting message. It will inspire you and strengthen your friendship for one of America's greatest Youth Programs. Remember, a scout is trustworthy, loyal, helpful, courteous, friendly, kind, obendient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent.

COUNTY HOME ECONOMIST OFFERS HELP IN FLAG PROJECT

"My office is ready to take calls and to give any help Hancock County women desire in the making of United Nations flags for our communities." Elsie Mae VanWert, county extension home economist, has indicated.

The flag-making project isn't as difficult as the intricate design of the pattern would appear, Miss Van Wert said, and she is sure that any women's group getting started now could easily have the flag ready in time for United Nations observance on October 24th.

The instructions for the flag may be ordered in kit form, singly or in quantities, from the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work, 59 East Van Buren Street, Chicago 5, Illinois. The cost for a complete kit, postpaid, is $2.25. The kit includes 1 and seven-eighths yards of blue bunting which is 36 inches wide, 2 hot-iron transfer patterns of the complete design, a world design printed on cloth ready to sew, directions for making the flag, and thread.

The white cloth for the wreath can be furnished by homemakers themselves from material on hand at home.

A 50 cent kit may be secured if desired. It includes only the transfer patterns, the central world design and directions for making the flag. The blue material may then be purchased locally.

The National Committe for Boys and Girls Club Work is filling all orders promptly, Miss Van Wert said, and there should be little delay in getting the patterns. The pattern available is for a flag that will measure 3 by 5 feet.

Miss Van- Wert, is not ordering the kits through her office since to do so would delay rather than speed up getting the materials to different organizations. She does urge the county groups to send their orders in immediately.

Perhaps nearly everyone of our readers has at some time or another read the famous book "Huckleberry Finn," and laughted at the boyish pranks and peculiar situations that can only happen to a boy.

Now that you have read the book, you will certainly want to see the play to be presented by the Junior Class of the Klemme High School next week Thursday evening at 8:00 p. m.

Mrs. Robert Andreae, who has directed many successful high school plays here, is directing this play, which should be one of the very best of comedies.

HADACOL One of the Greatest Blessings of the Tim

Just a Few of Thousands Upon Thousands of Interesting Records of Folks With Such Deficiencies Who Have Been Helped

Mrs. C. C. Keller, 1629½ Frederick Avenue, St. Joseph, Missouri, says HADACOL really has put a stop to her neuritis pains. She was in a very bad condition with aches and pains and unable to sleep and was forced to give up her position as a practical nurse. She had severe pains in wrists and stiffness in her hips, being almost unable to walk. Now after taking one bottle of HADACOL, she is able to do her own housework. She most enthusiastically recommends HADACOL to all sufferers from neuritis pains.

Link Robinson (a steel worker for over 20 years), 519 Lindsey, Newport, Kentucky: "When your stomach is in bad shape as mine, couldn't eat, gas pains, stomach bloating and nervousness, then your body doesn't get the proper foods it needs. My boss told me about HADACOL and I started taking it immediately. After the second bottle I could tell a definite improvement. Now I can eat anything I want to. Best of all I haven't got those terrific gas pains and stomach bloating"

Floyd Mabe, 1401A South 7th Street, St. Louis, Missouri: "For some time after a wartime injury I had been troubled with neuritis pains in my legs and could not work. Nothing seemed to help me until I tried HADACOL. After taking a half bottle I seemed to feel better. My wife told me it was only my imagination, but I continued to take HADACOL and up to the present have taken 13 bottles. Now I feel fine with no more pains in my legs." (HADACOL is so effective because it relieves THE REAL CAUSE of neuritis aches when due to such deficiencies. Why don't you give HADACOL a chance to help you?)

Mrs. John Geary, 840 Ursuline Street, New Orleans, Louisiana: "I had such a nervous stomach I was unable to eat regularly. Lots of times I was unable to hold any food on my stomach. Then I heard about HADACOL. After the first few bottles I could tell a definite improvement. Now my stomach doesn't trouble me at all. I eat anything I want. HADACOL is wonderful. You can see that, if it did so much for me after suffering so." (A big improvement is often noticed within a few days' time. One of the many advantages of HADACOL is that continued use helps prevent such stomach distress from returning. Don't continue to suffer. Start taking HADACOL today!)

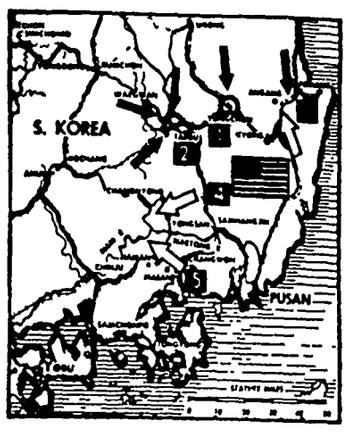
Assault Fails



Although Communist troops continued to apply pressure on the northern front near Yongchon (1) and in the vicinity of Pohang (3) their all-out offensive has stalled again. New attacks were reported in the area of Taegu (2). In the south U.N. troops made slight advances in the area of Changnyong and Yongsan (5).

CROP PROSPECTS:
In Line With Average

The department of agriculture predicted a harvest volume higher than in five of the past eight years and in any year prior to 1946. It forecast the volume at 125 per cent of the 1923-32 average.

Up until the latest report, a drop in farm production had been predicted all along the line. Now the department was reporting only cotton, peanuts, peaches, apricots, pecans, rye, and dry peas appear smaller than average.

Corn remained virtually unchanged at a bumper crop level despite unfavorable growing weather.

Wheat total climbed above the billion-bushel mark to 1,012,000,000 bushels. This was an increase of about 15 million bushels over the August 1 estimate.

Other crops for which production prospects improved included oats, barley, flaxseed, sorghum grain, hay, soybeans, potatoes, sweet potatoes, tobacco, sugar beets, hops, apples, pears and grapes.

Soybean and sugar-beet production was indicated at a record level.

The department said prospects indicated production of grains will provide amply for the nation's expanding livestock industry.

KOREA:
Situation Dangerous

Military observers reported the situation in Korea still dangerous, but not critical, with the entire front the quietest in a long time.

North of Taegu, U. N. and Communist troops engaged in a heavy artillery duel with the invaders building up their forces for a possible new offensive in that area.

At the east-coast end of the northern front, U. N. forces were striving to seal a trap around an estimated 3,000 Communists who had tried to surround the air base six miles southeast of Pohang.

On the southern front American troops recaptured a ridge from the Reds four miles south of the confluence of the Nam and Nakton rivers.

In the air, fighter planes of the Far East air force continued around-the-clock aerial assaults that hit a record of 670 sorties in one day.

But the big news from Korea was that nobody talked anymore of an American "Dunquerque". Predictions of early victory, however, were hard to find.

The period of optimism returned because U. N. forces smashed the Red's largest offensive, the 50,000-man attack on the southwest front toward Pusan which began September 1.

Other counter-attacking U. N. forces succeeded in closing the gap torn in the northeastern defense wall by a Communist break-through toward Yongchon, gateway to Taegu.

On the front itself the general opinion persisted that the U. N. troops in Korea were there to stay even though they might have to give up more bloody ground. Even the pessimists seemed to believe that.

Miss America

The nation, like a boy playing hooky from school, took time from the grind of mobilization, war and rising prices to name a new Miss America and chuckle while doing so with pleasure.

She is brown-haired Yolande Betbeze of Mobile, Ala. And for those who want the statistics she weighs 119, is 5 feet 5½, and has a 35-inch bust, 24-inch waist, and 35½-inch hips.

FOREIGN MINISTERS:
Important Discussions

The foreign ministers of Britain, France and the United States held talks in New York concerning the defense of western Germany in case of a Russian attack.

Early reports indicated the three —Ernest Bevin of Great Britain, Robert Schuman of France, and Dean Acheson of the United States —were in some agreement on the question of arming western German units.

Acheson had previously exchanged views with members of the congressional foreign relations committee. Those present at the meeting agreed unanimously to pledge support to the "general line which the secretary would follow"—evidently meaning the administration's aim at arming western Germany.

The three also appeared to be in agreement on President Truman's proposal to send more American troops to Europe as an important contribution to the common defense of the continent.

Schuman indicated that France was prepared to make comparable contributions and Great Britain was expected to contribute also.

Acheson in a statement shortly before the meetings began said that he was "confident that our frank discussions will result in agreement on practical conclusions which will contribute to preserving peace."

Schuman, however, ruled out the rebuilding of German armament factories. He said Germany could contribute raw materials and steel for the rearmament program and that France has sufficient factories for arms production.

Candidates

New York Gov. Thomas E. Dewey (right) and Lieut. Gov. Joseph E. Hanley, arrive at Saratoga Springs for the opening of the Republican state convention. Dewey seeks re-election as governor and Hanley seeks nomination for U.S. senate.

ACHESON:
West Can Hold Reds

Secretary of State Dean Acheson, in a major radio and television speech, asserted that modern weapons and ingenuity can build outnumbered western allies a defense that will stand firm against the hordes of communism.

Observers saw another important move in Acheson's radio talk. He warned the Chinese Communists against getting into the Korean war. "There is nothing in it for them," he said.

The secretary went on to explain that the Chinese Reds are "undoubtedly under heavy pressure from the Communist movement to get into this Korean row."

In these remarks observers saw one of the major tasks the state department has set for itself. An all-out effort to keep the Chinese from giving the North Koreans aid in their fight against U.N. forces. The department is undoubtedly making every effort to discourage the Chinese from sending troops into Korea.

Acheson also hit at reports of a defensive war, calling such talk dangerous and "immoral."

"I think we must put our major effort at the present moment," he said, "into creating strong North Atlantic defense forces. If we have those forces—united, balanced, collective forces—strong, well equipped, able and ready to deter aggression, then problems all over the world take on a different shape."

CONTROL BILL:
Curbs Consumer Credit

President Truman signed the economic controls bill which imposed general consumer credit curbs in an anti-inflation move that makes it harder to buy automobiles, television sets and many other everyday items. The new regulations went into effect September 18.

Government officials said the action was aimed at heading off a dollar-down-and-dollar-a-week credit splurge that had pushed installment credit buying to a record high of $20,340 million as of July 21.

The new regulations require one-third down on automobiles and limits payment of the balance to 21 months. Purchasers of household appliances, such as TV sets and refrigerators, will have to pay 15 per cent and complete their payments within 18 months, according to the new law.

Furniture and rug purchases call for 10 per cent down and 18 months to pay, while home repairs, alterations and improvements can be handled for 10 per cent down and 30 months to pay, instead of the present 36 months.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND
DREW PEARSON

Tobey Election Target

AT a recent cocktail party, a tall, handsome guest with a slight drawl and polished manner, stepped up to Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine.

"We are really going to get that colleague of yours from New Hampshire," he said. "When the Republican primary is over your friend Tobey isn't going to know what hit him." And he went on to tell at some length about his plans to defeat Tobey.

Senator Smith's friend was Roger Whiteford, a top Washington attorney; while the senator to whom he referred was GOP veteran Charles Tobey, now fighting for his life in the New Hampshire primaries.

Behind this cocktail conversation was something which is axiomatic in politics—namely, "Your friends may forget you at election time, but your enemies never."

This axiom, incidentally, is having important impact on the make-up and caliber of the United States senate.

In this particular instance, it happened that, 10 long years ago, Senator Tobey called Roger Whiteford before the senate interstate commerce committee and subjected him to a grueling cross-examination regarding payoffs made by the giant Radio Corporation of America to call off an antitrust case against RCA, the National Broadcasting Company and affiliates.

Hoover Says 'No'

Whiteford was then a Washington attorney for the radio corporation, and thanks to Senator Tobey's grueling cross-examination, it was disclosed that RCA had hired GOP Sen. George Moses of New Hampshire to squelch the case. But Herbert Hoover, then President, flatly refused to favor the radio corporation, and so did William D. Mitchell, his attorney general.

Whereupon the radio corporation hired Sen. Dan Hastings of Delaware, a member of the executive committee of the Republican national committee, who was paid a fee of $7,500, of which, according to the testimony, $2,500 was passed on to the clerk of the U.S. district court in Wilmington, Del. That fixed the antitrust case.

The clerk induced Judge John P. Nields, appointed to the bench through Senator Hastings, to postpone the antitrust suit, following which the justice department finally let RCA off with a consent decree.

The evidence was truly shocking. It showed that one of the nation's most influential corporations had resorted to political fixing and bribery to get an antitrust case called off. And had it not been for the persistent sleuthing of Senator Tobey, the facts probably would still be buried.

Now, 10 years later, it appears from Roger Whiteford's conversation with Senator Smith that the chickens hatched by Senator Tobey's fearless perseverance are coming home to roost. For the opposition against him in the New Hampshire primary is such that he may lose.

Similar Battle in Utah

Tobey's opposition is similar to that which has lined up against other courageous senators this year. In Utah, for instance, the national association of manufacturers has helped nominate its ex-president in opposition to Sen. Elbert Thomas, and may defeat him. Thomas, as chairman of the senate labor committee, drafted the repeal of the Taft-Hartley act and went all-out for labor. Now big business is retaliating against an enemy while labor is slow in going to bat for a friend.

Similar forces were lined up against senators Claude Pepper in Florida and Frank Graham in North Carolina—two men who had the courage to fight for the Negro and for labor. And whether you agree with either of these senators, even their enemies have to admit that it takes courage to champion the Negro in Florida and North Carolina. Both senators were defeated in this year's primaries.

New Hampshire's Tobey now appears to be next on the list. And again, whether you agree with Tobey or not, his enemies also have to admit that he has courage.

He was, for instance, the one Republican who led the fight against confirmation of Truman's close pal, big oilman Ed Pauley, to be undersecretary of the navy at a time when Truman was at the peak of his popularity. Most Republicans did not relish bucking him.

Tobey also stood up against one of the most powerful industrial concerns in his home state, Textron, which owns some 20 textile mills in New England. Staging one of its biggest operations in Tobey's biggest voting area, Manchester, Textron had powerful friends, and the probe was not popular.

As a result of his courageous fight, however, it was discovered that the family of Textron's president, Royal Little, had made heavy personal profits that should have gone to the stockholders.

Long Overdue

The following correspondence is said to have taken place between a merchant and one of his customers:

"Sir, your account has been standing for two years. I must have it settled immediately."

Answer:

"Sir, things usually do settle by standing. I regret that my account is an exception. If it has been standing too long, suppose you let it run a little."

Household Hints

Care of Paint Brush

If your paint job will last several days, don't clean your brush at the end of each day. Wrap it tightly in aluminum foil. It will remain pliable for several days, ready to use upon nwrapping. Do clean your brush well at the end of the job, however.

Color of Beets

Canned beets keep their red color better if you add one tablespoon of vinegar to each quart.

Handy Hairpin

A new hairpin works fine to hook the pits in cherries and pull them out.

New Insecticide

An ideal insecticide for use on vegetables is now an accomplished fact. Called CPR, it contains rotenone, synthetic pyrethrum and a chemical which irritates and stirs up insects. It will be on the market for use in gardens this year under various trade names. Although designed for vegetables. it is just as effective against most pests of flowers.

With chromium-plated copper pans, there's no need to beware of bare spots. You will have to keep after them diligently with steel wool and scouring powder every time the vessel is used, though, because the bare spots will stain easily.

When the inside of an enameled pot becomes chipped, it's not safe to use because the bare spot may rust and further chipping may cause particles of enamel—a form of glass—to contaminate food cooked in the pot.

The magician's wife knew he was up to his old tricks because she discovered a hare on his shoulder.

Auxiliary Will Hold Food Sale

The ladies of the Klemme Legion Auxiliary will hold a Food Sale on Saturday afternoon, October 7, starting at 2:30 p. m. in Wellemeyer's Store.

Let these ladies do your baking for you that day. Nothing will be sold before 2:30 p. m.

The following story is the 2nd of a series on the Stromer Kennels and Pony Stables. The story and pictures are through the courtesy of the Mason City Globe Gazette.

It was dinner time for the younger generation when the pictures at the right was taken of Valere Stromer, 5-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Verner Stromer, Klemme, was soberly observing the colt's dinner manners.

In the eyes of most children Valere would appear to be a pretty lucky young man. The colt's mother, a Shetland mare named Mitsie, is his to ride and claim as his own. Valere is a regular little horseman it is evidenced by the picture at left. He probably has as much time logged in the saddle as any boy of his age in North Iowa.

Shetland ponies have been plentiful on the Stromer farm ever since Valere was born Stromer purchased the first pony for the oldest son, Byron, 10 years ago. Now there are 23 head of Shetlands in the Stromer stables.

But dogs are even more plentful on the Stromer farm. Between 200 and 300 English Shepherd and Toy terrier puppies are produced and sold annually at a minimum price of $16 to $18 each.

Dog and pony raising started as a hobby on the Stromer farm. but now it has developed into a business which requires almost as much time as the operation of the farm. In fact. Stromer is building a tenant house on his farm. He plans to employ a man to do the farm work and devote his own time to his ponies and dogs.

This issue of FARM tells the story of the Stromer family—a family that has found pleasure and profit in development of hobbies. The members of the family like to work with livestock and pets. And they've learned how to make the most of farm living by devoting time to their primary interests.

There are 3 children in the Stromer family, all boys. Byron, 15, is a sophomore at Garner nigh school. He has done most of the farm work on the 240-acre Stromer farm this year while his father cared for the dogs and ponies.

Val, 10, is a 6th grader in the Klemme school. He is the stable boy. It's his job to see that the ponies get feed, water and grooming And Valere is pictured with the pony.

Plans were then made for a roller skating party to be held sometime in October. Mrs. Earl Anderson was then chosen to be our subject matter club leader for this coming year.

Judy Wetterling gave an illustrated talk on, "Group Furniture for Pleasing Appearance," and Mrs. Svaeri, our county nurse, talked to us on the health examination sheets. A demonstration was then given by Barbara Hughes on "Removal of Old Varnish."

It was then decided that the next meeting would be held on October 21 at the home of Luarel and Sharon Helvick. Lunch was served by Frances and her mother.

Your Storage Facilities !

WHAT HAVE YOU FOR YOUR 1950 SOYBEANS?

CONSIDER THIS:

1.—Terminal storage facilities and many elevators will be filled with government storage.

2.—This means that you should prepare to store your own 1950 soybean crop if this is at all possible.

3.—There will also likely be a severe shortage of rail cars for shipping.

4.—These factors will combine to tend toward a severe cut in the price of beans delivered to the market at harvest time.

5.—The history of the soybean price of the last few years is that it has paid big dividends to those who stored their beans. This condition is likely to be repeated.

We urge that farmers seek now to provide necessary storage on the farm. We can furnish you with steel bins if you order now.

NOTICE: If your soybean fields have corn in them, clear out the corn before the bean harvest . . soybeans containing shelled corn will be severely discounted and may even not be accepted.

A PENNY IN A FUSE SOCKET IS DANGEROUS

A penny in a fuse socket can set the house afire, the Rural Electrification Administration of the U. S. Department of Agriculture warns. Many people still are unaware of the danger of overheating wire by replacing a burned-out fuse with a penny. For example, the Iowa Extension Service found in a recent survey that pennies have been used to "fix" fuses in 106 out of 443 farm homes.

The fuse is a protection. When it "blows," it warns that wires are overloaded, that is, more electricity is being carried than the circuit can handle safely. The trouble may be using too many appliances on one circuit, or some defect in an appliance, a cord or the wiring. The burning out of the fuse cuts off the current, thus avoiding fires from overheated hidden wires.

If a penny replaces the fuse, the cause of the trouble is not corrected. The circuit still is overloaded, and the wires may become so hot that their insulation may begin to smolder. Overloaded wires have smoldered inside house walls for some days before they have been discovered. Fires in the night or when families are away often have been traced to such a start.

Every home should have extra fuses of the right size conveniently near the service box where they can be ready if a fuse blows. To prevent trouble, wiring should be inspected and approved by a qualified inspector and then reinspected every few years.

The homemaker as well as her husband should be familiar with the size of wires and fuses recommended for the home The National Code now recommends No. 12 wire for general home wiring for lights and small appliances rather than the No. 14 wire used in the past. No. 12 is large enough for most electric appliances except the heavier items like range, water heater and clothes drier. These take special outlets and circuits

The right size fuse protects the wire. For light circuits, a 15 ampere fuse is recommended. Appliance circuits take a 20-ampere fuse. This information will be stamped on the metal at the bottom of the fuse.

Alligators cannot swallow unless completely submerged.

It's That "Slim Look" For— COATS AND SUITS

Racksful of colorful, rich-looking coats and suits will comfort you this fall. Checking quality of workmanship and materials is just as important as finding the right color and style.

If you are planning to buy a new coat or suit this fall you will find that slim-looking styles, lovely fabrics and enchanting colors are the keynote of 1950 fall and winter fashions.

In coats, the style will range all the way from loose-fitting coat which hangs close to the figure to the new diagonal-line mode with its wrap-around look. The well-known chesterfield style and the belt-across-the-back coat are both returning to the retail market in increasing numbers.

Popular Styles

Perhaps the most popular version, from the standpoint of the Iowa homemaker, will be the loose-fitting, slim-style garment with its conservative appearance accented by the interesting collar, or the cut of sleeves or pockets, says Lucille Rea, extension clothing specialist, Iowa State College. The chesterfield coat and the belted coat are also becoming to many figures and will fit easily into the average wardrobe.

The diagonal-line coat is more difficult for the average person to wear. It calls for slim-fitting dresses which are also more high-style than many women will prefer to wear.

In suits, the effect is also one of slimness. Straight, slim skirts will be coupled (1) with the long-line fitted jacket and its low-cut neckline with revers, (2) the slim, buttoned-up "mannish" style jacket, or (3) the hip-length, wrap-around jacket with its bell effect and raglan sleeves.

The younger woman usually has little dificulty choosing a style which is most attractive on her. For the older woman, the longer-line suit or the suit with the jacket which is approximately wrist-length may be most becoming.

In color and in fabric, this year's coats and suits are going to meet everyone's approval, Miss Rea predicts. Coat fabrics include the ever-popular broadcloths, the new velvety surfaced wollens and worsteds, rich-looking tweeds, and winter flannel—a newcomer in the coat field. Emphasis is on the napped or unusual surface of the fabrics.

Variety Of Fabrics

Suit fabrics include flannels, hair blended worsteds, gabardines, velvet (for dress up), smooth and curly faced tweeds, and lightweight fancy woolens made up from yarn-dyed and cross-dyed mixtures.

Grays, from charcoal to slate to oxford to very light, are "big" color news for suit and coat fabrics this year. Many subtle pastels—colors not ordinarily associated with winter coats—are appearing. These include the purples from lilac to amethyst; blues in the Delft blue group, and buffs in the dull gold and yellowy russet class. Homemakers, many of whom have stuck by the proverbial black or brown, will find these new soft tones beautiful.

Oranges—from the rich vibrant color to the burnt tone—are due in monotones, mixtures and plaids in suits and coats. And to make the color range even more promising, dark blues (almost a slate color) and spicy browns are good.

Good buymanship, Miss Rea points out, includes more than getting style, color and fit. It includes getting quality, and price may not be the best indication. A wise shopper, she adds, will look for information labels which will give her definite facts about the materials and the workmanship in the coat she considers.

Meeting At Algona

The Tenth Annual meeting of the Algona District Woman's Society of Christian Service will be held on Thursday morning and afternoon at the Algona Church. The morning session is scheduled for 9:30.

Moving At Goodell

There was some moving at Goodell over the week when the Orville Mahn family moved to Roland where they purchased a cafe. The Kenneth Bollers purchased the Mahn property and moved in from the Mrs. Agnes Ahrenkiel house. Merlin Lowenberg moved to the Ahrenkiel property vacated by the Bollers.

Senator Bourke Hickenlooper Will Speak At Garner, Sat.

Senator Bourke Hickenlooper will make a brief appearance at a noon luncheon at Garner Saturday. The Republican County Chairman, Clint Daniels of Garner, has made arrangements for the luncheon and a limited number of tickets are available.

A proportionate number of tickets for Klemme and vicinity have been set aside and may be procured at the Times Office.

OBSERVING RULES WILL PREVENT TIMBER FIRES

Squirrel hunters, nut gatherers and picnickers will soon be enjoying the fall beauty of Iowa's 2¼ million acres of timber land. But a few of them will turn some of this beauty into charred cinders..

Man is the cause of 98 percent of Iowa's timber fires. And all of these can be prevented, says R. B. Campbell, extension forester at Iowa State College. It's just a matter of remembering some of the fire precaution rules that were taught in elementary schools.

Scrape away leaves and debris from 3 to 4 feet around the picnic fire area. Someone should always be near a fire and put it out completely before leaving. Be sure there's no heat left in cigarettes, cigars, "pipeheels" or matches when they are thrown away. Burn brush and leaves on cool, moist days when fires won't spread so easily.

Here's what can happen if these simple rules are ignored. young seedling trees are destroyed by fire. Then there's no new crop to replenish the woodlot or forest.

Fires destroy nesting and hiding places for wildlife. This means poorer hunting in years to come.

Even small trash fires damage old trees by injuring the protective bark covering. This lets in disease and insects.

When leaves, brush and grass are destroyed, the soil is left wide open for erosion. Then there's no organic matter left to build up the soil. And most of the water from snow and rains will end up in the streams instead of in the subsoil where it will do some good.

1,725 MINKS ON GOODELL FARM

Many visitors are attracted to the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Schmalle, of Goodell, to see their mink. Last spring they had 300 females and 60 males of various kinds.

They now have 1,725 which are full grown. It is planned to pelt them in November when the fur is longer.

Mr. and Mrs. Schmalle and their hired man take care of the mink. It takes them about two hours in the morning and the same in the evening to water and feed them. They will do their own pelting.

Mr. Schmalle started in the mink raising in 1913 with two females and one male. He and a man in Anthon are the two longest in this business in the United States. They have a large locker on their farm for the meat which they grind and mix with a meal for feeding. The farm is two miles southeast of Goodell.

SURE IT'S IN THE PAPER!

You often hear that "If the Editor gets into a jam, it won't be in the paper."

Well, that's where you have another guess coming The Editor, R. A. Jorgenson and Jim Tabb were on their way to Corwith Monday evening, with the Editor driving his Pontiac. In meeting an approaching car near Dave Scawichtenbergs farm southwest of Klemme, the Editor got too close to the edge of the road and the front wheel of the car dropped onto loose gravel and shoulder of the grade made soft by the recent rains. The car was headed for an 8-ft. ditch on a percarious slant that if continued would surely roll the car over A hard pull on the wheel headed the car straight for the ditch and everybody landed right side up' The Hancock County Coop Oil Station wrecker fished us out

It's Enrollment Time—

BE A 4-H GIRL

There's never a dull moment for Iowa's 4-H club girls in their project work. October is 4-H enrollment month for Iowa young people.

She's 10 or 12 or a teen-ager, this 4-H club girl you know. If you ask her how to refinish furniture, just as surely as not she will roll up her sleeves and show you how it's done. She knows about color selection to make her room prettier, and how to solve puzzling problems of furniture arrangement.

She's good at sewing, too, and has all the latest sewing methods at her fingertips. She knows how to plan her wardrobe, to be thrifty, to care for her clothes, and how to be her most attractive.

Ask her to plan a meal for her family or for company, and she can take over in the kitchen without hesitation. Making nourishing meals and serving them attractively are among her talents as a 4-H miss.

Enrollment Grows

This month she, and 20,000 more of her sisterhood, will reenroll in 4-H club work. And one of the first things they will do is to invite other girls of their age to club meetings so these girls may also come to know what 4-H club work is all about.

She will look to her 4-H club for fun, friendship and friendly rivalry in her project work. And you as her parents will encourage her to do her best, for you know that this is a fine way to awaken her interest in her home, her community and her country.

Last year 20,420 4-H club girls made up the membership in 1,306 local clubs. More than 3,600 volunteer leaders, most of them homemakers, willingly gave their time to conduct the teaching in home furnishing projects. The girls set some impressive records too. They canned more than 279,700 qts. of fruit and fruit juices, 274,100 quarts of vegetables and 31,700 quarts of meats and fish. They froze more than 213,000 pounds of fruits, 320,000 pounds of vegetables, and 818,000 pounds of meat and fish. And they planned, prepared and served more than 182,000 meals for their families.

More Records

They made more than 26,000 new garments for themselves, and made or repaired 35,000 more. They made out clothing budgets, studied the selection of clothing from the standpoint of color and design, and learned buying practices.

To make their own homes more attractive they made or refinished more than 13,700 articles of household furnishings, and remodeled or improved 2,900 desks, storage center and dressing tables. They learned how too paper or paint their walls, and how to fix up the woodwork and the floors.

And along with all this activity, they took part in home and community safety programs, contributed money and gifts to community Red Cross, cancer and tuberculosis funds, and other worthwhile projects.

"This year, as in the past few years, 4-H club girls are making citizenship an even greater part of their club program," said Esther Whetstone, state leader of girls' club work, Iowa State College. "Just as they have demonstrated their ability to 'make the best better' in their club projects, so will they prove their ability, as young citizens, to contribute to world peace."

1950 A SILO YEAR

Paul Henderson, county extension director, made an observation on the 1950 growing season this year that might give farmers something to think about in regard to the often-debated question of whether or not to have a silo.

This is one of those seasons when it has been nice to have a silo on the farm, Henderson said. Rain, which came when farmers were struggling to get the first cutting of hay put up, left a heavy toll on hay quality. Some hay hardly was worth putting up after it had laid in the windrow for a week or two with several rains on it. Grass silage saved the crop for some farmers in the county. How, Jack Frost has left his mark on much of the corn and sorghum in county and again the farmers with silos feel lucky they have them.

Henderson said that whether corn dries out enough to store safely or not, a silo is a good place to put a lot of it to make sure that it will be good feed On some soils, pit and trench silos work satisfactorily. That kind of a low-cost silo is a possibility yet this fall

Corn silage or grass and legume silage are about as good a roughage feed for cattle as anything in the winter. Particularly is this true for dairy cows. Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station tests show that a dairy cow can get along with an all-silage roughage ration without any hay at all if price and feed supply relationships favor it. The cows will crave a little dry hay but can get along without it without any affect on performance.

For the farmer who didn't have a silo this year and wished he had, suggests planning now for the year ahead. There have been other years much like this one and he said there is no doubt but what there'll be more of them.

Frosted sorghum and sudan can be made into silage that is safe to feed. Most authorities agree that this type of silage is safe, but they say it should be left in the silo for some time and then fed as late as possible in the feeding program.

Dr. Tice Building New Barn

Dr. C. B. Tice of Mason City is having a large new barn built on his farm just south of Klemme where Henry Boland lives. Tile blocks are used for the first 8 feet, with frame above. Last year Dr. Tice had a new machine shed built on his farm.

According to all indications we are all approaching the same condition we were in some time ago. Right now it is not good policy to dispose of any farm machine unless you have something in your possession that will take its place. Recent government orders are that war production orders to factorys have absolute priority and steel was short before this was put into effect. If you are going to need any machinery next Spring, order it now. Even so, we can not guarantee delivery, but your choices will be better.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Policy Largely Based on Theory Expressed in U.S. Constitution

This is the third of a series of six articles on the state department and its personnel as written by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.

PHILLIP C. JESSUP
AMBASSADOR-AT-LARGE

Born in New York, N. Y., January 5, 1897, son of Henry Wynans and Mary Hay Stotesbury; received his A.B. 1919, Hamilton college; LL.B 1924, Yale University; M.A. 1925, Ph.D. 1927, Columbia university. Married Lois Walcott Kellog, July 23, 1921; one son, Philip C. Associated with Columbia university as lecturer in international law 1925-27, assistant professor 1927-29, associate professor 1929-35, professor 1935-46, Hamilton Fish professor of international law and diplomacy since 1946. Joined staff of Department of State in 1943. Appointed ambassador-at-large March, 1949, for special assignments in connection with negotiations with other governments as well as with international meetings where an experienced representative of high rank is required.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The foreign policy of the United States government is based largely upon the theory of government as expressed in our own constitution and declaration of independence.

Someone once said: "The United States was born fighting for freedom and will die if it ever gives up the fight for freedom and liberty."

But at the same time it was Grover Cleveland, in reversing his stand upon a given subject, who said: "Gentlemen, we are faced with a condition, not a theory."

And so theoretically, although the foreign policy of this government during the Roosevelt area was predicated upon his "four freedoms," and, since the Truman administration, has been based upon the pronouncements of Harry S. Truman, conditions often cause an about-face in our short range policy, but do not change the overall objectives.

The American citizen has only to go back to the inaugural address of President Truman on January 20, 1949, to learn our stated foreign policy. Here it is:

"In the coming years our program for peace and freedom will emphasize four major courses of action.

"First. We will continue to give unfaltering support to the United Nations and related agencies and we will continue our search for ways to strengthen their authority and increase their effectiveness.

"Second. We will continue our program for world economic recovery.

"Third. We will strengthen freedom-loving nations against the dangers of aggression.

"Fourth. We must embark on a bold new program for making the benefits of our scientific advances and industrial progress available for the improvement and growth of underdeveloped areas."

THAT IS THE whole theory of our foreign policy. But conditions have intervened. In World War II our principal allies were the United Kingdom, Russia, China and France. Both England and France have been hard hit, all but knocked out economically. Both are on the road to recovery with our help. The Nationalist government of China is now virtually in exile on Formosa. Russia adopted a course to conquer the world through the infiltration of atheistic communism, through deceit, fraud and open aggression in Korea.

Our foreign policy and our efforts toward the freedom loving peoples of the world now have become world wide as the only strong nation powerful enough to withstand the Russian bear. We have sought common security in the North Atlantic pact. We have held Japan.

The American people in the past have not been internationally minded. When we have been drawn into armed conflict it has been our policy to knock out our opponent and then consider the job done, go home, break training and enjoy ourselves. As a result, that explains the wisecrack that the United States has never lost a war nor won a peace. We have been loath to engage in the political battles which inevitably and probably more importantly follow military victories.

In Korea our policy was set by the United Nations. We occupied that unhappy country south of the 38th parallel long enough to set up a free and independent government. Then we withdrew our army of occupation as per our commitment and promise.

Our specific foreign policy in this hemisphere and in other nations will be discussed in a later article.

THE FICTION CORNER

DILEMMA

By Richard H. Wilkinson

AS USUAL Basil came home on the 5:35. It was after dark when he arrived in front of his house on High street. About to turn in at the gate he stopped dead still, his eyes fastened on the automobile that was parked in front of the water hydrant at the curb. A slow but rapidly mounting anger took hold of him.

3-Minute Fiction

The automobile was his, and he knew that his wife had left it in front of the hydrant. She had left it there despite his repeated warnings and threats and cajolings and promises. Three times Pat Kearney, the officer on their beat, had spoken to him about the misdemeanor. "Now, Mr. Valentine, sur, I'll be stickin' a tag on that car of yourn, if you go an leave it before that hydrant once more."

Pat's good will was valuable. Besides, Basil couldn't afford to be tagged. Even a small fine would be sorely felt. And so he had talked to Evelyn. He had pointed out the importance of obeying traffic regulations, his inability to pay fines for her negligence, the fact that Pat had spoken to him three times. And she had promised. Even though it was the "most convenient place in the world to leave the car" and she thought Pat Kearney was an "old meany," she promised to be more careful hereafter.

An idea flashed across his mind. He'd move the car down town and install it in a garage. Then he'd tell Evelyn that Pat had tagged it and that because he couldn't pay the fine he'd left the machine at police headquarters for collateral. That ought to teach her a thing or two.

He felt on the ground, found a fair sized stone and without hesitation crashed it against the window.

Grimly he stepped to the curb and inserted his duplicate key into the door lock. His anger was at a high level; he gave the key a violent twist—which snapped it off near the stem.

He felt a little panicky. Somehow he'd have to move the machine from in front of the hydrant, or it meant paying a fine. It would take time to fetch a pair of pliers or call a garage mechanic. And Pat wouldn't listen to explanations—not after the third warning.

BASIL began to sweat. There was just one course open. He'd have to break a window, reach in and unlock the door from the inside, release the handbrake and push the vehicle beyond the forbidden parking area. He hated to resort to such a procedure, because in the end it would cost him more than a fine. Still, that was better than having Pat Kearney's ire aroused.

He felt on the ground, found a fair sized stone and without hesitation crashed it against the window. The glass splintered, but didn't break. He smacked it again and there was a great shattering inside.

Basil worked fast. He released the handbrake, quickly disembarked and ran around back. He put his shoulder against the spare tire and began to shove. The car moved slowly.

Digging his heels into the ground Basil continued to heave with his shoulder. Thus it was that his gaze came into direct line with the license plate beneath the tail light. At first he noticed nothing unusual, but gradually it dawned on him that something was wrong. And then abruptly it struck him like a bolt from the blue. The license plate wasn't red and white, but orange and black! Which meant that the car that Basil was pushing wasn't his car at all! Though it resembled his in every respect, it belonged to some one else!

Basil straightened up. There was alarm and guilt and fear in his eyes. Without further thought on the matter, however, he started toward his own gate. But at the very moment he would have unhooked the latch, he heard a shout. Some one had come out of Mark Terrence's house and was racing toward him, and on the heel of this some one came Pat Kearney.

Lace Negligee, Little Lie Make Dying Woman Happy

By BILLY ROSE

The other day I got the following letter from a lady who is convalescing in a Montreal hospital:

Dear Mr. Rose:

Three weeks ago I was operated on for a leg infection, and since then I've been taking it easy, a little too sick to leave the hospital and a little too well to keep from having the fidgets. Consequently, I've been something of a busybody, wandering around rooms and corridors and passing the time of day with other patients. During my wheelchair travels I happened to come across a story which you might like to use in your column.

It has to do with a black lace negligee that I got for Christmas a couple of years ago—one of those lovely bits of peek-a-boo that every woman adores. Unfortunately, however, I'm more the pajama type, and so ever since I got it it's been packed away in a bureau drawer.

Billy Rose

When I was rushed to the hospital last month, my sister stuffed everything that looked like bed-apparel into a valise and brought it around to my room, and sure enough, on top was the negligee. And sure enough again, it went right back into a bureau, this time a white one.

RECENTLY, HOWEVER, I finally got to use the negligee, and the way it happened was like this. A few doors down the corridor from me there was a Mrs. Benoise who was suffering from a disease with a long Latin name that I can't even remember, but what it amounted to was a creeping paralysis which had started at her toes, worked its way up to her abdomen and was steadily moving toward the heart. And as if that weren't enough trouble, shortly after the woman had checked into the hospital her husband had been badly hurt in an auto crash—he had driven his car head-on into a truck which was parked without lights.

Last week when the paralysis got up to within inches of Mrs. Benoise's heart the doctors decided to let the couple see each other for that would probably be the last time. I was in Mrs. Benoise's room when they told her about the visit, but instead of popping her up it seemed to make her more miserable than ever. When I asked her what was the matter, she said it was probably silly but she knew she looked a sight and she hated for her husband to see her in hospital clothes with her hair and face not fixed.

I had a talk with the nurse, and with the permission of the doctor we brushed back Mrs. Benoise's hair and put some make-up on her face, and for a final touch I got out my black lace negligee and slit it up the back so we could put it on her without having to move her around. And I'm not exaggerating when I say that when the dying woman saw herself in a mirror she looked happy for the first time in weeks.

OF COURSE, we all skedaddled when her husband was wheeled in, his head bandaged and most of his body in a cast. And a couple of hours later the doctor came and told me that Mrs. Benoise wanted to thank me for the use of the negligee. Well, she could hardly talk, she was that excited. Her husband, it seemed, had complimented her on how lovely she looked and told her that as soon as he got out of the hospital he was going to buy her a dozen negligees like the one she was wearing. And just before they wheeled him out he promised her that he would be around the next morning, and asked her to please wear the negligee again.

He didn't get back, however, because that night Mrs. Benoise died, and everything considered I guess it was just as well.

Yesterday, when the doctor came in to see me, we got to talking about Mrs. Benoise.

"I'm glad I finally found some use for that silly negligee," I said. "At least Mr. Benoise will always remember how pretty his wife looked the last time he saw her."

"I hate to disappoint you," the doctor said, "but Mr. Benoise couldn't see her. He lost his sight in that car smash-up, and before I brought him into his wife's room I carefully briefed him on her make-up and how she looked in your negligee."

Anyway, that's the way it happened, Mr. Rose, and perhaps if you shuffle the facts around a bit it might make a story.

Sincerely,
Charlotte Ferguson.

RALPH EDWARDS, who now is back at CBS, where he began as an announcer, unexpectedly had the time of his life in Paris and London this summer. During his "Truth or Consequences" vacation he had arranged to take his staff to Germany to entertain the American troops there. He and Mrs. Edwards were on the high seas when the Korean situation broke; arriving in London, they learned that the trip was off. So they settled down to have fun. The only thing that spoiled it for him was that his staff had been so disappointed. Seen in New York on his way home, Ralph was bubbling with enthusiasm over the trip, and over getting back to work.

The bobby soxers who followed John Derek to various location sites for "The Hero" were hired as rooters for the football scenes; they discovered Derek playing football for the picture at Pomona College, tagged along when he went to the Rose Bowl. They were so enthusiastic that Director David Miller and Producer Buddy Adler thought it a waste of talent not to hire them.

Two Truman Victories

THE 81st CONGRESS has passed into the congressional limbo, or some nether region where all congresses, good or bad, go when they die. And when the 82nd congress convenes next January many of the members of this congress will be left back in the hustings. Some already have dropped by the wayside as a result of primary action, but others will go by the boards as a result of the November elections.

But whatever may be said of the 81st congress, no one can call it a "rubber-stamp" congress. No one can call it a "Fair Deal" congress, for when it staggered to the close of its regular business any similarity of its record to the fair deal program was only coincidental.

But the closing days brought to President Truman victory on two subjects about which he had been harping practically ever since he assumed the presidency in 1945. One was to increase taxes, not decrease them, and the other was stand-by controls of prices and allocations of materials. He had abandoned hope of ever getting either until the North Korean Reds struck across the 38th parallel. Then both increased taxes and stand-by controls authority beyond that ever given any other president were practically forced upon him.

This congress has attempted, as other congresses have before it, to invade all the fields of government. It attempted to nullify decisions of the United States supreme court in the tideland oil bills and in the basing point measures. It attempted to set administrative policies in the executive department by withholding or adding appropriations; it attempted to invade the field of foreign affairs in trying to mandate the President to make a $62,000,000 loan to Franco's Fascist Spain.

While the President was failing to make much headway with the fair deal program he did stop short two quarterback sneaks through the weak side of the line with the presidential veto. One was the Kerr bill which would have added millions to the price of natural gas and the other was the basing point bill.

GOP Will Claim Credit

One Fair Deal piece of legislation went through sailing. That was the extension of the social security program to include about 10,000,000 more persons and increasing the benefits all along the line. The Republicans, however will claim that was a bi-partisan program since such legislation was also advocated in the GOP platform.

The President also was able to get 20 out of 27 reorganization plans through the congress and enacted into law aimed at streamlining governmental agencies and reducing costs. These too will be considered bi-partisan, since they were approved and advocated by the Hoover Commission for Reorganization of the government and the GOP will claim equal credit.

Other victories for the President were acceptance of his Point Four program, Atlantic pact, military assistance program, extension of the Marshall plan. But again the GOP will claim equal credit since foreign policy is supposed to be a bi-partisan policy. But Guy Gabrielson, the GOP national chairman, says our foreign policy is bi-partisan only in Europe where it has worked fairly well. It is not bi-partisan in Asia, he says, where we are having our troubles.

690 Laws Enacted

So far, out of more than 690 public laws enacted by this congress, about one out of five pertain to veterans, their dependents or the Veterans' administration. This segment of the nation's population now totals more than 19 million and these veterans of all wars won improved programs in housing and rent control, education and training, compensation for disabled veterans and social security credit for the time in uniform. The President vetoed one bill passed by both houses by overwhelming majorities to give pay raises of $100 for each year of service to postal employees who are veterans. It would have meant a pay raise of $163,000,000. Reasons given for veto by the President were: increases would go to persons who were not in postal service prior to their military service; would discriminate against servicemen in other departments; is not a veterans bill since it applied to only 100,000 out of 15 million World War II veterans, and it would increase the postal deficit.

CED Upholds Truman

The Committee for Economic Development, composed of business men and industrialists, farmers and laborers and whose research and policy committee is unbiased, unprejudiced and non-political and economically sound, in a recent release virtually upheld President Truman's stand that all-out controls are not needed at this time, but should be ready to slap on when the occasion demands.

SURPLUS TO SHORTAGE

U. S. Farm Labor-Production Picture Has New Perspective

For the past decade the labor requirements in agriculture in the United States have declined sharply, but during these years farm production has increased. The situation, however, now takes on a new perspective. Farm production this year will not be greater than in 1949 and in some instances, considerably lower. The demand for farm products continues on the same level and, because of the Korean war, likely to increase. For the first time in years the agricultural picture takes on the aspect of shortages instead of surpluses.

A survey by the National Industrial Conference Board of New York reports a continuance of the trend which has been evident for months. June farm employment was 650,000 behind last June's total. Various special factors may change the figure somewhat as the year goes on. But the fact of a generally lower level of employment will not change. This can be said because the farm mechanization of recent years is paying off in a major reduction of the farmer's labor bill.

American farms are producing 20 per cent more than in 1940, with 23 per cent less labor. So far in 1950, farms have employed over 700,000 fewer persons than in 1949—and in 1949 there were about half a million fewer agricultural jobs than in 1945. All in all, farm employment has declined by more than 2 million since 1940, the bureau of census estimates. In the decade from 1930 to 1940 there was very little change in agricultural jobs.

Three Year Record

Technological displacement of farm workers is as old a story as the industrial revolution itself. The present stage owes some of its scope to the tremendous boom in machine buying that accompanied peak incomes after the war.

Almost one half of all tractors now on farms have been bought in the past three years. Annual purchases are now about three times the volume of 1945. Last year, farmers spent $860 million for tractors compared with $309 million in 1945, and $231 million in 1940.

There are more than 3.8 million tractors in use on American farms today, as compared with 1.5 million in 1940. However, older and worn-out models have been replaced with modern tractors which can be used with many more machines and for more light-duty jobs. Each tractor in 1947 was used about 20 per cent more hours a year than in 1940.

In dollar value, tractors in use on farms now are worth about five times the value of all tractors in use in 1940—the gain reflecting the increase in prices as well as in numbers. The value of all other farm machinery has risen about the same amount since 1940, suggesting a growth in use almost equal to that of tractors.

Such other machinery, moreover, is 2.5 times as important in value as all tractors. Combines, pickup hay balers, disc harrows and many other machines attest to the growing mechanization of farm operations today.

Back in 1940 only 34 per cent of farms were electrified; by 1945 the proportion had leaped to 50 per cent; and today it is nearly 90 per cent. Kilowatt-hour sales to farms have been more than doubled in the past five years, reflecting the even more spectacular growth in use of electrical equipment.

Worker Output Up

In addition to mechanization, farm output per worker has been boosted by other technological changes. Using of fertilizer now runs double what it did in 1940. Over 80 per cent of all corn acreage today is planted to the higher-yielding hybrid seed, compared with about one third in 1940. Striking gains have also been made in animal breeding practices and in chemical pest killers.

A combination of factors has helped to accelerate the drop in farm employment so sharply this year. Since 1940, the annual rate of decline in farm employment has been 1.9 per cent, or about 200,000 workers. This has accelerated in the past couple of years. At the same time, farm output in general is expected to fall this year, instead of rise, as it did during most of the preceding decade.

Planted acreage this year is off about 4 per cent from 1949 for two reasons. Acreage allotments for corn, cotton, and wheat were reduced by the department of agriculture as part of the price-support program—and, furthermore, spring planting weather was unfavorable. Since last year's harvest weather was especially favorable, the total crop output this year, it is estimated, will run even more sharply below 1949 totals.

As a result, total farm ouput may be off as much as five per cent from 1949, despite gains in milk, meat, and other livestock production.

Surpluses to Shortages

As for this year's harvests and next year's goals, the Korean situation—together with poor growing weather — already has turned the agricultural atmosphere from surplus to shortage.

For instance, cotton—which has the sharpest turn from shortage to surplus in recent years—is off through the biggest reversal in although total supplies are more than ample for today's needs. The new crop is being estimated around 10 million bales or less, lowing the official government port that poor spring weather ited plantings to only 19 acres. Twenty-eight million were planted last year and acreage allotment for this was over 22 million. Domestic this past crop year, plus ran close to 14 million bales.

So the cotton carry-which rose from two bales three years ago million bales today, may rapidly again in the year. In contrast, when the war started, surpluses of thirties had built up as 12 million bales by And during the last war, nual use of cotton ran 11 million or 12 million —about equal to output.

Wheat supply is some 40 per above estimated demand; even so, output goals for been boosted. The new crop mated at around 950 million els—about equal to that of some 200 million bushels and 400 million below the war year. The new crop ances current use and exports. But during the war, consumption went almost billion bushels a year, when wheat was used for industrial cohol and livestock feeding.

Corn harvests this year estimated at 3,175 million els, off about 200 million 1949, largely because farmers ignored federal age allotments. Prospective output for other feeds—oats, barley, sorghums—pared favorably with 1949 umes. Even so, livestock sumption of feed grains run a bit above that crop put and close to 1949 levels feed stocks are apt to shrink bit in the next year.

Grain consumption by is higher now than just before last war, as is dairy, meat poultry production. There are hogs and cattle on farms. tion of livestock products however, is somewhat lower in the war peaks.

Unknown Factors

Total food production—of livestock products comprises largest part—likewise is lower than at the war peak; some of current output has been piling up in government piles, notably butter and eggs. ulation has increased 14 per since 1940, and exports and tary use take more of our food at that time. So on a per basis, consumption is only per cent since 1941.

Food and farm output plies can be expanded again of emergency—but perhaps readily as between 1940 and For one thing, some major surpluses are slightly smaller portionate to current consumption and needs, now than they were 1940. For another, cropland expanded by 3 per cent between 1940 and 1944; and that is about maximum margin available following the 4 per cent shrinkage this year from last.

There is no way to control this recurring. Poor weather in 1947, can of course yields. Livestock output can be expanded by increased grain production, drawing on grain surpluses, expanding livestock population temporarily, and then slaughtering surplus meat animals—the cycle of 1942-1944.

In the end, in case of war, size of domestic food supplies civilians may depend more what food burdens might develop other lands.

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

By JIM RHODY

Pass The Hens

"The only real duck factory on earth is the hen duck."

This is a slogan advanced by an 80-year-old California sportsman who is carrying on a one-man campaign aimed at educating hunters to pass up hen ducks and to bring only drakes to bag, the Wildlife Management Institute reports.

H. H. McCumber of 2321 Highbury Avenue, Los Angeles, who recently placed his gun in the rack for the last time after more than 60 years of wildfowling, believes that both hunters and the ducks will benefit from the selective type of shooting which he suggests. In these days of reduced bags, the sportsman, on a good flight day, might fill his limit within the opening hour. By following the advice of Mr. McCumber, his shooting day could be lengthened proportionately.

Biologically, with most of the popular waterfowl species in which the sex of individual birds may be distinguished on the wing, the idea makes sense. H. Albert Hochbaum in his prize-winning "The Canvasback on a Prairie Marsh," an intensive study of breeding waterfowl in Canada, observes that during the later days of the season, drakes on some marshes may outnumber hens by as many as twelve or more to one. Similar observations have been made by other competent biologists. Since ducks pair off in a fifty-fifty sex ratio at mating time, a large number of drakes contribute little to the next fall's hunting crop. Although research workers believe that some extra drakes may be necessary to insure successful renesting if first attempts by the hens are unsuccessful, a disproportionate number of drakes, in some species, seem to be unproductive. As a readily recognized surplus they may be harvested selectively without cutting appreciably into the breeding stock.

To paraphrase Mr. McCumber's philosophy: It is possible, by passing up the hens, to save the ducks and hunt them, too.

Why Camouflage Works

Perk Angwin, New England outdoor writer, contributes a bit of prose for possible use by his brother craftsmen, as follows:

"A number of fishermen have asked us why we favor camouflaged lines and leaders as against natural ones. It seems that some "experts" tell 'em that the natural leaders show less from the angle a fish sees 'em. Where any fishing editor could get such an idea is a mystery. How often does a fish take a fly or lure from directly underneath where he sees the line or leader against the sky? Doggone seldom.

"A fish hits from all angles, from the sides and above as well as below on sunken flies and lures. He doesn't always see a dry fly against the sky background. More often it is the case that the leader is in line with trees or brush. The camouflage types break up against this background and the fish are less apt to shy off.

"In a recent fishing contest in Maine we had a good example of what happens. Using a Cam-O-Flage monofil line for trolling, we took salmon after salmon. A companion in the same boat used the conventional blue line and a clear leader. He got pretzels. We could switch implements and the fish still hit the lure attached to the camouflage and ignored the other. It was evident they were seeing the leader and the line since everything else, including the depth fished, was equal.

"By all means use camouflaged lines and leaders when you can get them."

Works Sometimes

It is the natural inclination of a fisherman to desert immediately any pool invaded by swimmers and to shy away from water frequented by swimmers. But, sometimes, as is the case in many exceptions, fish can be taken from pools where swimmers actually are cavorting.

We have in mind an incident where an angler came upon a pool where swimmers were active, but the opposite shoreline looked so inviting that he couldn't resist tossing a plug under an overhanging branch.

The plug had hardly alighted when he was fast to a smallmouth bass that later weighed in at slightly more than two pounds. This isn't an urging for anglers to fish swimming waters, it's just trotted out for whatever it may contribute to the unpredictable habits of bass.

Pop-Eyed Catfish

A Mr. S. Bellmon, 228 North Pearl St., Albany, N.Y., was fishing for catfish in the Hudson river at the Port of Albany. Hudson river catfish resemble bullheads, but have a forked tail. Their eyes are usually small, but what Mr. Bellmon pulled in looked more like a frog than a catfish—it had eyes as big as a nickel. Although possibly blind from this abnormality, the fish didn't seem to mind, as it was in excellent condition.

Giving Yourself

Lesson for October 8, 1950

"WHEN a girl throws herself away on a man, she generally takes pretty careful aim."

That may be so; but more than a few persons throw themselves clean away without taking aim at all. They amble through life, they do not march. They have no personal five-year plans, not even five-week plans. They stumble from one day to the next, they live from hand to mouth. They care for nobody and few care for them. They may be found on Skid Row, living from one handout to another, or they may be found in the Silver Spoon Club, with plenty of money but no idea how to spend it and hardly enough energy to waste it.

Dr. Foreman

A Man Gives Himself

MOST people, however, do give themselves to something. Every man who amounts to something, gives himself in one way or another. There was a college student once who practiced nineteen hours a day on the piccolo, it was said. Naturally he couldn't stay in college at that rate, so they got rid of him. But he landed, as you might expect, in one of America's finest orchestras.

If you want to succeed in music, give yourself to music. If you want to succeed in a law course, give yourself to your books. Men usually give themselves to what they think is of greatest value. Some give themselves; that is to say, they devote themselves to their own comfort and happiness.

That is cheap and selfish, of course, but there is a kind of transferred selfishness which is almost as common: giving oneself to one's family to the exclusion of everything and every one else. A good man will love his family, a good mother her children; but there is a kind of ingrown family affection and mother-love which is blind to community needs.

Down the River

THERE are bad ways of giving oneself. A prophet once said of King Ahab, he sold himself to do evil. That is still done Some give themselves up to liquor and gambling

There have been quite selfless and tireless advocates of atheism, and communism, and fascism, and bad religions of all varieties. Men have worn themselves thin in the service of Hitler and of other tyrants.

If the energy and persistence, for example, which is spent in trying to prevent the humane use of unwanted animals in medical research, were spent in intelligent support of preventive medicine, how much better the world would be!

Say Yes to Christ

SO the question is not so much, Shall I give my life? The question is, To what? To whom? For three months these Bible studies consider "Growth in Christian Living." All growth starts at some point; and Christian growth starts at the point where the Christian gives himself to Christ and his cause.

Consider what "commitment to Christ" means. It is not sentimental devotion to his memory, it is not singing songs about him or to him. (Not that such songs are wrong!) It is not following a historical character, though Jesus was and is a real person. It is saying "Yes" to Jesus Christ. It is giving one's highest devotion, one's first loyalty to the Son of God.

It is devotion to the living Christ, ever-present; to the One whose reign is destined to be over all. It is devotion to Christ's cause; to his Kingdom, his control, his way of life. It means growing into his mind; it means becoming more and more like him, wanting to be like him, till at last Paul's words come true again: "For me, to live is Christ."

You Get More than You Give

IT IS a mistake to think that if one gives his life to Christ, then he cannot give his life to anything else. The astonishing truth is, when a person first gives himself to Christ, he finds that Christ gives back far more. Christians can be, and are, devoted scholars and business men and mothers and doctors and farmers. The more truly one is committed to Christ, the better he is likely to be at his job, whatever it is.

NEW PAMPHLET ON CORN PICKER ADJUSTMENT AVAILABLE

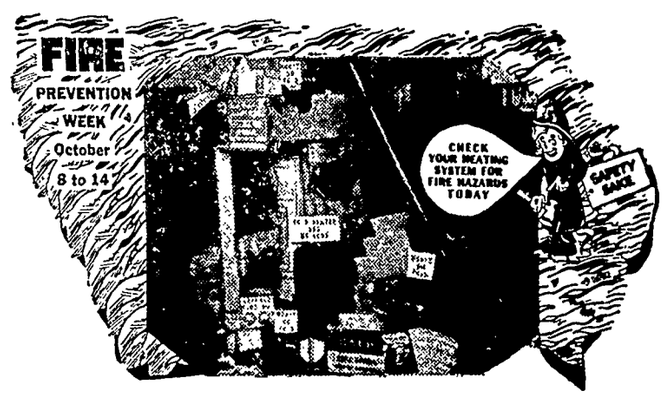
A new Iowa State College Pafphlet, "Adjusting the Corn Picker," is available at the extension office in Garner.

County Extension Director, Paul Henderson says it contains a lot of practical information on how a farmer can reduce corn harvest losses which varied all the way from 2 to 25 percent in unofficial class studies made by the Agricultural Engineering Department of Iowa State College in 1948 and 1949.

The bulletin prepared by the extension agricultural engineer, Dale Hull covers timing of gathering chains, adjustment of slip clutches, snapping roller adjustments, adjustments that can be made on the husking bed and how to estimate field losses. It includes a simple guide for adjusting the snapping rollers to fit varying field conditions.

In a section on analyzing husking difficulties, the pamphlet points out five conditions that may cause excessive shelling: (1) Snapping rollers improperly spaced; usually too far apart, (2) husking rollers worn so smooth that passage of the stalk is slowed down at the time the ear is snapped, resuling in the ear being held against the snapping rollers too long, (3) snapping rollers speed too fast or too slow, (4) driving too fast in heavy corn and failing to keep the machine on the row, and (5) too many lugs or set screws used with damp or normal husking conditions.

Henderson says that careless driving and failure in keeping the machine on the row probably is the greatest cause of picker losses. Those factors also cause pickers to plug.



This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Soon another Iowa winter will be upon us. That means your heating system will have to be in order—ready to provide the warm comfort you'll want all winter.

But a furnace can be a dangerous fire hazard, too. Defective heating plants are the third most common cause of fires. That's why the fall and winter seasons always bring an increase in home fires. And that's why it's so important to check your heating system now for hazardous defects.

Clean up around your furnace; get rid of rags, waste paper and other things that catch fire. Always put ashes in a metal container, covered with a metal lid. Keep the furnace area free of dust and cobwebs.

Call your furnece service man. Have him make a detailed check of your heating system—the furnace, smake pipe, heating pipe, and other possible danger points. Have him make any needed repairs.

Then ask for a complete inspection of your home by your local fire department. Do it now—during National Fire Prevention Week.

Remember, a furnace check-up this week may save you the grief and loss of a disastrous fire this winter.

THERE'S A TURKEY FOR EACH FAMILY THIS YEAR

The nation's growing and processing turkey industry will have at least one turkey for every American family this year.

Turkey producers are raising 6 percent more turkeys than they did last year and 1 percent more than the previous record output in 1945, according to Francis Kutish, Iowa State College extension farm economist.

Cold storage holdings of turkeys are nearly double those of last year and are above the 5-year average.

Kutish said that if farmers follow through on their Sept. intentions, 65 percent of the turkey crops will be off to market before the end of November with 28 percent coming along in December and January or later.

PICKING CORN THAT IS TO WET RISKY

Will Dry Ten Times As Fast In Field As Crib

Farmers with soft corn who don't have artificial drying equipment can save much of it that would spoil if they will just leave it in the field until it's dry enough to store and then observe a few points when picking. This is the suggestion of C. H. Van Vlack, extension agricultural engineer of Iowa State College.

He points out that corn on the stalk will dry a lot faster than it will in the crib. One good drying day in the field is worth 10 in the crib.

Check Moisture

Corn is not safe to crib until the moisture content is less than 20 to 25 percent. Even then a farmer has to be careful with it, either feeding it early or moving it if carried over to warm weather, Van Vlack points out.

He thinks farmers are better off to leave 25 to 30 percent moisture corn in the field until spring if necessary than to put it into the crib. If cribbed, that kind of corn is likely to spoil except in very cold weather.

Keep It Clean

Crib ventilators, plans for which are available at county extension offices, will speed up drying in the crib. Clean corn will dry faster than corn picked dirty, so Van Vlack suggests equipping the picker with a fan to blow out husks, silk and chaff. For the same reason the elevator should be equpped with a screen to keep out shelled corn and dirt when cribbing. Since the elevator screen won't take out all of the shelled corn and some will shell when cribbing, move the elevator spout often when filling a crib.

Other points suggested by Van Vlack are these: Pick the most mature sections of a field first, leaving soft corn to dry in the field. Sort corn to keep soft ears out of the crib. Stay out of the field when husks and silks are wet from frost, snow or rain.

BEST GARDENS USUALLY THOSE FALL-PLOWED

It's the gardens that have been fall- plowed that usually take the lead in vegetable production the following year, says Mason Reger, Iowa State College extension horticulturist.

That's provided the soil is moist enough to roll over smoothly without forming big clods, Reger says. Fall plowing covers old plants, some of which may be diseased, and it leaves the ground surface clean. This refuse will start to decay in the fall and act as a fertilizer the following spring.

When trash is plowed under in the spring, it requires bacteria for the breakdown. These bacteria use the nitrogen needed for the new plants. So a nitrogen deficiency often results while old plants are starting to decay under ground Reger explains.
